It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

CRITICAL ESTIMATE

OF THE

GENIUS AND POETICAL WORKS OF JOHN MILTON.

WE have already traced Milton's history. The history of his fame is equally curious and interesting, although it may be told in much briefer compass. Foreign countries heard of his name while it was yet obscure in his own land. His progress through Italy was a procession of triumph, while in Britain his merits were known only to his personal friends. Returned to London, he subsided into a schoolmaster; nor did his works, for some time, dispel the mists which seemed to have gathered, early and dark, around his destiny. It was infamy which first made him famous in England—the infamy of advocating and acting on a new and heterodox theory of divorce, and it was his personal misery which drove him to support this obnoxious doctrine. So that thus Milton's, like man's, greatness had its root in his grief, if not partly also in his fault, and he served to exemplify the statement long afterwards made by another poet—

“Most wretched men
Are cradled into poetry by wrong,
They learn in suffering what they teach in song.”

Milton, the elegant scholar, was permitted to battle on with his nephews as he best could; but Milton, the “divorcist,” awoke one morning and found himself (in) “famous.” To this equivocal reputation, his summons to appear before Parliament, for his literary misdemeanours, contributed; and it assumed a hue of richer darkness, when the "divorcist" sublimated into the defender of regicide, and dared to apologise for what Cromwell dared to do. Then, unquestionably, Milton's reputation culminated, although his fame was yet following it haud passibus æquis. To literary England and Europe he seemed little better than a fierce, discontented scholar, whom disappointed personal passions, and soured pride, had driven to support indefensible measures and theories, by sophistry, declamation, and outrageous abuse, disguised all in noble Latin. Then, ere he had time to right himself by appearing more fully in his poetic character, came the Restoration, and his extensive, though uneasy and unsettled, repute went out like a shooting star for a season. With difficulty did even the great orb of Paradise Lost labour up against the obscurity which supervened, especially as it was a "darkness mingled with blood." Such poetry from a regicide was not expected, and, when it came, was looked at with suspicion, and deemed a daring monstrosity like the killing of Charles himself. In spite of suspicion and prejudice, however, the book made its way, and many who hated Milton the Republican and Divorcist, were compelled, perhaps with pale cheeks and gnashing teeth, to surrender their admiration to Milton the Poet. Then came the great man's death, and this, for a time, seemed to exert no perceptible influence upon his fame. The prejudice against his name, and the admiration of his poetry, continued to struggle with each other; nor did even the long and elaborate encomium of Addison fully turn the balance. Indeed, we see the vibration of opinion nowhere so fully as in Johnson's Life, and in some of the notes of Thomas Warton. It was not till the prevalence of liberal opinions, at the end of the 18th century, had taught men not only to bear with, but to believe many of Milton's political sentiments, as well as to admire his genius, that the full tide of his glory set in, and that we may conceive the first smile of satisfaction beginning to break across the look of serene expectancy worn by his Mighty Shade.

It is, perhaps, ever thus in the world's conduct to men of

lofty genius. At first they are treated as composites, and subjected to severe and varied analysis—their creeds, personal failings, and the painful incidents of their story, are considered apart from their genius, and judged of according to arbitrary and conventional standards. At this stage men say, "What a pity Milton was a Republican, Dante on bad terms with Gemma, Burns born a peasant, and Keats bred an apothecary's boy! what different men and poets might they have become had it been otherwise!" But, by and by, the sublime unity of their Being becomes apparent, and we feel that (always excepting their voluntary vices) the position, circumstances, and callings of men of genius, are precisely what, for the development of their minds, the fulfilment of their mission, and the full impression of their full nature, they should have been. Milton, had he not been art and part in Regicide, would not have been competent to write Paradise Lost, or Samson Agonistes. Dante's unhappy marriage added the necessary acid and edge to his character, and fitted him to heat seven times hotter the furnace of his Hell. Burns' brawny nature took root and vigour from the homely soil where it appeared. Keats' confinement in London aided him, when he did see the country, to form those fresh, deep, lingering impressions of Nature, which, in general, childhood only is able to feel, and which no poetry but his has fully expressed. Genius always appears in its own dress, whether sorry or splendid, and the wise will be ready to accept both the wearer and the vesture.

Now, we need not be afraid or ashamed to say, that we like Milton better for his Republicanism, and see in it, not a derogation from, but an expression of, his grand and peculiar genius. He was, indeed, that rarest of all beings—a Republican King. Endowed himself with a royal nature, and feeling himself the first of living men, he yet contended for the equality of mankind, and the sovereignty of nations. "Susceptible," says Emerson, "as Burke to the attractions of historical prescription, of royalty, of chivalry, of an ancient Church installed in cathedrals and illustrated by old martyrdoms, he threw himself, the flower of elegance, on the side of the reeking conventicle—the side of humanity unlearned and unadorned." This (although we question the propriety of the terms "reeking and unlearned," applied to churches where Owen, Howe, Charnock, and many of similar accomplishments ministered) is the truth. He left the "House called Beautiful," its beauty having, indeed, to his eyes, somewhat abated, for the conflict with Apollyon in the Valley of Humiliation. It was not that he became a hater of the elegant and artistic, but that he became aware of a severer elegance, a sterner art, a higher beauty, connected with Conflict, Liberty, and Truth, and felt that to stoop is often to conquer, and that there are eyes to which a descent like that from Comus to Samson Agonistes seems a step in Jacob's ladder upwards. His deepening zeal in politics and religion was faithfully paralleled by his advancement in genuine poetic power.

Before speaking farther of Milton's own genius, we have a few words to say about his critics. A motley collection, verily they are! Addison comes first, in that very long and loving analysis of the Poet's principal work, which, poor and artificial as it now seems, did good at the time, and served as a plain finger-post quietly pointing up to the stupendous sublimities of the subject. Its criticism is cramped, but its spirit is fine, and the extracts it gives are, in general, selected on the principle that they are characteristic, and can stand alone. Johnson's critique seems the short-hand outline of a whole volume of admiration and hatred, respect and scorn, the materials of which had been collecting in his breast for a lifetime, and in its sour concentration lies much of its power. Whole articles have been written, to answer some of its separate dicta, or abate the force of some of its single sneers! Most of those who have replied to it, have weakened their cause by towering into a passion, and calling the old Polyphemus harsh names. But mere foam, although able to cover up for a short time, is not able to quench and obliterate any colossal injustice. Sir Egerton Brydges, and Percival Stockdale, make violent but ineffectual attempts at reprisals. More ludicrous is the aspect of the Wartons, who wrote ere Johnson's critical authority was lessened, and who just dare to peep out of their holes, and to mutter words of Lilliputian protest against this enormity of the "Man Mountain." Todd, et hoc omne genus, who were still more decidedly legitimists than the Wartons, are, between their love of Milton and their sympathy with Johnson's political faith, placed in even a more lamentable plight. Coleridge and Foster first—echoed afterwards by Channing and Macaulay—took the true method in their rejoinder to Johnson. They pled from his bar to a higher—they said, Coram haud judice. They proceeded not to depreciate Johnson, but to distinguish him from the subject of his criticism. They stated—especially Channing—the broad and deep differences between Johnson's strong, coarse mind, and the ethereal ardour, attitude, and habit of Milton, and asked the unanswerable question, How could two such minds sympathise; and might not, probably, Milton's criticism on Johnson have been as worthless as Johnson's on Milton? Of the Wartons, Todd, &c., otherwise, it were useless to speak at large. Joseph and Thomas Warton, men of limited depth, but of refined taste, appreciated the beautiful in Milton's soul rather than the sublime—they themselves minor men, they wrote best about his minor poems. To Todd's devotion to him, we owe the admirable edition we have. Bishop Newton did "Tom's best," as Johnson would have said about him, although his criticism is often contemptible. The accomplished Sir Egerton Brydges came forth with chivalric zeal to encounter Johnson, and loud was the flourish of trumpets which announced his entrance on the lists, and sharp and clear the stroke of challenge he struck upon the Achillean shield; but whether from age, or weakness, or excess of desire to do what his power did not permit him to do, he reeled in the saddle, and dropped down helpless. With the best of causes, and the warmest enthusiasm for it, he is but a weak defender of Milton. Very different is our estimate of Channing's noble panegyric. Its great charm lies in the calm possession and command of an unanswerable argument; he knows the strength of his case too well to put himself to trouble and travail in maintaining it—he simply and clearly states it, and the statement is the proof. Channing's nature and creed, too, eminently fitted him to be the panegyrist of Milton. It is a Republican commending a Republican—a man of cultured classical taste, worshipping a Modern Greek—a man of seraphic spirituality, glorifying a more exalted specimen of the same race—a man who combined high moral qualities with certain heterodox sentiments, illustrating the character of a still sublimer Heretic. Possessed of less moral sympathy with Milton, Macaulay brought to the subject a richer scholarship, a more brilliant diction, and the fervour of a heart then in the “dew of its youth,” and palpitating with an enthusiasm of which he seems now somewhat ashamed. Latterly, Landor, Emerson, De Quincey, Professor Wilson, David Masson, and others, have scattered pearls of praise, and supplied splendid fragments of criticism.

Perhaps three words will go farther than long elaborate definition and discussion in expressing the genius of Milton—and these are Wholeness, Sublimity, and Simplicity. How much lies in that plain strong word “Whole!” Completeness, harmony, health, and purity are all included in the term. Milton was not a bright fragment, with yawning edges and fluctuating lustre,—he was in a minor sense a “Whole One.” Gifted originally with all natural capacities,—the Reasoning and the Imaginative, the Creative and the Mechanical, the Mathematical and the Musical—he gave them the highest culture possible in his age; he sustained and inspirited their operations by the exercise and careful management of a fine bodily constitution; and he baptized them in the streams of Divine Truth and of Gospel Morality—in

Hard by the oracle of God.”

The result was, not a giant or monster of mingled power and weakness, wisdom and folly, such as we find in a Julius Cæsar, a Mirabeau, a Voltaire, or a Napoleon, but a thoroughly furnished, and compactly-built man—with strength and symmetry equal to each other—with head and heart bound together by the band of worship,—truly what Cæsar was falsely called, “the foremost man in all this world,”—only, shall we say, “a little lower than the angels,” or than those surpassing mortals, who, in the days of the past, met with angels, or saw the Great I AM himself, and became their similitudes on earth, and their oracles to men. And what if this Whole

One did feel himself a stranger and pilgrim,—did look wistfully to the far-off heavens,—did wear supernal scorn at times upon his lip, and say, “I do well to be angry even unto death”?—it was the necessity of his nature, and one of the few things which proved him not to be divine.

This wholeness accounts for the multiformity and consecration of his genius. He is, contrary to common opinion, a many-sided man, as perhaps all men of the loftiest genius must be. His works include specimens of the epic, the drama, the pastoral, the ode, the elegy, the sonnet, the masque, the song, the epistle, the satire, the argument, the history, the theological treatise, the grammar, and the dictionary. His versatility and his vastness taken together, astonish you, and make you think of the “mountains leaping like lambs,” in the great scriptural figure. Shakspeare, Goethe, Scott, and others, in their manifold transformations, seem often to sink their idiosyncrasy,—when personating small fools or villains visible only through their villany, they can become small as they; when, in the exercise of their demoniac gift, they enter into swine, they sometimes become swine themselves, and this thorough identification with others is partly a power and partly a weakness and blemish. Another class of writers, such as Johnson, and even Wordsworth, may attempt to change their voice and shift their position, but in vain—their little fishes talk like whales,—their speech bewrayeth them,—they cannot but utter their sturdy Shibboleth, and their efforts to personate others are as abortive as they are clumsy and violent. Milton, on the other hand, may be in this point compared to his own Satan, who, even when transformed into a serpent in Eden, was a splendid one;—

——— “His head
Crested aloft, and carbuncle his eyes;
With burnish’d neck of verdant gold, erect
Amidst his circling spires, that on the grass
Floated redundant: pleasing was his shape
And lovely;”—

who, when changed into a cherub, became—

“Such as in his face
Youth smil’d celestial, and to every limb
Suitable grace diffus’d;”— and who, when in hell compelled to resume the serpent shape, it was—“ Still greatest he the midst,

Now dragon grown, larger than whom the sun
Engender'd in the Pythian vale.”

Like Atlas, wherever Milton is, the burden of the rolling heavens is on his shoulders.

The consecration of Milton's mind, too, sprang greatly from the large wholeness of his being. It is into fragmentary minds, especially into minds where there is some great deficiency, some gap as hopeless as it is wide,—into minds deficient, like Hume's, in imagination, or like Rousseau's, in common sense, or like Voltaire's, in reverence, or like Shelley's, in balance, that fiendish doubts as to the Divine origin and purpose of the universe are apt to insinuate themselves. Le Sage speaks of one Diable Boiteux, but in reality all the fiends are lame; and it is partly because they are so, that they are fiends. In proportion to the general power of a mind is ever its intense perception of any vital deficiency in itself; and this perception often leads, not to humility, but to that pride and discontent which are the soul of irreligion or Atheism. Those, on the other hand, who approach to entireness of intellect, present in their soul a rounded mirror calculated to reflect fully not only literature and nature, but that near, yet far off, ever present and never visible, One, who filleth immensity,—and such a soul was Milton's. Sometimes troubled but never turbid; sometimes shadowed, but never sullen; sometimes cold, but never frozen; sometimes heated, but never glaring—the broad lake of his genius faithfully gives back the awful countenance of his Father and God.

It is marvellous how thoroughly in Milton the “Consecration” and the “Poet's Dream” are attuned and reconciled. His dreams are always holy dreams, as though he were slumbering with his own angels in the vales of heaven, or at the foot of the Brightness had made invisible.”

“ Flaming Mount whose top

The revel of his fancy is always under severe restraint, and when his genius at times does dance, it is a measured and mystic dance, like that of the seraphim around the sacred hill.

His use of the Pagan Mythology has often been objected to him as inconsistent with his reverence for the true Belief and the Book of God. But he never introduces the heathen gods except as tributaries and captives. His Dagon falls down before Jehovah; he has preserved in his poetry as in a vast museum, not a temple, the images of the fallen deities with the word "idols" labelled on them,—objects not of belief or reverence, but of curiosity or poetic interest.

We have called him elsewhere a belated bard of the Bible. In austere loftiness, thick imagery, holy calm, holier fury, and magnitude of purpose, he bears them a striking resemblance. His differentia—apart from the peculiar inspiration which appertained to them—lies in greater unity and artistic consciousness. There is a cant in the criticism of this day about poetic unity, and certain critics have even gone the length of denying that one, however many poetic elements he possesses, can be an absolute poet, without this. That this is absurd, will appear when we remember—1st, that the poems which are really artistic wholes are very few—can, in fact, be counted on one's fingers; when we remember, 2dly, that many noble poems, such as Young's Night Thoughts, Thomson's Seasons, and Bailey's Festus, do not possess unity; and when, to clench this argument, we remember, 3dly, that the highest poetry confessedly ever poured from the deep heart of man—that, namely, of the Hebrews—is fragmentary. What unity is there in the Psalms, or in those other fiery lyrics which are sprinkled through the books of the Old Testament? What band, save the band of individual genius, binds together the glorious minstrelsy of Isaiah, the pathetic strains of Jeremiah, or the mystic dreams of Ezekiel? In Job, indeed, there are a story and a plot; but they are very simple—they display scarcely any art, and the poetic power of the poem is in the gorgeousness of its separate passages. But Milton has striven after unity, and is one of the very few poets who have attained it. And this certainly has added a solid monumental, if also a somewhat artificial, character to his works. The productions of the Bible bards are the "trees of God, full of sap, and planted by his hand," although scattered and single; those of Milton stand up like a cathedral of man's handiwork, built to, not by, God, but forming a shapely and symmetrical whole.

Milton's sublimity has become proverbial. His natural element is the great. He may love the beautiful, but the sublime loves him. He walks at ease on heights "where angels bashful look," and descends, with equal calm and boldness, amidst depths into which other souls dare only timidly peer. How perfectly at home he is in that wondrous hell of his which he has cut out from Chaos, and wrapped in devouring fires; in Chaos itself, through whose wild and world-shaking uproar, "the womb of nature and perhaps her grave," the ship of his genius moves on in triumphant security; on Niphates mount, looking down on half the world, and up to that ardent angel standing in the sun; on the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north, beside the throne and chariot of the Apostate; or over the surge of the primeval deep, as the Spirit is moving its subsiding waters, and the Son is taking the golden compasses from God's eternal store,—or near the Brightness of the Father's glory, as He comes forth with whirlwind noise to chase his hapless enemies over the battlements of heaven! Never for a moment on the giddiest of these giddy heights, or in the sablest of these dark imaginative depths, does he reel, or blench, or tremble, display weakness, or indicate terror. Girt, sandalled, white robed, "in privilege of virtue," he becomes free of the universe, and is safe in hell as an angel of light would be,—can stand on the crystal battlements or in the heart of the sun, with the dignity of a "Watcher," and enter the heaven of heavens with the immunity of a "Holy One." The only instance in which he seems to fail, is in the conversations which he records between God and the Son,—but here he was hampered, not so much by the profundity of his reverence for both, as by the uncertainty of his views as to the relation they bore each other. He seems to have ceased being a Trinitarian, but had not fully become an Arian at the time he wrote Paradise Lost; and hence in those parts of the poem an awkwardness of manner—a stiffness of phraseology—a timidity of feeling—an eagerness to confine himself to the ipsissima verba of Scripture, and thus, while his dialogues of devils are most eloquent, varied, and powerful, his dialogues of Deity are exceedingly prosaic and dull.

The sublime element which was in Milton, condensed most fully and culminated in the idea of Satan. As this is probably the grandest character in the whole world of Poetry, it is proper to analyse it at some little length. It seems Milton's intention to represent the "Progress" of a Pilgrim from the Celestial City to that of utter and deepening Destruction, and that he may effect this on a broader scale, he chooses a canvas of unearthly magnitude and identifies his Pilgrim with a fallen Angelic Nature. Like great sculptors, he must work out his thought on colossal materials. He means to give the history of Individual Will, perverted, and placed in deadly antagonism with General Will, that is, with the Will of God; and to this perverted Will he must link a form and person the loftiest and most potent of which the imagination can conceive, a person too, of the reality of whose existence the Bible had informed him. He finds this proud and terrible shape in Satan, the arch-angel, who, according to Holy Writ, had fallen from heaven, nor had fallen alone, but had carried the third part of its "Stars" along with him. Having accepted the hint and outline from Scripture, he proceeds in accordance with his own idea to fill it up. On Satan he lavishes every power but omnipotence and every gift but goodness. He has might that could wield the elements; fury, that could tear them in sunder; wisdom only less than divine, and the deficiency in which seems supplied by a subtle and far-reaching craft; courage that yields only to fall back into the arms of resolute despair; pride and ambition pointing upwards to the throne of the universe as their goal and prize; fidelity to his followers, and capacity of enduring personal suffering, equalled only by hatred to all that oppose his path, by regret for happiness gone from him, and by savage envy at the happiness enjoyed by others; remorse and revenge, haughtiness and horror, fearlessness and anguished prospect struggling in one tempestuous yet determined breast. This mighty moral anomaly, Milton incarnates in a figure reflecting at once its powers and its mis-proportions, wearing on his brow a celestial crown blasted, and a reflection of heaven's glory obscured, with eyes like sun-smitten tarns, the chiaroscuro of which hell's flames are not able to dim, but which "blaze and sparkle" above the billows of the lake of fire ; an Atlantean stature, measured by "roods" of hell, as it had been originally by reaches and altitudes of glory ; a brow trenched with thunder ; a cheek "faded" like a cloud on which the day has ceased to shine ; a body naked, save when flames are its clothing, or when shield and sword seem to spring up around ; and a mien, lofty, lonely, contemptuous, and defiant, fitting the Titanic spear which guides his uneasy but unshrinking steps over the burning marle, and the words which, like mutterings of thunder, or the fierce groans of earthquake, come forth from his mouth—

"Evil, be thou my Good !"

"What matter WHERE, if I be still the same ?"

Such is Satan, as Milton shews him in the opening of his Poem. But such he had not always been, nor was always to remain. He had been once a pure and exalted Being, next to the Father and the Son themselves, till in an evil hour he allowed ambition to mount what seemed only the single step between him and absolute Dominion—as there seems but a single step between the summit of the mountain and the Sun—to enter his soul. Then his real fall commenced ; for in the train of ambition came pride, hatred, envy, rebellion, and such carnal passion as spirits can feel, and his expulsion from Heaven was only the inevitable consequence of his sin. In Pandemonium his virtue is lost, his power is limited, his glory is shaded, but his courage, magnanimity, and daring are increased. He is lashed by the flames into fiercer rage, and his unequalled and unenvied possession of the burning Throne of Hell inflates his pride. He determines on a last great effort to regain at least a portion of his original power—if inferior to the task of dethroning God, he shall yet try to blast one of God's favourite works. But from the moment that he determines to seek to involve an unknown and unwitting race of beings in his own ruin, a new shade of darkness falls upon his character, and from the Foe of God and the rebel chief of Angels he sinks into the Tempter of Man. He drops, as it were, the weapons of Heaven he had turned against their giver ; he will not even use the black fire and infernal thunder suggested by Moloch, but adopts, instead, the smaller and subtler engines of craft: for, although he has his armour with him on his journey, it is for defence, not assault; and although his progress through Chaos is sublime, the end which he seeks is mean, and begins to mar that dignity of despair which forsook him not, even when prostrate on the burning lake. He is now the Tempter in embryo, but ere he becomes the Tempter in act, his better nature must re-assert itself in the form of remorse upon the top of Niphates Mount. There the sight of the Sun, once his footstool, sends a flood of agony over his soul, and even one small whisper of hope, through penitence, crosses his mind, but no! it is too late:—the earth, his prey, is in sight, he must fulfil his destiny, and, as he wheels down from Niphates to Eden, you feel that a lower deep has opened on his lowest—that he has become irretrievably the Tempter and the Devil. Evil is now his Good. His damnation has darkened into a deeper hue, a hue indeed so deep that it can only be increased by success, and that success begins speedily to be his. Often afterwards does he seek to rally against his down-bearing doom,—once at the sight of the blissful pair in Eden; again, more proudly and characteristically, when he starts up in his own shape of defiance from the ear of Eve; and again, on the very verge of the Fall of Man. But it is vain; the current sweeps him on to a mean triumph, and to that mighty degradation which follows it, and comes to a climax (so far as the Paradise Lost is concerned) in the “dismal universal hiss” he meets when he returns to the throne of Hell.

In Paradise Regained we see the Pilgrimage still going on. The Fiend has indeed been permitted to evade Hell and to become the “Prince of the Power of the Air.” But long ages of successful wickedness have deepened his misery and his meanness. Hence he does not boldly confront Jesus, but keeps nibbling at his heels, and you see him sunk from the Lost Archangel into a crafty and a baffled juggler. Once, indeed, he seeks to re-assert his former character, in that remarkable speech beginning,

“’Tis true I am that Spirit unfortunate,”

which De Quincey somewhere commemorates as one of the most eloquent specimens of rhetoric in literature. But his general conduct serves to prove that Sin, though it gives at first a dreadful glory to a great nature, ultimately degrades it, and becomes not only a bad but a low and ludicrous thing. Indeed, his fall from the pinnacle of the Temple seems designed to caricature his fall from the battlements of Heaven, and to intimate the Poet's view, that he could fall no farther, and that it is not worth while recording or imagining his future career.

We quote, from an able writer, some remarks on Satan which are less known than they deserve. "The ruined angel's appearance is a new and tremendous vision under the Sun. Dilated in its dimensions into something more fine and subtle than any known materialism, and coloured with hues and shades softer than blood ever blushed or twilight gave, it is yet condensed and solid with adamantine texture and strength, 'like Teneriffe or Atlas unremoved,' the grand pillar of his own empire. The outlines of the form, with all their vagueness, have nothing shadowy, but are compact and massy with indwelling energy. The face and form attract outwards upon and around them, in vivid display, all the inner feelings and purposes, and the hardened and sublime character of the wicked principality. Courage, hatred, remorse, and despair, have a strange effluence of dark and tumultuous glory from the 'unblest feet' up to the 'fulgent head;' the lustre of holiness has for ever gone, and with it the smiles of joy; still he is of regal port and faded splendour wan. His immortal nature and original rank have an expression which glows and glimmers through the darkness of guilt and misery; thrust down from heaven to the lowest deep for wickedness, his greatness has yet a stature which reaches the sky. Milton exhausts all the titles of rank and royalty in exalting his Hero. He is the 'Archangel,' the 'Superiour Fiend,' the 'General,' the 'Mighty Paramount,' 'Hell's King,' the 'Emperor,' the 'Sultan.' His superiority is cheerfully admitted by the very Spirits who had resisted the claims of the Supreme. He is precipitated in common ruin with his followers in the fiery gulph, yet there for nine days he lies apart in misery, as if none might share his pillow, throb in the fellowship of his anguish, or repeat his groans. Beelzebub, the next in rank, is nearest to him, yet the same distance honours the couch of his chief, as ever honoured the glorious throne. Satan is the first to awake, as the light strikes on the mountain ere it reaches the plain.—That face which rises highest in defiance, and lowers most darkly in hatred of God, and quivers in most intense pain under the shadow of deepest despair, MUST be the infernal idol ! ”

We mentioned simplicity as the third grand characteristic of Milton's genius. His is not, however, in general, a bare, but a rich simplicity ; not the nakedness of desolation and poverty, but the sublime nakedness of unfallen Adam. In his earlier poems we find something which resembles exuberance of fancy—a play of imagery—a fine, light, aerial movement, as of a young cherub, with flushed cheek, restless eye, and fluttering pinions. But as his genius advances, this is gradually lost, and he grows and calms into a “Giant Angel,” wearing a beauty grave and terrible as his strength—his vast wings, like sunny clouds, slowly passing through the noon ; resting, when he rests, like a Pyramid, and moving, when he moves, like a Planet. Some have talked of the baldness of his later style, but these persons might as soon speak of dressing the Sphynx, as of improving on that austere and bold simplicity. His genius, as a whole, including its juvenile and elderly efforts, may be described in Moore's words on Lebanon :—

“ Whose head in wintry grandeur towers,
And whitens with eternal sleet ;
While summer, in a vale of flowers,
Is smiling rosy at his feet.”

While the young will continue to prefer Comus, the more matured will prefer the statelier and sterner heights of Paradise Lost and Samson Agonistes.

Subordinate to those main elements, we find many others, from which we select one or two. His dramatic power has been greatly underrated. It seems to us only inferior to Shakspeare's. He has divided the general angel or fiend element into a variety of finely individualised forms, and he has adapted the language to the character of each. He has done

this in spite of the somewhat unwieldy nature of his style. Byron has often been accused of masking himself under all his ideal characters—so that Childe Harold is Byron musing; Lara, Byron murdering; Manfred, Byron writhing in remorse; Cain, Byron speculating; and Don Juan, Byron pursuing love adventures. But no such charge can be brought against Milton. He can be identified neither with Michael nor with Satan; neither with Raphael nor Belial; neither with Gabriel nor Moloch. Nor can any of these be confounded with one another. Michael, Raphael, Gabriel, Abdiel, Uriel, are all holy, happy, powerful, and brave; but how different!—Michael is the strong Angel; Raphael, the eloquent; Gabriel, the wise; Abdiel, the faithful; and Uriel, the watchful. Satan, Moloch, Belial, Mammon, Beelzebub, are all fallen, eloquent, bold, all in torment, hate, and hell; but distinct as are columns of different architectures. Satan is the Infernal Egotist: the pronoun “I” begins every sentence of peculiar pride, and the favourite exclamation of his anguish is “Ah me!” Moloch is rash and desperate, and his fury vents itself in rugged laconics, in gasps and howls of hatred. Belial is the subtle, far revolving fiend, and his eloquence is fluent and sweet—a stream of sugared poison. Mammon is the down-looking Demon, and his words, like his thoughts, seek the centre. Beelzebub’s speeches, like his character, are calm, measured—his talk is just thinking made audible, and has, withal, a cast of grave, terrific irony, which he fears not to apply to his fellow-fiends, when he says—

“Thrones, and imperial powers, offspring of Heaven,
Ethereal virtues! Or these titles now
Must we renounce, and, changing style, be called Princes of Hell?”

And again—

“Advise, if this be worth
Attempting; or to sit in darkness here,
Hatching vain empires.”

We counsel the man who would be an orator, to read, not Demosthenes, Fox, Burke, Grattan, and Webster, but to give his days and his nights to the speeches of the Halls of Pandemonium. Milton, it is believed by many, began the Paradise Lost in a dramatic form; had he completed it as a Drama, it had become a Tragedy surpassing any single play in Eschylus or Shakspeare—it would have necessarily avoided the prose and platitudes which are found in the present Epic—it would have combined the rugged force of the Agonistes with a far richer, more imaginative, and passionate treatment, and would have stood more conspicuously and colossally alone among the Dramas, than it does now among the Epics of the World. There are many still who mate the Iliad and the Divina Commedia with the Paradise Lost; but there would, we think, have been none to compare the Prometheus Vincit, or the Macbeth, to the “Fall of Man,” by Milton, had he executed his purpose as he could have done. We do not mean to say, that his native genius was superior or equal to that of Shakspeare and Eschylus, but merely that his blended art, genius, learning, and religion, would have constructed a greater separate dramatic structure than any they have left—a Drama combining the severity and the loftiness of the old Grecian model, with much of the subtlety, variety, and brilliance of the Shakspearean Play.

The manner in which Milton sublimates his learning has often been noticed by his critics. It is more wonderful than his learning itself. And yet that is worthy of all the encomiums which have been passed on it. It comes out, not only in those apparently elaborate, though in reality spontaneous and irresistible, accumulations of names and historic facts, which are found scattered through all his poems, but in the far-flashing allusions which everywhere abound. His style not only ever and anon sparkles with, but is steeped in, the most profound and recondite learning of his times. Buchanan has given the preference to learned Poets, in the lines—

Nesciunt Fati imperium severi;
Sola contemnunt Phlegethonta, et Orci
Jura superbi.”

Here he errs in the word “sola,” but certainly, in the case of Milton and a few others, Poetry has found a graceful handmaid in Learning. Names, incidents, countries, characters, which had been deemed barren, and left to rust on the upper or lower shelves of libraries, are summoned, by this mighty Poet, to his aid, and they cannot but come, and come, too, in dance and music. His catalogue of the Devils, his geographical excursions, his mythological fables, are among the most interesting and poetical parts of his poem. We are astonished to find Hallam objecting to them, in company with others who have stated, but can scarcely have felt, their faultiness. To those possessed of historical lore, these names, as Macaulay remarks, are charmed names—to others they are like a foreign language spoken by Gavazzi, or sung by Jenny Lind—their music affects them almost as deeply as their meaning could. If jargon, they are at least the potent jargon of a magician opening doors in rocks, rooting up pines, and making palaces and mountains come and go at his pleasure. And it is remarkable that this power—a power springing from a profound knowledge of the associations which words can awaken, and of the exquisite harmony which certain combinations of them can produce—a power first displayed by Homer, and which, in Milton, came to a climax—seems to have now vanished from literature. The only good specimens of it, since Milton, we remember, are in Thomson's picture of the Torrid Zone, and in the last chapter of Thomas Aird's Religious Characteristics. Even Pollok, in his description of the nations which embrace the Gospel at the Millennium, fails in this Ideal Geography. He selects the names at haphazard, and does not seem to have weighed them in the trembling scales of an ear at once musical and poetic, ere committing them to his page.

Much that is true, and much that is false—much sense, and much nonsense—has been written about the faults of Milton. His puns, bulls, conceits, and quibbles, we surrender at once to his severer critics. They are not very numerous, and only a vulture nostril, like that of Warburton, can smell in them a sweet savour, and delight in such a petty sacrifice. A good deal of lumbering prose there is, unquestionably, in all his later works, but it serves to relieve and balance his nobler passages, and ever and anon, amid the dull level, a fine line occurs, proving that the author is a "god of the plain" as well as of the "mountain," and that his flatness is not that of weakness, but of recumbent strength. He has been charged, by Johnson, with using a "Babylonish dialect," but the Doctor had forgot his own style, and his own adage, "Big thinkers require big words." Milton was a big and a learned thinker, and he required large and learned words. Even his astronomy and cosmogony, which were those of his age, have been made matter of accusation against him, as if a poet in any age were bound by the laws of strict scientific truth any more than by those of general experience,—as if he might not, if he chose, find his astronomy in astrology, his cosmogony in the reveries of the Brahmins, and his chemistry in the dreams of the alchymists—and as if there were not a magnificent poetry, deducible, and by Dante and Milton actually deduced, from the Ptolemaic system of the universe. With greater force he has been accused of harsh inversions, ellipses, and frequent obscurity; but his darkness, we must remember, is never deliberate, and seldom very dense; he never, like many in modern days, sets himself on purpose "to darken counsel by words without knowledge;" and while the edges of his thought sometimes dip into clouds, the centre is always as the "body of heaven in its clearness." The question as to who is the hero of the Paradise Lost, has elicited much controversy, and led to divers unfounded charges against its author. Adam, Satan, and the Messiah have their respective partisans. It is a question of little consequence. Yet let us look at it for a moment. If a hero mean the most interesting and impressive character in an Epos, then Dryden is right, and Satan is the hero. If a hero mean the being you most sympathise with, then Adam is the hero. If a hero mean the personage who turns the tide of the plot, and gathers the greatest glory around him from the issue, then the Messiah is the hero. So that, while thus there are three candidates in Milton for the honour, in Homer there are only two, namely, Hector the most interesting character in the Iliad, and with whom, too, you most warmly sympathise; and Achilles, the most powerful, and whose avatar is attended with the most triumphant results. We do not attempt to decide the question, except by saying that, in our notion, technically Messiah is the hero—really Satan. Messiah has the most success,—Satan impresses most deeply. Yet we are far from agreeing with the following extraordinary statement of Hallam's:—"The first two books confirm the sneer of Dryden, that Satan is Milton's hero, since they develop a plan of action which is ultimately successful; the triumph which he and his host must experience in the fall of man being hardly compensated by their temporary conversion into serpents." As if that were the only compensation; as if the tenor of the whole argument were not to shew that the second Adam was to bruise the serpent's head by recovering the majority of the race from Satan's grasp, and by at last consuming Satan and his perverted world! The object of Satan was not only to ruin man, but to rob God of glory; and one purpose of the poet is to shew how neither part of the plan was successful, but that it all redounded to the devil's misery and disgrace, and to the triumph of God and of the Messiah. With a like carelessness does this critic add—"Except one circumstance which seems rather physical intoxication than anything else, we do not find any sign of depravity superinduced upon the transgression of our first parents." Has Mr Hallam forgotten that fine and most Shakspearean scene of their mutual recrimination, and of the gross injustice Adam does to Eve by calling her that "bad woman," that "serpent," &c.? Was there no sign of depravity there? And was even "physical intoxication" possible to undepraved beings? We refer our readers to Macaulay, Channing, and others, for a defence of our poet against other charges, such as the confusion he is said to make between matter and spirit in his angels—his digressions—his episode of Sin and Death, and many more, all of which are more or less founded on truth, but which have been all more or less exaggerated.

We pass to a rapid review of his poetic works, beginning in an inverted climax with his largest, and descending to his less. We think that Paradise Lost may be analysed into the following elements—the sublime, the beautiful, the pathetic, the didactic, the picturesque, the grotesque, and the prosaic. This, if not a thoroughly exhaustive division, will serve to open up its principal features.

The Sublime of this poem is chiefly found in the 1st, and partly in the 2d, and in the 5th, 6th, and 7th books. Of these the 1st book is unquestionably the loftiest not only in this poem but in poetry. It is the highest mountain in all Milton's Himalayan range. It soars easily, proudly, consciously, "above all Greek, all Roman fame." We find in it—and it is the only book of this or any poem where we do—the element of sublimity existing undiluted and alone. Not a page, not a line, not a word detracts from the general sense of the vast, the gloomy, the terrible, the distant, the solitary, and the infinite. Satan—the scene around—his followers and their actions, combine to form a whole inexpressibly and overwhelmingly grand. In the 2d book sublimity clings principally to the character of Satan, and is mixed up with the elements of the dramatic and the grotesque. In the 3d and 4th books, it is still more strictly confined to that tremendous Apparition, who has left hell, cleft chaos, and is hovering, like an eclipse, between earth and heaven. In the 5th book, this Apparition for a season fades away, and you see sublimity in its native seat—Heaven now described as preparing for war. In the 6th book, the principal grandeur is at first attached to Abdiel returning through night, dreadless and unpursued; it then lights on the crest of Satan, and at last sits down beside 169 "victory eagle-winged," above the chariot of the Son. That description is certainly the sublimest single passage in the poem. It is copied partly indeed from Hesiod's War of the Giants, but is superior to it, or even to Achilles coming forth against the Trojans. As the Messiah in his progress snatched up his fallen foes, and drove them before him like leaves on the blast, Milton, in the whirlwind of his inspiration, snatches up words, allusions, images from Homer, Hesiod, and the Word of God, and bears them in triumph and in terror on—and as soon call a tornado a plagiarist of the forests it tears up in the fury of its power, as the poet. Much has been said of Milton's plagiarism, and the notes to many editions of his poem are disgraced by attempts to trace, often on the weakest evidence, almost all his fine things to others. Milton, however, was too rich to require to steal,—and although he often imitates, he always improves, and never commits base and palpable theft. If, indeed, to follow faithfully in one's own way a signal given by another,—to finish in an unexpected and independent style the torso of another artist,—to deliver, by a masterly stroke, the Minerva struggling in the brain of another god,—to light a torch fairly and openly at the sun,—to change a mass of dead fuel into quick flame,—to snatch in the keen and desperate melee an axe from the next yeoman, and deal blows therewith,—to draw from other wells with a golden pitcher which shall hallow and beautify whatever it brings up;—if this be a thief, then let us call Milton one, nay, the prince—the god—the Mercury of thieves. And nowhere do we find this divine theft more conspicuous than in the 7th book, where he fills up the colossal skeleton of the Scripture history of the creation as only a man of kindred genius and power to Moses could have done.

Of the Beautiful, we find little in the Paradise Lost till we reach the 4th book. But there the author of Lycidas and Comus exerts all his powers to lavish a tropical wealth of loveliness on our First Parents and their happy dwelling. Paradise is no nook of beauty: it is a large place, with mountains, and forests, and rivers, as well as flowers, and streams, and vales in it. But the bower in the midst is its centre, and sheds a softness and rosy lustre over the whole. Our First Parents, too, are more distinguished by their symmetry and beauty, than by their majesty and power. Beautiful beyond desire; simple beyond disguise; graceful without consciousness; naked without shame; innocent, but not insipid; dignified, but not proud;—they are, at the same time, frail as tenderest plants, and must, like them, be constantly guarded; you from the first tremble for them, and objects or beings for whom you tremble cannot be sublime. Nor do we think that either Uriel or Raphael, as persons, overpass the limit of the Beautiful—although nothing can be grander than the position of the former, in the Sun—or more magnificent than the discourse of the other.

The Pathos of the Poem is chiefly found in some of Satan's softer soliloquies and in the lamentations of the hapless pair after their fall. It is calmer and less subtle than the pathos of Shakspere, and we are not sure if any one scene equals that of Hector and Andromache in Homer; but it is extremely eloquent and mellifluous. The reconciliation between Adam and Eve is generally thought a copy of that between Milton and his first wife.

The Didactic exists as an under-current through the greater part of the poem, but is found especially in the 3d and in the 8th books. Milton, sooth to say, is not a very good didactic poet. He is better at creating gigantic or graceful figures, than at expounding abstract truths. Had he given us a system of Theology in verse—an Essay on God—it had been altogether illegible.

The Picturesque is very abundant. How strikingly it is displayed in the description of Beelzebub "rising like a pillar of state;" in that of Raphael descending in his "downy gold" and "feathered mail;" in that of the Serpent with his

"Circular base of rising folds, that tower'd, Fold above fold, a surging maze;"

in that of the lion at his creation, "pawing to free his hinder parts;" and in the gallery of pictures shewn to Adam by Michael from the highest hill in Paradise! Milton has been charged with being rather a musical than a picturesque Poet—but the passages we have alluded to, and many more, confute the charge. Indeed, his blindness was certain to increase the outstanding distinctness and clearness of his imagery, as well as his sense of harmonious sound.

The Grotesque he has too frequently interwoven with the Grand. Under this head we rank the Limbo of vanity—the speeches of the fallen angels on the second day of the war in Heaven—perhaps also the transformation of Satan and his crew into Serpents—and certainly the "Sin and Death." Yet, although too Dantesque or even Ariosto-like in its taste, the Allegory of Sin and Death abounds in most powerful poetry. It is a very rape of genius, but the progeny is glorious. For eloquence, interest, terrific suspense, there is nothing in the whole poem finer than the interview between Satan and his ghastly Son. This Allegory, however, must bear the blame of by far the coarsest and worst lines in the poem. They are these, put in the mouth of God, as he sees Sin and Death advancing upon the Earth:—

“ I call'd and drew them thither,
 My Hell-hounds, to lick up the draff and filth
 Which Man's polluting Sin with taint hath shed
 On what was pure, till crammed and gorged, nigh burst
 With suck'd and glutted offal, at one sling
 Of thy victorious arm, well-pleasing Son,” &c.

We think that to the same category of grotesqueness must belong the scene between Satan and the Anarchs of Chaos, although here, too, the apparent absurdity is redeemed by the splendour of the poetry. Who but Milton could have written these words?—

“ Chaos and his dark pavilion spread
 Wide on the wasteful deep ; with him enthroned
 Sat sable-vested Night, eldest of kings
 The consort of his reign ; and by them stood
 Orcus and Ades, and the dreaded Name
Of Demogorgon ; Rumour next and chance
 And Tumult and Confusion all embroil'd,
 And Discord with a thousand various mouths.”

We name, finally, the Prosaic, as constituting no small portion of his poem. To this we have alluded a little before. It is found not at all in the first and second books ; we meet with it first in the third ; in the fourth, fifth, sixth, and seventh, it is almost entirely wanting ; while the eighth, tenth, eleventh, and twelfth abound with it—indeed it becomes much more frequent and more leaden after the Fall, when the purpose of the Poet seems nearly accomplished, and the flush of his original fervour has faded away. These are the leading constituents of his great poem. But there are, besides, certain passages, having a personal reference, and a very profound interest ;—for example, his address to Light, at the opening of the third book, is one of the divinest instincts in Poetry. How appropriate the position it occupies ! Milton had filled his imagination with Hell and Chaos—he had almost identified himself with the dread Pilgrim who had made his way out of Hell's midnight into the regions of Day—and hence at the sight of the first sunbeam he cannot but utter a cry of welcome as fervid and loud as if HE had newly escaped from the outer darkness. So far from being, as it has been called, a splendid excrescence, the passage springs up naturally in its place, and testifies to the thorough reality of the Poet's inspiration. Of its sublimity and yearning pathos, it is superfluous to speak.

Paradise Regained, could it have possibly been introduced into the Paradise Lost as an Episodical Vision, would have been thought not inferior in power to any other part of the poem, except the first two books; and in exquisite simplicity and gentle dignity, equal to anything in it all. But the title suggested a large plan, which the poem did not realise. Its name was ambitious, itself was short and unpretending, and it seemed to come to an abrupt and unartistic close. It avoided the grand subjects of Christ's Death, Resurrection, Ascension, and Second Advent, any or all of which the title was broad enough to have included. It should have been called Christ's Temptation, a Poem. It was not, in short, a proper pendant to the Paradise Lost. The one was the huge Orion or Great Bear, covering a half of the heavens; the other, the small tear-twinkling Pleiades. Hence it was a disappointment at first, and has never since received its due meed of praise. And yet, if comparatively a fragment, what a true, shapely, beautiful, fragment it is! Its power so quiet, its elegance so unconscious, its costume of language so Grecian, its general tone so scripturally simple, while its occasional speeches and descriptions are so gorgeous, and so faultless! The views from the Mountain, the storm in the Wilderness, the dreams of Christ when he was an hungered, so exquisitely true to his waking character—

“ Him thought, he by the brook of Cherith stood,
And saw the ravens, with their horny beaks,
Food to Elijah bringing even and morn,
Though ravenous, taught to abstain from what they brought :
He saw the Prophet also, how he fled
Into the desert, and how there he slept
Under a juniper ; then how awak'd,
And found his supper on the coals prepar'd,
Sometimes that with Elijah he partook,
Or as a guest with Daniel at his pulse”—

are in the Poet's very highest style, and one or two of them, indeed, have a gloss of perfection about them, as well as an ease and freedom of touch rarely to be found in his large poem. In the Paradise Lost, he is a giant tossing mountains to heaven with far seen struggle, and in evident trial of strength. In the Paradise Regained, he is a giant gently putting his foot on a rock, and leaving a mark inimitable, indelible, visible to all after time.

His Samson Agonistes, too, accomplishes great effects by a very small apparent expenditure of means. Even as the Hero has his limbs fettered, has Milton cramped himself with the Aristotelian unities. Samson, however, says—

And so Milton's genius asserts itself in spite of the unities. If shaven of his giant locks, they have yet, like the Danite's, begun to grow. There is no luxuriance in this poem; it is throughout severe, sculptural, and stands up before you like a statue, bloodless and blind. A deep gloom hangs over its story, and the peevishness of its Hero is only compensated by his power. Samson is Milton in a hard Hebrew form. The fair vesture of youth and hope is for ever gone from his limbs, the hair of his head is shorn, he is clad in “filthy garments,” forsaken, blind, carelessly diffused; but his courage, pride, patriotism, and devotion, are still extant, and ready to reassert themselves once more to avenge the loss of his two eyes. His hand has few flowers in it, it strains rather at the pillars, and uses them as the instruments of its terrible concentrated force. His spirit is that of Abimelech, when he cried to his armour-bearer, “Say not a woman slew me.” Samson must die, with a city of enemies dragged down to death above him, and give to suicide for once a patriotic dignity and a sacramental consecration. The scenes with Delilah and Harapah are amazingly spirited and dramatic, although coarser in style than Milton's wont. The choruses rise sometimes to Grecian grandeur of lyric thought, and sink more frequently into Grecian intricacy of measure. Altogether, you believe with trembling in the power of this poem. It is no Hymettus humming with bees, and blushing with flowers; it is a Sinai, bared in the wrath of Heaven, hanging over your head, and threatening to crush wonder out of you rather than to awaken warm and willing admiration.

Time would fail us to speak, as they deserve, of Comus, that finest compound of the pastoral and the play, with its high moralisings and Shakspearean imagery ; of L'Allegro and Il Penseroso, with their delicious contrast and dancing measures ; of the Hymn on Christ's Nativity, which, slow and solemn as a charmed river, moves around the awful sanctities of its theme ; of Lycidas, wailing so melodiously over

“ That fatal and perfidious bark,
Built in the eclipse, and rigg'd with curses dark,
Which laid so low that sacred head of thine ; ”

of the Sonnets, rising in climax, from the rugged simplicity of those of Cyriack Skinner, up to the grand swelling peal (as of a Sonnet soaring out of itself into some higher form of verse) of that On the late Massacre in Piemont ; or of his graceful Greek, Italian, and Latin verses and versicles. We have not said enough to exhaust our own admiration, but we have pointed again—with however feeble a finger—to fountains of song which no impurity defiles, and which are as fresh and full this hour as when they were first opened by the hand of the Master-spirit.

“ Blessings be with him, and eternal praise ! ”

PARADISE REGAINED.

BOOK I.

THE ARGUMENT.

The subject proposed. Invocation of the Holy Spirit.—The Poem opens with John baptizing at the river Jordan. Jesus coming there is baptized; and is attested by the descent of the Holy Ghost, and by a voice from Heaven, to be the Son of God. Satan, who is present, upon this immediately flies up into the regions of the air: where, summoning his Infernal Council, he acquaints them with his apprehensions that Jesus is that seed of the Woman, destined to destroy all their power; and points out to them the immediate necessity of bringing the matter to proof, and of attempting, by snares and fraud, to counteract and defeat the person, from whom they had so much to dread. This office he offers himself to undertake; and, his offer being accepted, sets out on his enterprise.—In the meantime, God, in the assembly of holy Angels, declares that he has given up his Son to be tempted by Satan; but foretells that the tempter shall be completely defeated by him;—upon which the Angels sing a hymn of triumph. Jesus is led up by the Spirit into the wilderness, while he is meditating on the commencement of his great office of Saviour of Mankind. Pursuing his meditations, he narrates, in a soliloquy, what divine and philanthropic impulses he had felt from his early youth, and how his mother, Mary, on perceiving these dispositions in him, had acquainted him with the circumstances of his birth, and informed him that he was no less a person than the Son of God; to which he adds what his own inquiries and reflections had supplied in confirmation of this great truth, and particularly dwells on the recent attestation of it at the river Jordan. Our Lord passes forty days, fasting, in the wilderness; where the wild beasts become mild and harmless in his presence. Satan now appears under the form of an old peasant; and enters into discourse with our Lord, wondering what could have brought him alone into so dangerous a place, and at the same time professing to recognize him for the person lately acknowledged by John, at the river Jordan, to be the Son of God. Jesus briefly replies. Satan rejoins with a description of the difficulty of supporting life in the wilderness; and entreats Jesus, if he really be the Son of God, to manifest his divine power, by changing some of the stones into bread. Jesus reproves him, and at the same time tells him that he knows who he is. Satan instantly avows himself, and offers an artful apology for himself and his conduct. Our blessed Lord severely reprimands him, and refutes every part of his justification. Satan, with much semblance of humility, still endeavours to justify himself; and, professing his admiration of Jesus, and his regard for virtue, requests to be permitted at a future time to hear more of his conversation; but is answered, that this must be as he shall find permission from above. Satan then disappears, and the Book closes with a short description of night coming on in the desert.

I, who erewhile the happy garden sung
By one Man's disobedience lost, now sing
Recover'd Paradise to all mankind,
By one Man's firm obedience fully tried
Through all temptation, and the Tempter foil'd
In all his wiles, defeated and repuls'd,
And Eden rais'd in the waste wilderness.

Thou Spirit, who ledst this glorious eremite
Into the desert, his victorious field,
Against the spiritual foe, and brought'st him thence
By proof the undoubted Son of God, inspire,
As thou art wont, my prompted song, else mute;
And bear, through highth or depth of Nature's bounds,
With prosperous wing full summ'd,¹ to tell of deeds
Above heroick, though in secret done
And unrecorded left through many an age;
Worthy to have not remain'd so long unsung.

Now had the great Proclaimer, with a voice
More awful than the sound of trumpet, cried
Repentance, and Heaven's kingdom nigh at hand
To all baptiz'd: To his great baptism flock'd
With awe the regions round, and with them came
From Nazareth the son of Joseph deem'd
To the flood Jordan; came, as then obscure,
Unmark'd, unknown; but him the Baptist soon
Descried, divinely warn'd, and witness bore
As to his worthier, and would have resign'd
To him his heavenly office; nor was long

His witness unconfirm'd : On him baptiz'd
 Heaven open'd, and in likeness of a dove
 The Spirit descended, while the Father's voice
 From Heaven pronounc'd him his beloved Son,
 That heard the Adversary, who, roving still
 About the world, at that assembly fam'd
 Would not be last, and with the voice divine
 Nigh thunder-struck, the exalted Man, to whom
 Such high attest was given, awhile survey'd
 With wonder ; then, with envy fraught and rage,
 Flies to his place, nor rests, but in mid air
 To counsel summons all his mighty peers,
 Within thick clouds and dark tenfold involv'd,
 A gloomy consistory ; and them amidst,
 With looks aghast and sad, he thus bespake.

O ancient Powers of air, and this wide world
 (For much more willingly I mention air,
 This our old conquest, than remember Hell,
 Our hated habitation), well ye know
 How many ages, as the years of men,
 This universe we have possess'd and rul'd,
 In manner at our will, the affairs of earth,
 Since Adam and his facile consort Eve
 Lost Paradise, deceiv'd by me ; though since
 With dread attending¹ when that fatal wound
 Shall be inflicted by the seed of Eve
 Upon my head. Long the decrees of Heaven
 Delay, for longest time to Him is short ;
 And now, too soon for us, the circling hours
 This dreaded time have compass'd, wherein we
 Must bide the stroke of that long-threaten'd wound.
 (At least if so we can, and by the head
 Broken be not intended all our power

To be infring'd, our freedom and our being,
In this fair empire won of earth and air),
For this ill news I bring, the Woman's Seed,
Destin'd to this, is late of Woman born.
His birth to our just fear gave no small cause :
But his growth now to youth's full flower, displaying
All virtue, grace, and wisdom to achieve
Things highest, greatest, multiplies my fear.
Before him a great Prophet, to proclaim
His coming, is sent harbinger, who all
Invites, and in the consecrated stream
Pretends to wash off sin, and fit them, so
Purified, to receive him pure, or rather
To do him honour as their king: All come,
And he himself among them was baptiz'd;
Not thence to be more pure, but to receive
The testimony of Heaven, that who he is Thenceforth the nations may not doubt ; I saw
The Prophet do him reverence ; on him, rising
Out of the water, Heaven above the clouds
Unfold her crystal doors ; thence on his head
A perfect dove descend (whate'er it meant),
And out of Heaven the sovran voice I heard,
"This is my Son belov'd, in him am pleas'd."
His mother then is mortal, but his Sire
He who obtains the monarchy of Heaven :
And what will he not do to advance his Son ?
His first-begot we know, and sore have felt,
When his fierce thunder drove us to the deep :
Who this is we must learn ; for Man he seems
In all his lineaments, though in his face
The glimpses of his Father's glory shine.
Ye see our danger on the utmost edge
Of hazard, which admits no long debate,

But must with something sudden be oppos'd
(Not force, but well-couch'd fraud, well-woven snares),
Ere in the head of nations he appear,
Their king, their leader, and supreme on earth.
I, when no other durst, sole undertook
The dismal expedition to find out
And ruin Adam ; and the exploit perform'd
Successfully : a calmer voyage now
Will waft me ; and the way, found prosperous once,
Induces best to hope of like success.

He ended, and his words impression left
Of much amazement to the infernal crew,
Distracted and surpris'd with deep dismay
At these sad tidings ; but no time was then
For long indulgence to their fears or grief :
Unanimous they all commit the care
And management of this main enterprise
To him, their great dictator, whose attempt
At first against mankind so well had thriv'd
In Adam's overthrow, and led their march
From Hell's deep-vaulted den to dwell in light,
Regents, and potentates, and kings, yea gods,
Of many a pleasant realm and province wide.
So to the coast of Jordan he directs
His easy steps, girded with snaky wiles,
Where he might likeliest find this new-declar'd,
This Man of men, attested Son of God,
Temptation and all guile on him to try ;
So to subvert whom he suspected rais'd
To end his reign on earth, so long enjoy'd :
But, contrary, unweeting he fulfill'd
The purpos'd counsel, pre-ordain'd and fix'd,
Of the Most High ; who, in full frequency bright
Of Angels, thus to Gabriel smiling spake :

Gabriel, this day by proof thou shalt behold,
Thou and all Angels conversant on earth
With man or men's affairs, how I begin
To verify that solemn message, late
On which I sent thee to the Virgin pure
In Galilee, that she should bear a son,
Great in renown, and call'd the Son of God;
Then told'st her, doubting how these things could be
To her a virgin, that on her should come
The Holy Ghost, and the power of the Highest
O'ershadower. This Man, born and now upgrown,
To show him worthy of his birth divine
And high prediction, henceforth I expose
To Satan; let him tempt, and now assay
His utmost subtlety, because he boasts
And vaunts of his great cunning to the throng
Of his apostasy: he might have learnt
Less overweening, since he fail'd in Job,
Whose constant perseverance overcame
Whate'er his cruel malice could invent.
He now shall know I can produce a Man,
Of female seed, far abler to resist
All his solicitations, and at length
All his vast force, and drive him back to Hell;
Winning, by conquest, what the first Man lost,
By fallacy surpris'd. But first I mean
To exercise him in the wilderness;
There he shall first lay down the rudiments
Of his great warfare, ere I send him forth
To conquer Sin and Death, the two grand foes,
By humiliation and strong sufferance:
His weakness shall o'ercome Satanick strength,
And all the world, and mass of sinful flesh,
That all the Angels and ethereal Powers,

They now, and men hereafter, may discern,
 From what consummate virtue I have chose
 This perfect Man, by merit call'd my Son,
 To earn salvation for the sons of men.

So spake the Eternal Father, and all Heaven
 Admiring stood a space, then into hymns
 Burst forth, and in celestial measures mov'd
 Circling the throne and singing, while the hand
 Sung with the voice, and this the argument.

Victory and triumph to the Son of God,
 Now entering his great duel, not of arms,
 But to vanquish by wisdom hellish wiles!
 The Father knows the Son; therefore secure
 Ventures his filial virtue, though untried,
 Against whate'er may tempt, whate'er seduce,
 Allure, or terrify, or undermine.

Be frustrate, all ye stratagems of Hell,
 And, devilish machinations, come to nought!

So they in Heaven their odes and vigils tun'd:
 Meanwhile the Son of God, who yet some days
 Lodged in Bethabara,¹ where John baptiz'd,
 Musing, and much revolving in his breast,
 How best the mighty work he might begin.
 Of Saviour to mankind, and which way first
 Publish his Godlike office now mature,
 One day forth walk'd alone, the Spirit leading
 And his deep thoughts, the better to converse
 With solitude, till, far from track of men,
 Thought following thought, and step by step led on,
 He enter'd now the bordering desert wild,
 And, with dark shades and rocks environ'd round,
 His holy meditations thus pursued.

O, what a multitude of thoughts at once

Awaken'd in me swarm, while I consider
What from within I feel myself, and hear
What from without comes often to my ears,
Ill sorting with my present state compar'd !
When I was yet a child, no childish play
To me was pleasing ; all my mind was set
Serious to learn and know, and thence to do,
What might be publick good ; myself I thought
Born to that end, born to promote all truth,
All righteous things : therefore, above my years,
The law of God I read, and found it sweet,
Made it my whole delight, and in it grew
To such perfection, that, ere yet my age
Had measured twice six years, at our great feast
I went into the temple, there to hear
The teachers of our law, and to propose
What might improve my knowledge or their own ;
And was admir'd by all : yet this not all
To which my spirit aspir'd ; victorious deeds
Flam'd in my heart, heroick acts ; one while
To rescue Israel from the Roman yoke ;
Then to subdue and quell, o'er all the earth,
Brute violence and proud tyrannick power,
Till truth were freed, and equity restor'd :
Yet held it more humane, more heavenly, first
By winning words to conquer willing hearts,
And make persuasion do the work of fear ;
At least to try, and teach the erring soul,
Not wilfully misdoing, but unaware
Mised ; the stubborn only to subdue.
These growing thoughts my mother soon perceiving,
By words at times cast forth, inly rejoic'd,
And said to me apart ; " High are thy thoughts,
O Son, but nourish them, and let them soar,

To what highth sacred virtue and true worth
Can raise them, though above example high ;
By matchless deeds express thy matchless Sire,
For know, thou art no son of mortal man ;
Though men esteem thee low of parentage,
Thy Father is the Eternal King who rules
All Heaven and Earth, Angels and sons of men ;
A messenger from God foretold thy birth
Conceiv'd in me a virgin ; he foretold,
Thou shouldst be great, and sit on David's throne,
And of thy kingdom there should be no end.
At thy nativity, a glorious quire
Of Angels, in the fields of Bethlehem, sung
To shepherds, watching at their folds by night,
And told them the Messiah now was born,
Where they might see him, and to thee they came,
Directed to the manger where thou lay'st,
For in the inn was left no better room :
A star, not seen before, in Heaven appearing,
Guided the wise men thither from the east,
To honour thee with incense, myrrh, and gold ;
By whose bright course led on they found the place,
Affirming it thy star, new-graven in Heaven,
By which they knew the King of Israel born.
Just Simeon and prophetick Anna, warn'd
By vision, found thee in the temple, and spake,
Before the altar and the vested priest,
Like things of thee to all that present stood."—
This having heard, straight I again revolv'd
The Law and Prophets, searching what was writ
Concerning the Messiah, to our scribes
Known partly, and soon found, of whom they spake
I am ; this chiefly, that my way must lie
Through many a hard assay, even to the death,

Ere I the promis'd kingdom can attain,
Or work redemption for mankind, whose sins'
Full weight must be transferr'd upon my head.
Yet, neither thus dishearten'd nor dismay'd,
The time prefix'd I waited ; when behold
The Baptist (of whose birth I oft had heard,
Not knew by sight), now come, who was to come
Before Messiah, and his way prepare !
I, as all others, to his baptism came,
Which I believ'd was from above ; but he
Straight knew me, and with loudest voice proclaim'd
Me him (for it was shewn him so from Heaven),
Me him, whose harbinger he was ; and first
Refus'd on me his baptism to confer,
As much his greater, and was hardly won :
But, as I rose out of the laving stream,
Heaven opened her eternal doors, from whence
The Spirit descended on me like a dove ;
And last, the sum of all, my Father's voice,
Audibly heard from Heaven, pronounc'd me his,
Me his beloved Son, in whom alone
He was well pleas'd ; by which I knew the time
Now full, that I no more should live obscure,
But openly begin, as best becomes,
The authority which I derived from Heaven.
And now by some strong motion I am led
Into this wilderness, to what intent
I learn not yet ; perhaps I need not know,
For what concerns my knowledge God reveals.
So spake our Morning-Star, then in his rise,
And, looking round, on every side beheld
A pathless desart, dusk with horrid shades ;
The way he came not having mark'd, return
Was difficult, by human steps untrod ;

And he still on was led, but with such thoughts
Accompanied of things past and to come
Lodg'd in his breast, as well might recommend
Such solitude before choicest society.
Full forty days he pass'd, whether on hill
Sometimes, anon on shady vale, each night
Under the covert of some ancient oak
Or cedar to defend him from the dew,
Or harbour'd in one cave, is not reveal'd ;
Nor tasted human food, nor hunger felt,
Till those days ended ; hunger'd then at last
Among wild beasts : they at his sight grew mild,
Nor sleeping him nor waking harm'd ; his walk
The fiery serpent fled and noxious worm,
The lion and fierce tiger glar'd aloof.
But now an aged man, in rural weeds,
Following, as seem'd, the quest of some stray ewe,
Or wither'd sticks to gather, which might serve
Against a winter's day, when winds blow keen,
To warm him wet return'd from field at eve,
He saw approach, who first with curious eye
Perus'd him, then with words thus utter'd spake :
 Sir, what ill chance hath brought thee to this place
So far from path or road of men, who pass
In troop or caravan ? for single none
Durst ever, who return'd, and dropt not here
His carcass, pin'd with hunger and with drouth.
I ask the rather, and the more admire,
For that to me thou seem'st the Man, whom late
Our new baptizing Prophet at the ford
Of Jordan honour'd so, and call'd the Son
Of God : I saw and heard, for we sometimes
Who dwell this wild, constrain'd by want, come forth
To town or village nigh (nighest is far),

Where aught we hear, and curious are to hear
What happens new ; fame also finds us out.

To whom the Son of God : Who brought me hither,
Will bring me hence ; no other guide I seek.

By miracle he may, replied the swain ;
What other way I see not ; for we here
Live on tough roots and stubs, to thirst inur'd
More than the camel, and to drink go far,
Men to much misery and hardship born :
But, if thou be the Son of God, command
That out of these hard stones be made thee bread,
So shalt thou save thyself, and us relieve
With food, whereof we wretched seldom taste.

He ended, and the Son of God replied.
Think'st thou such force in bread ? Is it not written
(For I discern thee other than thou seem'st),
Man lives not by bread only, but each word
Proceeding from the mouth of God, who fed
Our fathers here with manna ? In the mount
Moses was forty days, nor eat, nor drank ;
And forty days Elijah, without food,
Wander'd this barren waste ; the same I now :
Why dost thou then suggest to me distrust,
Knowing who I am, as I know who thou art ?

Whom thus answer'd the Arch-Fiend, now undisguis'd.
'Tis true I am that Spirit unfortunate,
Who, leagu'd with millions more in rash revolt,
Kept not my happy station, but was driven
With them from bliss to the bottomless deep,
Yet to that hideous place not so confin'd
By rigour unconniving, but that oft,
Leaving my dolorous prison, I enjoy
Large liberty to round this globe of earth,
Or range in the air ; nor from the Heaven of Heavens

Hath he excluded my resort sometimes.
I came among the sons of God, when he Gave up into my hands Uzzean Job
To prove him and illustrate his high worth ;
And, when to all his Angels he propos'd
To draw the proud king Ahab into fraud
That he might fall in Ramoth, they demurring,
I undertook that office, and the tongues
Of all his flattering prophets glibb'd with lies
To his destruction, as I had in charge ;
For what he bids I do. Though I have lost
Much lustre of my native brightness, lost
To be belov'd of God, I have not lost
To love, at least contemplate and admire,
What I see excellent in good, or fair,
Or virtuous ; I should so have lost all sense :
What can be then less in me than desire
To see thee and approach thee, whom I know
Declar'd the son of God, to hear attent
Thy wisdom, and behold thy God-like deeds ?
Men generally think me much a foe
To all mankind : why should I ? they to me
Never did wrong or violence ; by them
I lost not what I lost, rather by them
I gain'd what I have gain'd, and with them dwell
Copartner in these regions of the world,
If not disposer ; lend them oft my aid,
Oft my advice by presages and signs,
And answers, oracles, portents, and dreams,
Whereby they may direct their future life.
Envy they say excites me, thus to gain
Companions of my misery and woe.
At first it may be ; but, long since with woe
Nearer acquainted, now I feel by proof,

That fellowship in pain divides not smart,
Nor lightens aught each man's peculiar load ;
Small consolation then, were man adjoin'd :
This wounds me most, (what can it less ?) that Man,
Man fallen shall be restor'd, I never more.

To whom our Saviour sternly thus replied.
Deservedly thou griev'st, compos'd of lies
From the beginning, and in lies will end ;
Who boast'st release from Hell, and leave to come
Into the Heaven of Heavens : Thou com'st indeed,
As a poor miserable captive thrall
Comes to the place where he before had sat
Among the prime in splendour, now depos'd,
Ejected, emptied, gaz'd, unpitied, shunn'd,
A spectacle of ruin, or of scorn,
To all the host of Heaven : The happy place
Imparts to thee no happiness, no joy ;
Rather inflames thy torment ; representing
Lost bliss, to thee no more communicable,
So never more in Hell than when in Heaven.
But thou art serviceable to Heaven's King.
Wilt thou impute to obedience what thy fear
Extorts, or pleasure to do ill excites ?
What but thy malice mov'd thee to misdeem
Of righteous Job, then cruelly to afflict him
With all inflictions ? but his patience won.
The other service was thy chosen task,
To be a liar in four hundred mouths ;
For lying is thy sustenance, thy food.
Yet thou pretend'st to truth : all oracles
By thee are given, and what confess'd more true
Among the nations ? that hath been thy craft,
By mixing somewhat true to vent more lies.
But what have been thy answers, what but dark,

Ambiguous, and with double sense deluding,
 Which they who ask'd have seldom understood,
 And not well understood as good not known ?
 Who ever by consulting at thy shrine
 Return'd the wiser, or the more instruct,
 To fly or follow what concern'd him most,
 And run not sooner to his fatal snare ?
 For God hath justly given the nations up
 To thy delusions ; justly, since they fell
 Idolatrous : but, when his purpose is
 Among them to declare his providence
 To thee not known, whence hast thou then thy truth,
 But from him, or his Angels president
 In every province, who, themselves disdaining
 To approach thy temples, give thee in command
 What, to the smallest tittle, thou shalt say
 To thy adorers ? Thou, with trembling fear,
 Or like a fawning parasite, obey'st :
 Then to thyself ascrib'st the truth foretold.
 But this thy glory shall be soon retrench'd ;
 No more shalt thou by oracling abuse
 The Gentiles ; henceforth oracles are ceas'd,
 And thou no more with pomp and sacrifice
 Shalt be inquir'd at Delphos, or elsewhere ;
 At least in vain, for they shall find thee mute.
 God hath now sent his living oracle
 Into the world to teach his final will,
 And sends his Spirit of truth henceforth to dwell
 In pious hearts, an inward oracle
 To all truth requisite for men to know.

So spake our Saviour ; but the subtle Fiend,
 Though inly stung with anger and disdain,
 Dissembled, and this answer smooth return'd :
 Sharply thou hast insisted on rebuke,

And urg'd me hard with doings, which not will
 But misery hath wrested from me. Where Easily canst thou find one miserable,
 And not enforc'd oft-times to part from truth,
 If it may stand him more in stead to lie,
 Say and unsay, feign, flatter, or abjure ?
 But thou art plac'd above me, thou art Lord ;
 From thee I can, and must submiss endure
 Check or reproof, and glad to 'scape so quit.
 Hard are the ways of truth, and rough to walk,
 Smooth on the tongue discours'd, pleasing to the ear,
 And tunable as sylvan pipe or song ;
 What wonder then if I delight to hear
 Her dictates from thy mouth ? Most men admire
 Virtue, who follow not her lore : permit me
 To hear thee when I come (since no man comes),
 And talk at least, though I despair to attain.
 The Father, who is holy, wise, and pure,
 Suffers the hypocrite or atheous priest
 To tread his sacred courts, and minister
 About his altar, handling holy things,
 Praying or vowing ; and vouchsafed his voice
 To Balaam reprobate, a prophet yet
 Inspir'd : disdain not such access to me.

To whom our Saviour, with unalter'd brow :
 Thy coming hither, though I knew thy scope,
 I bid not, or forbid ; do as thou find'st
 Permission from above ; thou canst not more.

He added not ; and Satan, bowing low
 His gray dissimulation,¹ disappear'd
 Into thin air diffus'd : for now began
 Night with her sullen wings to double-shade
 The desert ; fowls in their clay nests were couch'd ;
 And now wild beasts came forth the woods to roam.

BOOK II.

THE ARGUMENT.

The disciples of Jesus, uneasy at his long absence, reason amongst themselves concerning it. Mary also gives vent to her maternal anxiety: in the expression of which she recapitulates many circumstances respecting the birth and early life of her son.—Satan again meets his Infernal Council, reports the bad success of his first temptation of our Blessed Lord, and calls upon them for counsel and assistance. Belial proposes the tempting of Jesus with women. Satan rebukes Belial for his dissoluteness, charging on him all the profligacy of that kind ascribed by the poets to the Heathen Gods, and rejects his proposal as in no respect likely to succeed. Satan then suggests other modes of temptation, particularly proposing to avail himself of the circumstance of our Lord's hungering; and, taking a band of chosen Spirits with him, returns to resume his enterprise.—Jesus hungers in the desert.—Night comes on; the manner in which our Saviour passes the night is described.—Morning advances.—Satan again appears to Jesus, and, after expressing wonder that he should be so entirely neglected in the wilderness, where others had been miraculously fed, tempts him with a sumptuous banquet of the most luxurious kind. This he rejects, and the banquet vanishes.—Satan, finding our Lord not to be assailed on the ground of appetite, tempts him again by offering him riches, as the means of acquiring power: This Jesus also rejects, producing many instances of great actions performed by persons under virtuous poverty, and specifying the danger of riches, and the cares and pains inseparable from power and greatness.

MEANWHILE the new-baptiz'd, who yet remain'd
At Jordan with the Baptist, and had seen
Him whom they heard so late expressly call'd
Jesus Messiah, Son of God declar'd,
And on that high authority had believ'd,
And with him talk'd, and with him lodg'd; I mean
Andrew and Simon, famous after known,
With others though in Holy Writ not nam'd;
Now missing him, their joy so lately found
(So lately found, and so abruptly gone),

Began to doubt, and doubted many days,
 And as the days encreas'd, encreas'd their doubt.
 Sometimes they thought he might be only shown,
 And for a time caught up to God, as once
 Moses was in the mount and missing long,
 And the great Thisbite, who on fiery wheels
 Rode up to Heaven, yet once again to come.
 Therefore, as those young prophets then with care
 Sought lost Elijah, so in each place these Nigh to Bethabara, in Jericho
 The city of palms, Ænon, and Salem¹ old,
 Machærus,² and each town or city wall'd
 On this side the broad lake Genezaret,
 Or in Peræa ; but return'd in vain.
 Then on the bank of Jordan, by a creek,
 Where winds with reeds and osiers whispering play,
 Plain fishermen (no greater men them call),
 Close in a cottage low together got,
 Their unexpected loss and complaints out breath'd.

Alas, from what high hope to what relapse
 Unlook'd-for are we fallen ! our eyes beheld
 Messiah certainly now come, so long
 Expected of our fathers ; we have heard
 His words, his wisdom full of grace and truth ;
 Now, now, for sure, deliverance is at hand,
 The kingdom shall to Israel be restor'd ;
 Thus we rejoic'd, but soon our joy is turn'd
 Into perplexity and new amaze :
 For whither is he gone, what accident
 Hath rapt him from us ? will he now retire
 After appearance, and again prolong
 Our expectation ? God of Israël,
 Send thy Messiah forth, the time is come !

Behold the kings of the earth, how they oppress
 Thy chosen ; to what highth their power unjust
 They have exalted, and behind them cast
 All fear of thee ; arise, and vindicate
 Thy glory ; free thy people from their yoke !
 But let us wait ; thus far He hath perform'd,
 Sent his Anointed, and to us reveal'd him,
 By his great Prophet, pointed at and shown
 In publick, and with him we have convers'd ;
 Let us be glad of this, and all our fears
 Lay on his Providence ; He will not fail,
 Nor will withdraw him now, nor will recall,
 Mock us with his blest sight, then snatch him hence ;
 Soon we shall see our Hope, our Joy, return.

Thus they, out of their plaints, new hope resume
 To find whom at the first they found unsought :
 But, to his mother Mary, when she saw
 Others return'd from Baptism, not her Son,
 Nor left at Jordan, tidings of him none,
 Within her breast though calm, her breast though pure,
 Motherly cares and fears got head, and rais'd
 Some troubled thoughts, which she in sighs thus clad.

O, what avails me now that honour high
 To have conceiv'd of God, or that salute,
 "Hail, highly favour'd, among women blest !"
 While I to sorrows am no less advanc'd ;
 And fears as eminent, above the lot
 Of other women, by the birth I bore ;
 In such a season born, when scarce a shed
 Could be obtain'd to shelter him or me
 From the bleak air ; a stable was our warmth,
 A manger his ; yet soon enforc'd to fly
 Thence into Egypt, till the murderous king
 Were dead, who sought his life, and missing fill'd

With infant blood the streets of Bethlehem ;
From Egypt home return'd, in Nazareth
Hath been our dwelling many years ; his life
Private, unactive, calm, contemplative,
Little suspicious to any king ; but now,
Full grown to man, acknowledg'd, as I hear,
By John the Baptist, and in public shown,
Son own'd from Heaven by his Father's voice,
I look'd for some great change ; to honour ? no ;
But trouble, as old Simeon plain foretold,
That to the fall and rising he should be
Of many in Israël, and to a sign
Spoken against, that through my very soul
A sword shall pierce : This is my favour'd lot,
My exaltation to afflictions high ;
Afflicted I may be, it seems, and blest ;
I will not argue that, nor will repine.
But where delays he now ? some great intent
Conceals him : When twelve years he scarce had seen,
I lost him, but so found, as well I saw
He could not lose himself, but went about
His Father's business : what he meant I mused,
Since understand ; much more his absence now
Thus long to some great purpose he obscures.
But I to wait with patience am inur'd ;
My heart hath been a storehouse long of things
And sayings laid up, portending strange events.

Thus Mary, pondering oft, and oft to mind
Recalling what remarkably had pass'd
Since first her salutation heard, with thoughts
Meekly compos'd awaited the fulfilling :
The while her Son, tracing the desert wild,
Sole, but with holiest meditations fed,
Into himself descended, and at once

All his great work to come before him set ;
How to begin, how to accomplish best
His end of being on earth, and mission high :
For Satan, with sly preface to return,
Had left him vacant, and with speed was gone
Up to the middle region of thick air,
Where all his potentates in council sat ;
There, without sign of boast, or sign of joy,
Solicitous, and blank, he thus began.

Princes, Heaven's ancient Sons, ethereal Thrones ;
Demonian Spirits now, from the element
Each of his reign allotted, rightlier call'd
Powers of fire, air, water, and earth beneath !
(So may we hold our place and these mild seats
Without new trouble), such an enemy
Is risen to invade us, who no less
Threatens than our expulsion down to Hell ;
I, as I undertook, and with the vote
Consenting in full frequency was impower'd,
Have found him, view'd him, tasted him ; but find
Far other labour to be undergone
Than when I dealt with Adam, first of Men,
Though Adam by his wife's allurement fell,
However to this Man inferiour far ;
If he be Man by mother's side, at least
With more than human gifts from Heaven adorn'd,
Perfections absolute, graces divine,
And amplitude of mind to greatest deeds,
Therefore I am return'd, lest confidence
Of my success with Eve in Paradise
Deceive ye to persuasion over-sure
Of like succeeding here : I summon all
Rather to be in readiness, with hand

Or counsel to assist ; lest I, who erst
Thought none my equal, now be over-match'd.

So spake the old Serpent, doubting ; and from all
With clamour was assured their utmost aid
At his command : when from amidst them rose
Belial, the dissolutes Spirit that fell,
The sensuallest, and, after Asmodai,¹
The fleshliest Incubus ; and thus advis'd.

Set women in his eye, and in his walk,
Among daughters of men the fairest found :
Many are in each region passing fair
As the noon sky ; more like to goddesses
Than mortal creatures ; graceful and discreet ;
Expert in amorous arts, enchanting tongues
Persuasive, virgin majesty with mild
And sweet allay'd, yet terrible to approach ;
Skill'd to retire, and, in retiring, draw
Hearts after them tangled in amorous nets.
Such object hath the power to soften and tame
Severest temper, smooth the rugged'st brow,
Enerve, and with voluptuous hope dissolve,
Draw out with credulous desire, and lead
At will the manliest, resolute'st breast,
As the magnetick hardest iron draws.
Women, when nothing else, beguil'd the heart
Of wisest Solomon, and made him build,
And made him bow, to the gods of his wives.

To whom quick answer Satan thus return'd.
Belial, in much uneven scale thou weigh'st
All others by thyself ; because of old
Thou thyself doat'dst on womankind, admiring
Their shape, their colour, and attractive grace,
None are, thou think'st, but taken with such toys.

Before the Flood thou with thy lusty crew,
 False titled sons of God, roaming the earth,
 Cast wanton eyes on the daughters of men,
 And coupled with them, and begot a race.
 Have we not seen, or by relation heard,
 In courts and regal chambers how thou lurk'st
 In wood or grove, by mossy fountain side,
 In valley or green meadow, to way-lay
 Some beauty rare, Calisto,¹ Clymene,
 Daphne, or Semele, Antiopa,
 Or Amymone, Syrinx, many more
 Too long ; then lay'st thy scapes on names adored,
 Apollo, Neptune, Jupiter, or Pan,
 Satyr, or Faun, or Sylvan ? But these haunts
 Delight not all ; among the sons of men,
 How many have with a smile made small account
 Of Beauty and her lures, easily scorn'd
 All her assaults, on worthier things intent !
 Remember that Pellean² conquerour,
 A youth, how all the beauties of the East
 He slightly view'd, and slightly overpass'd ;
 How he, surnamed of Africa,³ dismiss'd,
 In his prime youth, the fair Iberian maid.
 For Solomon, he liv'd at ease, and full
 Of honour, wealth, high fare, aim'd not beyond
 Higher design than to enjoy his state ;
 Thence to the bait of women lay expos'd :
 But he, whom we attempt, is wiser far
 Than Solomon, of more exalted mind,
 Made and set wholly on the accomplishment
 Of greatest things. What woman will you find,
 Though of this age the wonder and the fame,

¹ 'Calisto' and the rest : see Ovid.—² 'Pellean : ' Alexander the Great, after the battle of Issus.—³ 'Of Africa : ' Scipio Africanus.

On whom his leisure will vouchsafe an eye
Of fond desire ? Or should she, confident,
As sitting queen ador'd on Beauty's throne,
Descend with all her winning charms begirt
To enamour, as the zone of Venus once
Wrought that effect on Jove, so fables tell ;
How would one look from his majestick brow,
Seated as on the top of Virtue's hill,
Discountenance her despised, and put to rout
All her array ; her female pride deject,
Or turn to reverent awe ! for Beauty stands
In the admiration only of weak minds
Led captive ; cease to admire, and all her plumes
Fall flat, and shrink into a trivial toy,
At every sudden slighting quite abash'd.
Therefore with manlier objects we must try
His constancy ; with such as have more show
Of worth, of honour, glory, and popular praise,
Rocks, whereon greatest men have ofttest wreck'd ;
Or that which only seems to satisfy
Lawful desires of nature, not beyond ;
And now I know he hungers, where no food
Is to be found, in the wide wilderness :
The rest commit to me ; I shall let pass
No advantage, and his strength as oft assay.

He ceas'd, and heard their grant in loud acclaim ;
Then forthwith to him takes a chosen band
Of Spirits, likest to him in guile,
To be at hand, and at his beck appear,
If cause were to unfold some active scene
Of various persons, each to know his part :
Then to the desert takes with these his flight ;
Where, still from shade to shade, the Son of God,

After forty days' fasting, had remain'd,
Now hungering first, and to himself thus said.

Where will this end ? four times ten days I've pass'd
Wandering this woody maze, and human food
Nor tasted, nor had appetite ; that fast
To virtue I impute not, or count part
Of what I suffer here ; if nature need not,
Or God support nature without repast
Though needing, what praise is it to endure ?
But now I feel I hunger, which declares
Nature hath need of what she asks ; yet God
Can satisfy that need some other way,
Though hunger still remain : so it remain
Without this body's wasting, I content me,
And from the sting of famine fear no harm ;
Nor mind it, fed with better thoughts, that feed
Me hungering more to do my Father's will.

It was the hour of night, when thus the Son
Commun'd in silent walk, then laid him down
Under the hospitable covert nigh
Of trees thick interwoven ; there he slept,
And dream'd, as appetite is wont to dream,
Of meats and drinks, nature's refreshment sweet :
Him thought, he by the brook of Cherith stood,
And saw the ravens with their horny beaks
Food to Elijah bringing, even and morn,
Though ravenous, taught to abstain from what they brought :
He saw the Prophet also, how he fled
Into the desart, and how there he slept
Under a juniper : and how, awak'd,
He found his supper on the coals prepar'd,
And by the Angel was bid rise and eat,
And eat the second time after repose,
The strength whereof sufficed him forty days :

Sometimes that with Elijah he partook,
Or as a guest with Daniel at his pulse.
Thus wore out night ; and now the herald lark
Left his ground-nest, high towering to descry
The Morn's approach, and greet her with his song :
As lightly from his grassy couch up rose
Our Saviour, and found all was but a dream ;
Fasting he went to sleep, and fasting wak'd,
Up to a hill anon his steps he rear'd,
From whose high top to ken the prospect round,
If cottage were in view, sheepcote, or herd ;
But cottage, herd, or sheepcote, none he saw ;
Only in a bottom saw a pleasant grove,
With chant of tuneful birds resounding loud ;
Thither he bent his way, determined there
To rest at noon ; and enter'd soon the shade
High-roof'd, and walks beneath, and alleys brown,
That open'd in the midst a woody scene ;
Nature's own work it seem'd, Nature-taught Art,
And, to a superstitious eye the haunt
Of wood-gods and wood-nymphs : he view'd it round,
When suddenly a man before him stood ;
Not rustick as before, but seemlier clad,
As one in city, or court, or palace bred,
And with fair speech these words to him address'd.

With granted leave officious I return,
But much more wonder that the Son of God
In this wild solitude so long should bide,
Of all things destitute : and, well I know,
Not without hunger. Others of some note,
As story tells, have trod this wilderness ;
The fugitive bond-woman, with her son

By a providing Angel ; all the race
 Of Israel here had famish'd, had not God
 Rain'd from Heaven manna : and that Prophet¹ bold,
 Native of Thebez, wandering here was fed
 Twice by a voice inviting him to eat :
 Of thee these forty days none hath regard,
 Forty and more deserted here indeed.

To whom thus Jesus. What conclud'st thou hence ?
 They all had need ; I, as thou seest, have none.

How hast thou hunger then ? Satan replied.
 Tell me, if food were now before thee set,
 Wouldst thou not eat ?—Thereafter as I like
 The giver, answer'd Jesus.—Why should that Cause thy refusal ? said the subtle Fiend.
 Hast thou not right to all created things ?
 Owe not all creatures by just right to thee
 Duty and service, nor to stay till bid,
 But tender all their power ? Nor mention I
 Meats by the law unclean, or offer'd first
 To idols, those young Daniel could refuse ;
 Nor proffer'd by an enemy, though who
 Would scruple that, with want oppress'd ? Behold,
 Nature asham'd, or, better to express,
 Troubled, that thou shouldst hunger, hath purvey'd
 From all the elements her choicest store,
 To treat thee, as beseems, and as her Lord,
 With honour : only deign to sit and eat.

He spake no dream : for as his words had end,
 Our Saviour lifting up his eyes beheld,
 In ample space under the broadest shade,
 A table richly spread, in regal mode,
 With dishes pil'd, and meats of noblest sort
 And savour ; beast of chase, or fowl of game,

In pastry built, or from the spit, or boil'd,
 Gris-amber-steam'd ; all fish, from sea or shore,
 Freshet¹ or purling brook, of shell or fin,
 And exquisitest name, for which was drain'd
 Pontus,² and Lucrine bay,³ and Africk coast (Alas, how simple to these cates compared,
 Was that crude apple that diverted Eve !)
 And at a stately side-board, by the wine
 That fragrant smell diffus'd, in order stood
 Tall stripling youths rich clad, of fairer hue
 Than Ganymed⁴ or Hylas ;⁵ distant more
 Under the trees now tripp'd, now solemn stood,
 Nymphs of Diana's train, and Naiades
 With fruits and flowers from Amalthea's⁶ horn,
 And ladies of the Hesperides, that seem'd
 Fairer than feign'd of old or fabled since
 Of faery damsels, met in forest wide
 By knights of Logres, or of Lyones,
 Lancelot,⁷ or Pelleas, or Pellenore.
 And all the while harmonious airs were heard
 Of chiming strings, or charming pipes ; and winds
 Of gentlest gale Arabian odours fann'd
 From their soft wings, and Flora's earliest smells
 Such was the splendour ; and the Tempter now
 His invitation earnestly renew'd.

What doubts the Son of God to sit and eat ?
 These are not fruits forbidden ; no interdict
 Defends the touching of these viands pure ;
 Their taste no knowledge works, at least of evil,
 But life preserves, destroys life's enemy,
 Hunger, with sweet restorative delight.

All these are Spirits of air, and woods, and springs,
 Thy gentle ministers, who come to pay
 Thee homage, and acknowledge thee their Lord :
 What doubt'st thou, Son of God ? Sit down and eat.

To whom thus Jesus temperately replied :
 Said'st thou not that to all things I had right ?
 And who withholds my power that right to use ?
 Shall I receive by gift what of my own,
 When and where likes me best, I can command ?
 I can at will, doubt not, as soon as thou,
 Command a table in this wilderness,
 And call swift flights of Angels ministrant
 Array'd in glory on my cup to attend ;
 Why shouldst thou then obtrude this diligence,
 In vain, where no acceptance it can find ?
 And with my hunger what hast thou to do ?
 Thy pompous delicacies I contemn,
 And count thy specious gifts no gifts, but guiles.

To whom thus answer'd Satan malecontent.
 That I have also power to give, thou seest ;
 If of that power I bring thee voluntary
 What I might have bestow'd on whom I pleas'd,
 And rather opportunely in this place
 Chose to impart to thy apparent need,
 Why shouldst thou not accept it ? but I see
 What I can do or offer is suspect ;
 Of these things others quickly will dispose,
 Whose pains have earn'd the far-fet¹ spoil. With that Both table and provision vanish'd quite
 With sound of harpies' wings and talons heard :
 Only the impórtune Tempter still remain'd,
 And with these words his temptation pursued.

By hunger, that each other creature tames,

Thou art not to be harm'd, therefore not mov'd ;
 Thy temperance, invincible besides,
 For no allurement yields to appetite ;
 And all thy heart is set on high designs,
 High actions : but wherewith to be achiev'd ?
 Great acts require great means of enterprise ;
 Thou art unknown, unfriended, low of birth,
 A carpenter thy father known, thyself
 Bred up in poverty and straits at home,
 Lost in a desert here and hunger-bit :
 Which way, or from what hope, dost thou aspire
 To greatness ? whence authority deriv'st ?
 What followers, what retinue canst thou gain,
 Or at thy heels the dizzy multitude,
 Longer than thou canst feed them on thy cost ?
 Money brings honour, friends, conquest, and realms :
 What rais'd Antipater¹ the Edomite,
 And his son Herod placed on Judah's throne,
 Thy throne, but gold that got him puissant friends ?
 Therefore, if at great things thou wouldst arrive,
 Get riches first, get wealth, and treasure heap,
 Not difficult, if thou hearken to me :
 Riches are mine, fortune is in my hand ;
 They whom I favour thrive in wealth amain,
 While virtue, valour, wisdom, sit in want.
 To whom thus Jesus patiently replied.
 Yet wealth, without these three is impotent
 To gain dominion, or to keep it gain'd.
 Witness those ancient empires of the earth,
 In highth of all their flowing wealth dissolv'd :
 But men endued with these have oft attain'd
 In lowest poverty to highest deeds ;
 Gideon, and Jephtha, and the shepherd lad,²

Whose offspring on the throne of Judah sat
 So many ages, and shall yet regain
 That seat, and reign in Israel without end.
 Among the Heathen (for throughout the world
 To me is not unknown what hath been done
 Worthy of memorial), canst thou not remember
 Quintius,¹ Fabricius, Curius,² Regulus?
 For I esteem those names of men so poor,
 Who could do mighty things, and could contemn
 Riches, though offer'd from the hand of kings.
 And what in me seems wanting, but that I
 May also in this poverty as soon
 Accomplish what they did, perhaps and more?
 Extol not riches then, the toil of fools,
 The wise man's cumbrance, if not snare; more apt
 To slacken Virtue, and abate her edge,
 Than prompt her to do aught may merit praise.
 What if with like aversion I reject
 Riches and realms? yet not, for that a crown,
 Golden in show, is but a wreath of thorns,
 Brings dangers, troubles, cares, and sleepless nights,
 To him who wears the regal diadem,
 When on his shoulders each man's burden lies;
 For therein stands the office of a king,
 His honour, virtue, merit, and chief praise,
 That for the publick all this weight he bears.
 Yet he, who reigns within himself, and rules
 Passions, desires, and fears, is more a king;
 Which every wise and virtuous man attains;
 And who attains not, ill aspires to rule
 Cities of men, or headstrong multitudes,
 Subject himself to anarchy within,
 Or lawless passions in him, which he serves.

But to guide nations in the way of truth
By saving doctrine, and from error lead
To know, and knowing worship God aright,
Is yet more kingly; this attracts the soul,
Governs he inner man, the nobler part;
That other o'er the body only reigns,
And oft by force, which, to a generous mind,
So reigning, can be no sincere delight.
Besides, to give a kingdom hath been thought
Greater and nobler done, and to lay down
Far more magnanimous, than to assume.
Riches are needless then, both for themselves,
And for thy reason why they should be sought,
To gain a scepter, ofttest better miss'd.

BOOK III.

THE ARGUMENT.

Satan, in a speech of much flattering commendation, endeavours to awaken in Jesus a passion for glory, by particularizing various instances of conquests achieved, and great actions performed, by persons at an early period of life. Our Lord replies, by showing the vanity of worldly fame, and the improper means by which it is generally attained; and contrasts with it the true glory of religious patience and virtuous wisdom, as exemplified in the character of Job. Satan justifies the love of glory from the example of God himself, who requires it from all his creatures. Jesus detects the fallacy of this argument, by showing that, as goodness is the true ground on which glory is due to the great Creator of all things, sinful Man can have no right whatever to it.—Satan then urges our Lord respecting his claim to the throne of David; he tells him that the kingdom of Judea, being at that time a province of Rome, cannot be got possession of without much personal exertion on his part, and presses him to lose no time in beginning to reign. Jesus refers him to the time allotted for this, as for all other things; and, after intimating somewhat respecting his own previous sufferings, asks Satan, why he should be so solicitous for the exaltation of one, whose rising was destined to be his fall. Satan replies, that his own desperate state, by excluding all hope, leaves little room for fear; and that, as his own punishment was equally doomed, he is not interested in preventing the reign of one, from whose apparent benevolence he might rather hope for some interference in his favour.—Satan still pursues his former incitements; and, supposing that the seeming reluctance of Jesus to be thus advanced might arise from his being unacquainted with the world and its glories, conveys him to the summit of a high mountain, and from thence shows him most of the kingdoms of Asia, particularly pointing out to his notice some extraordinary military preparations of the Parthians to resist the incursions of the Scythians. He then informs our Lord, that he showed him this purposely, that he might see how necessary military exertions are to retain the possession of kingdoms, as well as to subdue them at first; and advises him to consider how impossible it was to maintain Judea against two such powerful neighbours as the Romans and Parthians, and how necessary it would be to form an alliance with one or other of them. At the same time he recommends, and engages to secure to him, that of the Parthians; and tells him that by this means his power will be defended from any thing that Rome or Cæsar might attempt against it, and that he will be able to extend his glory wide, and especially to accomplish, what was particularly necessary to make the throne of Judea really the throne of David, the deliverance and restoration of the ten tribes, still in a state of captivity. Jesus having briefly noticed the vanity of military efforts, and the weakness of the arm of flesh, says that when the time comes for ascending his allotted throne, he shall not be alack: he remarks on Satan's extraordinary zeal for the deliverance of the Israelites, to whom he had always showed himself an enemy, and declares their servitude to be the consequence of their idolatry; but adds, that at a future time it may perhaps please God to recall them, and restore them to their liberty and native land.

So spake the Son of God; and Satan stood
 Awhile, as mute, confounded what to say,
 What to reply, confuted, and convinc'd
 Of his weak arguing and fallacious drift;
 At length, collecting all his serpent wiles,
 With soothing words renew'd, him thus accosts.

I see thou know'st what is of use to know,
 What best to say canst say, to do canst do;
 Thy actions to thy words accord; thy words
 To thy large heart give utterance due; thy heart
 Contains of good, wise, just, the perfect shape.
 Should kings and nations from thy mouth consult,
 Thy counsel would be as the oracle
 Urim and Thummim, those oraculous gems
 On Aaron's breast; or tongue of seers old
 Infallible: Or wert thou sought to deeds
 That might require the array of war, thy skill
 Of conduct would be such, that all the world
 Could not sustain thy prowess, or subsist
 In battle, though against thy few in arms.
 These Godlike virtues wherefore dost thou hide,
 Affecting private life, or more obscure
 In savage wilderness? Wherefore deprive
 All Earth her wonder at thy acts, thyself
 The fame and glory; glory, the reward
 That sole excites to high attempts, the flame
 Of most erected spirits, most temper'd pure
 Ethereal, who all pleasures else despise,

All treasures and all gain esteem as dross,
 And dignities and powers all but the highest ?
 Thy years are ripe, and over-ripe ; the son
 Of Macedonian Philip had ere these
 Won Asia, and the throne of Cyrus held
 At his dispose ; young Scipio had brought down
 The Carthaginian pride ; young Pompey quell'd
 The Pontick king, and in triúmph had rode.
 Yet years, and to ripe years judgment mature,
 Quench not the thirst of glory, but augment.
 Great Julius, whom now all the world admires,
 The more he grew in years, the more inflamed
 With glory, wept¹ that he had liv'd so long
 Inglorious : But thou yet art not too late.

To whom our Saviour calmly thus replied :
 Thou neither dost persuade me to seek wealth
 For empire's sake, nor empire to affect
 For glory's sake, by all thy argument.
 For what is glory but the blaze of fame,
 The people's praise, if always praise unmix'd ?
 And what the people but a herd confus'd,
 A miscellaneous rabble who extol
 Things vulgar, and, well weigh'd, scarce worth the praise ?
 They praise, and they admire, they know not what,
 And know not whom, but as one leads the other ;
 And what delight to be by such extoll'd,
 To live upon their tongues, and be their talk,
 Of whom to be disprais'd were no small praise ?
 His lot who dares be singularly good.
 The intelligent among them and the wise
 Are few, and glory scarce of few is rais'd.
 This is true glory and renown, when God
 Looking on the earth, with approbation marks

The just man, and divulges him through Heaven
To all his Angels, who with true applause
Recount his praises: thus he did to Job,
When, to extend his fame through Heaven and Earth,
As thou to thy reproach may'st well remember,
He ask'd thee, "Hast thou seen my servant Job?"
Famous he was in Heaven, on Earth less known;
Where glory is false glory, attributed
To things not glorious, men not worthy of fame.
They err, who count it glorious to subdue
By conquest far and wide, to over-run
Large countries, and in field great battles win,
Great cities by assault: What do these worthies,
But rob and spoil, burn, slaughter, and enslave
Peaceable nations, neighbouring, or remote,
Made captive, yet deserving freedom more
Than those their conquerours, who leave behind
Nothing but ruin wheresoe'er they rove.
And all the flourishing works of peace destroy;
Then swell with pride, and must be titled gods,
Great benefactors of mankind, deliverers,
Worshipp'd with temple, priest, and sacrifice?
One¹ is the Son of Jove, of Mars the other;²
Till conquerour Death discover them scarce men,
Rolling in brutish vices, and deform'd,
Violent or shameful death their due reward.
But if there be in glory aught of good,
It may by means far different be attain'd,
Without ambition, war, or violence;
By deeds of peace, by wisdom eminent,
By patience, temperance: I mention still
Him, whom thy wrongs, with saintly patience borne,
Made famous in a land and times obscure;

Who names not now with honour patient Job ?
 Poor Socrates, (who next more memorable ?)
 By what he taught, and suffer'd for so doing,
 For truth's sake suffering death, unjust, lives now
 Equal in fame to proudest conquerours.
 Yet if for fame and glory aught be done,
 Aught suffer'd ; if young African¹ for fame
 His wasted country freed from Punick rage ;
 The deed becomes unpraised, the man at least,
 And loses, though but verbal, his reward.
 Shall I seek glory then, as vain men seek,
 Oft not deserv'd ? I seek not mine, but his
 Who sent me ; and thereby witness whence I am.

To whom the Tempter murmuring thus replied.
 Think not so slight of glory ; therein least
 Resembling thy Great Father : He seeks glory,
 And for his glory all things made, all things
 Orders and governs ; not content in Heaven
 By all his Angels glorified, requires
 Glory from men, from all men, good or bad,
 Wise or unwise, no difference, no exemption ;
 Above all sacrifice, or hallow'd gift,
 Glory he requires, and glory he receives,
 Promiscuous from all nations, Jew or Greek,
 Or barbarous, nor exception hath declar'd ;
 From us, his foes pronounc'd, glory he exacts.

To whom our Saviour fervently replied.
 And reason ; since his Word all things produc'd,
 Though chiefly not for glory as prime end,
 But to show forth his goodness, and impart
 His good communicable to every soul
 Freely ; of whom what could he less expect
 Than glory and benediction, that is, thanks,

The slightest, easiest, readiest recompense
From them who could return him nothing else,
And, not returning that, would likeliest render
Contempt instead, dishonour, obloquy ?
Hard recompense, unsuitable return
For so much good, so much beneficence !
But why should man seek glory, who of his own
Hath nothing, and to whom nothing belongs,
But condemnation, ignominy, and shame ?
Who, for so many benefits receiv'd,
Turn'd recreant to God, ingrate and false,
And so of all true good himself despoil'd ;
Yet, sacrilegious, to himself would take
That which to God alone of right belongs :
Yet so much bounty is in God, such grace,
That who advance his glory not their own,
Them he himself to glory will advance.

So spake the Son of God ; and here again
Satan had not to answer, but stood struck
With guilt of his own sin ; for he himself,
Insatiable of glory, had lost all ;
Yet of another plea bethought him soon.

Of glory, as thou wilt, said he, so deem :
Worth or not worth the seeking, let it pass.
But to a kingdom thou art born, ordain'd
To sit upon thy father David's throne,
By mother's side thy father ; though thy right
Be now in powerful hands, that will not part
Easily from possession won with arms :
Judæa now and all the Promis'd Land,
Reduc'd a province under Roman yoke,
Obeys Tiberius ; nor is always rul'd
With temperate sway ; oft have they violated
The temple, oft the law, with foul affronts,

Abominations rather, as did once
 Antiochus: And think'st thou to regain
 Thy right, by sitting still, or thus retiring?
 So did not Maccabeus: he indeed
 Retired unto the desert, but with arms;
 And o'er a mighty king so oft prevail'd,
 That by strong hand his family obtain'd,
 Though priests, the crown, and David's throne usurp'd
 With Modin¹ and her suburbs once content.
 If kingdom move thee not, let move thee zeal
 And duty; zeal and duty are not slow,
 But on occasion's forelock watchful wait:
 They themselves rather are occasion best;
 Zeal of thy father's house, duty to free
 Thy country from her Heathen servitude.
 So shalt thou best fulfil, best verify
 The Prophets old, who sung thy endless reign;
 The happier reign, the sooner it begins:
 Reign then; what canst thou better do the while?
 To whom our Saviour answer thus return'd.
 All things are best fulfill'd in their due time;
 And time there is for all things, Truth hath said.
 If of my reign Prophetick Writ hath told,
 That it shall never end, so, when begin,
 The Father in his purpose hath decreed;
 He, in whose hand all times and seasons roll.
 What if he hath decreed that I shall first
 Be tried in humble state, and things adverse,
 By tribulations, injuries, insults,
 Contempts, and scorns, and snares, and violence,
 Suffering, abstaining, quietly expecting,
 Without distrust or doubt, that he may know
 What I can suffer, how obey? Who best

Can suffer, best can do; best reign, who first
Well hath obey'd; just trial, ere I merit
My exaltation without change or end.
But what concerns it thee, when I begin
My everlasting kingdom? Why art thou
Solicitous? What moves thy inquisition?
Know'st thou not that my rising is thy fall,
And my promotion will be thy destruction?

To whom the Tempter, inly rack'd, replied.
Let that come when it comes; all hope is lost
Of my reception into grace: what worse?
For where no hope is left, is left no fear:
If there be worse, the expectation more
Of worse torments me than the feeling can.
I would be at the worst; worst is my port,
My harbour, and my ultimate repose:
The end I would attain, my final good.
My error was my error, and my crime
My crime; whatever, for itself condemn'd;
And will alike be punish'd, whether thou
Reign, or reign not; though to that gentle brow
Willingly could I fly, and hope thy reign,
From that placid aspect and meek regard,
Rather than aggravate my evil state,
Would stand between me and thy Father's ire,
(Whose ire I dread more than the fire of hell),
A shelter, and a kind of shading cool
Interposition, as a summer's cloud.
If I then to the worst that can be haste,
Why move thy feet so slow to what is best,
Happiest, both to thyself and all the world,
That thou, who worthiest art, shouldst be their king?
Perhaps thou linger'st, in deep thoughts detain'd
Of the enterprise so hazardous and high;

No wonder; for, though in thee be united
 What of perfection can in man be found,
 Or human nature can receive, consider,
 Thy life hath yet been private, most part spent
 At home, scarce view'd the Galilean towns,
 And once a year Jerusalem, few days'
 Short sojourn; and what thence couldst thou observe?
 The world thou hast not seen, much less her glory,
 Empires, and monarchs, and their radiant courts,
 Best school of best experience, quickest insight
 In all things that to greatest actions lead.
 The wisest, unexperienc'd, will be ever
 Timorous and loth, with novice modesty
 (As he¹ who, seeking asses, found a kingdom),
 Irresolute, unhardy, unadventurous :
 But I will bring thee where thou soon shalt quit
 Those rudiments, and see before thine eyes
 The monarchies of the earth, their pomp and state ;
 Sufficient introduction to inform
 Thee, of thyself so apt, in regal arts,
 And regal mysteries; that thou may'st know
 How best their opposition to withstand.

With that, (such power was given him then,) he took
 The Son of God up to a mountain² high.
 It was a mountain at whose verdant feet
 A spacious plain, outstretch'd in circuit wide,
 Lay pleasant ; from his side two rivers³ flow'd,
 The one winding, the other straight, and left between
 Fair champain with less rivers intervein'd,
 Then meeting join'd their tribute to the sea :
 Fertile of corn the glebe, of oil, and wine ;
 With herds the pastures throng'd, with flocks the hills ;

¹ 'He : ' Saul.—² 'A mountain : ' Niphates ; see 8th book of Paradise Lost.—
³ 'Two rivers : ' Tigris and Euphrates.

Huge cities and high-tower'd, that well might seem
 The seats of mightiest monarchs ; and so large
 The prospect was, that here and there was room
 For barren desart, fountainless and dry.
 To this high mountain top the Tempter brought
 Our Saviour, and new train of words began.

Well have we speeded, and o'er hill and dale,
 Forest, and field, and flood, temples and towers,
 Cut shorter many a league : here thou behold'st
 Assyria, and her empire's ancient bounds,
 Araxes and the Caspian lake ; thence on
 As far as Indus east, Euphrates west,
 And oft beyond : to south the Persian bay,
 And, inaccessible, the Arabian drouth :¹
 Here Nineveh, of length within her wall
 Several days' journey, built by Ninus old,
 Of that first golden monarchy the seat,
 And seat of Salmanassar,² whose success
 Israel in long captivity still mourns ;
 There Babylon, the wonder of all tongues,
 As ancient, but rebuilt by him who twice
 Judah, and all thy father David's house
 Led captive, and Jerusalem laid waste,
 Till Cyrus set them free ; Persepolis,
 His city, there thou seest, and Bactra³ there ;
 Ecbatana her structure vast there shows,
 And Hecatompylos her hundred gates ;
 There Susa by Choaspes,⁴ amber stream,
 The drink of none but kings ; of later fame,
 Built by Emathian⁵ or by Parthian hands,
 The great Seleucia,⁶ Nisibis, and there

 —³ 'Persepolis,' 'Bactra : ' chief cities in Persia.—⁴ 'Choaspes : ' or Ulai, the waters of which were sacred to the use of kings.—⁵ 'Emathian : ' i. e., Macedonian.—⁶ 'Seleucia,' &c. : cities on Tigris.

Artaxata, Teredon, Ctesiphon,
 Turning with easy eye, thou may'st behold.
 All these the Parthian (now some ages past,
 By great Arsaces led, who founded first
 That empire), under his dominion holds,
 From the luxurious kings¹ of Antioch won.
 And just in time thou com'st to have a view
 Of his great power ; for now the Parthian king
 In Ctesiphon hath gather'd all his host
 Against the Scythian, whose incursions wild
 Have wasted Sogdiana ; to her aid
 He marches now in haste ; see, though from far,
 His thousands, in what martial equipage
 They issue forth, steel bows and shafts their arms,
 Of equal dread in flight, or in pursuit ;
 All horsemen, in which fight they most excel ;
 See how in warlike muster they appear,
 In rhombs,² and wedges, and half-moons, and wings.
 He look'd, and saw what numbers numberless
 The city gates out-pour'd, light-armed troops,
 In coats of mail and military pride ;
 In mail their horses clad, yet fleet and strong,
 Prauncing their riders bore, the flower, and choice
 Of many provinces from bound to bound ;
 From Arachosia,³ from Candaor east,
 And Margiana to the Hyrcanian cliffs
 Of Caucasus, and dark Iberian dales ;
 From Atropatia and the neighbouring plains
 Of Adiabene, Media, and the south
 Of Susiana, to Balsara's⁴ haven.
 He saw them in their forms of battle rang'd,
 How quick they wheel'd, and flying behind him shot

¹ 'Luxurious kings:' the Antiochi.—² 'Rhomb:' a phalanx with four equal sides.—³ 'Arachosia,' &c. : all provinces in Parthia.—⁴ 'Balsara:' Basra.

Sharp fleet of arrowy showers against the face
 Of their pursuers, and overcame by flight ;
 The field all iron cast a gleaming brown :
 Nor wanted clouds of foot, nor on each horn
 Cuirassiers all in steel for standing fight,
 Chariots, or elephants indors'd with towers
 Of archers ; nor of labouring pioneers
 A multitude, with spades and axes arm'd
 To lay hills plain, fell woods, or valleys fill,
 Or where plain was raise hill, or overlay
 With bridges rivers proud, as with a yoke ;
 Mules after these, camels and dromedaries,
 And waggons fraught with utensils of war.
 Such forces met not, nor so wide a camp,
 When Agrican¹ with all his northern powers
 Besieged Albracca, as romances tell,
 The city of Gallaphrone, from whence to win
 The fairest of her sex Angelica,
 His daughter, sought by many prowest knights,
 Both Paynim, and the peers of Charlemain.
 Such and so numerous was their chivalry :
 At sight whereof the Fiend yet more presum'd,
 And to our Saviour thus his words renew'd.

That thou may'st know I seek not to engage
 Thy virtue, and not every way secure
 On no slight grounds thy safety ; hear, and mark,
 To what end I have brought thee hither, and shown
 All this fair sight : Thy kingdom, though foretold
 By Prophet or by Angel, unless thou
 Endeavour, as thy father David did,
 Thou never shalt obtain ; prediction still
 In all things, and all men, supposes means ;

¹ 'Agrican,' &c. : fabled heroes of romance ; see Boiardo's 'Orlando Innamorato.'

Without means used, what it predicts revokes.
 But say thou wert possess'd of David's throne,
 By free consent of all, none opposite,
 Samaritan or Jew, how could'st thou hope
 Long to enjoy it, quiet and secure,
 Between two such enclosing enemies,
 Roman and Parthian? Therefore one of these
 Thou must make sure thy own; the Parthian first
 By my advice, as nearer, and of late
 Found able by invasion to annoy
 Thy country, and captive lead away her kings,
 Antigonus¹ and old Hyrcanus, bound,
 Maugre the Roman: It shall be my task
 To render thee the Parthian at dispose,
 Choose which thou wilt, by conquest or by league:
 By him thou shalt regain, without him not,
 That which alone can truly re-install thee
 In David's royal seat, his true successour,
 Deliverance of thy brethren, those ten tribes,
 Whose offspring in his territory yet serve,
 In Habor,² and among the Medes dispers'd:
 Ten sons of Jacob, two of Joseph, lost
 Thus long from Israel, serving, as of old
 Their fathers in the land of Egypt serv'd,
 This offer sets before thee to deliver.
 These if from servitude thou shalt restore
 To their inheritance, then, nor till then,
 Thou on the throne of David in full glory,
 From Egypt to Euphrates, and beyond,
 Shalt reign, and Rome or Cæsar not need fear.

To whom our Saviour answer'd thus unmov'd.
 Much ostentation vain of fleshly arm
 And fragile arms, much instrument of war,

Long in preparing, soon to nothing brought,
Before mine eyes thou hast set; and in my ear
Vented much policy, and projects deep
Of enemies, of aids, battles and leagues,
Plausible to the world, to me worth nought.
Means I must use, thou say'st; prediction else
Will unpredict, and fail me of the throne :
My time I told thee (and that time for thee
Were better furthest off), is not yet come :
When that comes, think not thou to find me slack
On my part aught endeavouring, or to need
Thy politic maxims, or that cumbersome
Luggage of war there shown me, argument
Of human weakness rather than of strength.
My brethren, as thou call'st them, those ten tribes
I must deliver, if I mean to reign
David's true heir, and his full scepter sway
To just extent over all Israel's sons.
But whence to thee this zeal ? Where was it then
For Israel, or for David, or his throne,
When thou stood'st up his tempter to the pride
Of numbering Israël, which cost the lives
Of threescore and ten thousand Israelites
By three days' pestilence ? Such was thy zeal
To Israel then ; the same that now to me !
As for those captive tribes, themselves were they
Who wrought their own captivity, fell off
From God to worship calves, the deities
Of Egypt, Baal next and Ashtaroth,
And all the idolatries of Heathen round,
Besides their other worse than heathenish crimes ;
Nor in the land of their captivity
Humbled themselves, or penitent besought
The God of their forefathers ; but so died

Impenitent, and left a race behind
 Like to themselves, distinguishable scarce
 From Gentiles, but by circumcision vain;
 And God with idols in their worship join'd.
 Should I of these the liberty regard,
 Who, freed, as to their ancient patrimony,
 Unhumbled, unrepentant, unreform'd,
 Headlong would follow; and to their Gods perhaps
 Of Bethel and of Dan? No; let them serve
 Their enemies, who serve idols with God.
 Yet he at length (time to himself best known),
 Remembering Abraham, by some wondrous call
 May bring them back, repentant and sincere,
 And at their passing cleave the Assyrian flood,¹
 While to their native land with joy they haste;
 As the Red Sea and Jordan once he cleft,
 When to the Promised Land their fathers pass'd:
 To his due time and providence I leave them.
 So spake Israel's true King, and to the Fiend
 Made answer meet, that made void all his wiles.
 So fares it, when with truth falsehood contends.

BOOK IV.

THE ARGUMENT.

Satan, persisting in the temptation of our Lord, shows him Imperial Rome in its greatest pomp and splendour, as a power which he probably would prefer before that of the Parthians; and tells him that he might with the greatest ease expel Tiberius, restore the Romans to their liberty, and make himself master not only of the Roman Empire, but, by so doing, of the whole world, and inclusively of the throne of David. Our Lord, in reply, expresses his contempt of grandeur and worldly power; notices the luxury, vanity, and profligacy of the Romans, declaring how little they merited to be restored to that liberty, which they had lost by their misconduct, and briefly refers to the greatness of his own future kingdom. Satan, now desperate, to enhance the value of his proffered gifts, professes that the only terms on which he will bestow them, are our Saviour's falling down and worshipping him. Our Lord expresses a firm but temperate indignation at such a proposition, and rebukes the Tempter by the title of "Satan for ever damned." Satan, abashed, attempts to justify himself: he then assumes a new ground of temptation, and, proposing to Jesus the intellectual gratifications of wisdom and knowledge, points out to him the celebrated seat of ancient learning, Athens, its schools, and other various resorts of learned teachers and their disciples; accompanying the view with a highly-finished panegyric on the Grecian musicians, poets, orators, and philosophers of the different sects. Jesus replies, by showing the vanity and insufficiency of the boasted Heathen philosophy, and prefers to the music, poetry, eloquence, and didactic policy of the Greeks, those of the inspired Hebrew writers. Satan, irritated at the failure of all his attempts, upbraids the indiscretion of our Saviour in rejecting his offers; and, having, in ridicule of his expected kingdom, foretold the sufferings that our Lord was to undergo, carries him back into the wilderness, and leaves him there. Night comes on: Satan raises a tremendous storm, and attempts further to alarm Jesus with frightful dreams, and terrific threatening spectres; which, however, have no effect upon him. A calm, bright, beautiful morning succeeds to the horrors of the night. Satan again presents himself to our blessed Lord, and, from noticing the storm of the preceding night as pointed chiefly at him, takes occasion once more to insult him with an account of the sufferings which he was certainly to undergo. This only draws from our Lord a brief rebuke. Satan, now at the height of his desperation, confesses that he had frequently watched Jesus from his birth, purposely to discover if he was the true Messiah; and, collecting from what passed at the river Jordan that he most probably was so, he had from that time more assiduously followed him, in hopes of gaining some advantage over him, which would most effectually prove that he was not really that Divine Person destined to be his "fatal Enemy." In this he acknowledges that he has hitherto completely failed; but still determines to make one more trial of him. Accordingly he conveys him to the Temple at Jerusalem, and, placing him on a pointed eminence, requires him to prove his Divinity either by standing there, or casting himself down with safety. Our Lord reproves the Tempter, and at the same time manifests his own Divinity by standing on this dangerous point. Satan, amazed and terrified, instantly falls; and repairs to his Infernal Compeers, to relate the bad success of his enterprise. Angels in the meantime convey our blessed Lord to a beautiful valley; and, while they minister to him a repast of celestial food, celebrate his victory in a triumphant hymn.

PERPLEX'D and troubled at his bad success
 The Tempter stood, nor had what to reply,
 Discover'd in his fraud, thrown from his hope
 So oft, and the persuasive rhetoric
 That sleek'd his tongue, and won so much on Eve,
 So little here, nay lost; but Eve was Eve;
 This far his over-match, who, self-deceiv'd
 And rash, before-hand had no better weigh'd
 The strength he was to cope with, or his own:
 But as a man, who had been matchless held
 In cunning, over-reach'd where least he thought,
 To salve his credit, and for very spite,
 Still will be tempting him who foils him still,
 And never cease, though to his shame the more;
 Or as a swarm of flies in vintage time,
 About the wine-press where sweet must is pour'd,
 Beat off, returns as oft with humming sound;
 Or surging waves against a solid rock,
 Though all to shivers dash'd, the assault renew,
 (Vain battery!) and in froth or bubbles end;
 So Satan, whom repulse upon repulse
 Met ever, and to shameful silence brought,
 Yet gives not o'er, though desperate of success,
 And his vain importunity pursues.

He brought our Saviour to the western side
 Of that high mountain, whence he might behold
 Another plain,¹ long, but in breadth not wide,
 Wash'd by the southern sea, and, on the north,
 To equal length back'd with a ridge of hills²
 That screen'd the fruits of the earth, and seats of men,
 From cold Septentrion blasts; thence in the midst
 Divided by a river, of whose banks
 On each side an imperial city stood,
 With towers and temples proudly elevate
 On seven small hills, with palaces adorn'd,
 Porches, and theatres, baths, aqueducts,
 Statues, and trophies, and triumphal arcs,
 Gardens, and groves, presented to his eyes,
 Above the highth of mountains interpos'd
 (By what strange parallax, or optick skill
 Of vision, multiplied through air, or glass
 Of telescope, were curious to inquire):
 And now the Tempter thus his silence broke:

The city, which thou seest, no other deem
 Than great and glorious Rome, queen of the earth,
 So far renown'd, and with the spoils enrich'd
 Of nations; there the Capitol thou seest,
 Above the rest lifting his stately head
 On the Tarpeian rock, her citadel
 Impregnable; and there mount Palatine,
 The imperial palace, compass huge, and high
 The structure, skill of noblest architects,
 With gilded battlements conspicuous far,
 Turrets, and terraces, and glittering spires:
 Many a fair edifice besides, more like Houses of gods (so well I have disposed
 My aery microscope), thou may'st behold,

Outside and inside both, pillars and roofs,
 Carv'd work, the hand of fam'd artificers,
 In cedar, marble, ivory, or gold.
 Thence to the gates cast round thine eye, and see
 What conflux issuing forth, or entering in ;
 Prætors, proconsuls to their provinces
 Hasting, or on return, in robes of state,
 Lictors and rods, the ensigns of their power,
 Legions and cohorts, turms¹ of horse and wings:
 Or embassies from regions far remote,
 In various habits, on the Appian² road,
 Or on the Emilian ;³ some from furthest south,
 Syene,⁴ and where the shadow both way falls,
 Meroe,⁵ Nilotick isle ; and, more to west,
 The realm of Bocchus⁶ to the Black-moor sea ;
 From the Asian kings, and Parthian among these ;
 From India, and the golden Chersonese,⁷
 And utmost Indian isle Taprobane,
 Dusk faces with white silken turbans wreath'd ;
 From Gallia, Gades,⁸ and the British west ;
 Germans, and Scythians, and Sarmatians, north
 Beyond Danubius to the Taurick pool.⁹
 All nations now to Rome obedience pay ;
 To Rome's great emperour, whose wide domain,
 In ample territory, wealth, and power,
 Civility of manners, arts, and arms,
 And long renown, thou justly may'st prefer
 Before the Parthian. These two thrones except,
 The rest are barbarous, and scarce worth the sight,
 Shar'd among petty kings too far remov'd ;
 These having shown thee, I have shown thee all

³ 'Emilian:' north.—⁴ 'Syene:' a city in Egypt.—⁵ 'Meroe:' an isle in Ethiopia.—⁶ 'Bocchus:' Mauritania.—⁷ 'Chersonese:' the most southern promontory of India.—⁸ 'Gades:' Cadiz.—⁹ 'Taurick pool:' Palus Maeotis.

The kingdoms of the world, and all their glory.
 This emperor¹ hath no son, and is now old,
 Old and lascivious, and from Rome retir'd
 To Capreaë, an island small, but strong,
 On the Campanian shore, with purpose there
 His horrid lusts in private to enjoy;
 Committing to a wicked favourite²
 All publick cares, and yet of him suspicious;
 Hated of all, and hating. With what ease,
 Endued with regal virtues, as thou art,
 Appearing, and beginning noble deeds,
 Might'st thou expel this monster from his throne,
 Now made a stye; and in his place ascending,
 A victor people free from servile yoke!
 And with my help thou may'st; to me the power
 Is given, and by that right I give it thee.
 Aim therefore at no less than all the world;
 Aim at the highest: without the highest attain'd,
 Will be for thee no sitting, or not long,
 On David's throne, be prophesied what will.

To whom the Son of God, unmov'd, replied.
 Nor doth this grandeur and majestic show
 Of luxury, though call'd magnificence,
 More than of arms before, allure mine eye,
 Much less my mind; though thou shouldst add to tell
 Their sumptuous gluttonies, and gorgeous feasts
 On citron tables or Atlantick stone³
 (For I have also heard, perhaps have read),
 Their wines of Setia,⁴ Cales, and Falerne,
 Chios, and Crete, and how they quaff in gold,
 Crystal, and myrrhine cups, emboss'd with gems

And studs of pearl ; to me shouldst tell, who thirst
And hunger still. Then embassies thou show'st
From nations far and nigh : what honour that,
But tedious waste of time, to sit and hear
So many hollow compliments and lies,
Outlandish flatteries ? Then proceed'st to talk
Of the emperour, how easily subdued,
How gloriously : I shall, thou say'st, expel
A brutish monster ; what if I withal
Expel a Devil who first made him such ?
Let his tormenter conscience find him out ;
For him I was not sent ; nor yet to free
That people, victor once, now vile and base ;
Deservedly made vassal ; who, once just,
Frugal, and mild, and temperate, conquer'd well,
But govern ill the nations under yoke,
Peeling their provinces, exhausted all
By lust and rapine ; first ambitious grown
Of triumph, that insulting vanity ;
Then cruel, by their sports to blood inur'd
Of fighting beasts, and men to beasts expos'd ;
Luxurious by their wealth, and greedier still,
And from the daily scene effeminate.
What wise and valiant man would seek to free
These, thus degenerate, by themselves enslav'd ?
Or could of inward slaves make outward free ?
Know therefore, when my season comes to sit
On David's throne, it shall be like a tree
Spreading and overshadowing all the earth ;
Or as a stone, that shall to pieces dash
All monarchies besides throughout the world ;
And of my kingdom there shall be no end :
Means there shall be to this ; but what the means,
Is not for thee to know, nor me to tell.

To whom the Tempter, impudent, replied.
I see all offers made by me how slight
Thou valuest, because offer'd and reject'st:
Nothing will please the difficult and nice,
Or nothing more than still to contradict:
On the other side know also thou, that I
On what I offer set as high esteem,
Nor what I part with mean to give for nought:
All these, which in a moment thou behold'st,
The kingdoms of the world, to thee I give
(For, given to me, I give to whom I please),
No trifle; yet with this reserve, not else,
On this condition, if thou wilt fall down,
And worship me as thy superiour lord
(Easily done), and hold them all of me;
For what can less so great a gift deserve?

Whom thus our Saviour answer'd with disdain.
I never lik'd thy talk, thy offers less;
Now both abhor, since thou hast dared to utter
The abominable terms, impious condition:
But I endure the time, till which expir'd
Thou hast permission on me. It is written,
The first of all commandments, Thou shalt worship
The Lord thy God, and only Him shalt serve;
And dar'st thou to the Son of God propound
To worship thee accurs'd? now more accurs'd
For this attempt, bolder than that on Eve,
And more blasphemous; which expect to rue.
The kingdoms of the world to thee were given?
Permitted rather, and by thee usurp'd:
Other donation none thou canst produce.
If given, by whom but by the King of kings,
God over all supreme? If given to thee,
By thee how fairly is the Giver now

Repaid ! but gratitude in thee is lost
Long since. Wert thou so void of fear or shame
As offer them to me, the Son of God ?
To me, my own, on such abhorred pact,
That I fall down and worship thee as God ?
Get thee behind me : plain thou now appear'st
That Evil-one, Satan for ever damn'd.

To whom the Fiend, with fear abash'd, replied.
Be not so sore offended, Son of God,
Though Sons of God both Angels are and Men,
If I, to try whether in higher sort
Than these thou bear'st that title, have propos'd
What both from Men and Angels I receive,
Tetrarchs of fire, air, flood, and on the earth,
Nations beside from all the quarter'd winds,
God of this world invok'd, and world beneath :
Who then thou art, whose coming is foretold
To be most fatal, me it most concerns ;
The trial hath indamag'd thee no way,
Rather more honour left and more esteem ;
Me nought advantag'd, missing what I aim'd.
Therefore let pass, as they are transitory,
The kingdoms of this world ; I shall no more
Advise thee ; gain them as thou canst, or not.
And thou thyself seem'st otherwise inclined
Than to a worldly crown ; addicted more
To contemplation and profound dispute,
As by that early action may be judged,
When, slipping from thy mother's eye, thou went'st
Alone into the temple, there wast found
Among the gravest Rabbies, disputant
On points and questions fitting Moses' chair,
Teaching, not taught. The childhood shows the man,
As morning shows the day ; be famous then

By wisdom ; as thy empire must extend,
 So let extend thy mind o'er all the world
 In knowledge, all things in it comprehend.
 All knowledge is not couch'd in Moses' law,
 The Pentateuch, or what the prophets wrote ;
 The Gentiles also know, and write, and teach
 To admiration, led by Nature's light,
 And with the Gentiles much thou must converse,
 Ruling them by persuasion, as thou mean'st ;
 Without their learning, how wilt thou with them,
 Or they with thee, hold conversation meet ?
 How wilt thou reason with them, how refute
 Their idolisms,¹ traditions, paradoxes ?
 Errour by his own arms is best evinc'd.
 Look once more, ere we leave this specular mount,
 Westward, much nearer by south-west, behold ;
 Where on the Ægean shore a city stands,
 Built nobly, pure the air, and light the soil ;
 Athens, the eye of Greece, mother of arts
 And eloquence, native to famous wits
 Or hospitable, in her sweet recess,
 City or suburban, studious walks and shades.
 See there the olive grove of Academe,
 Plato's retirement, where the Attick bird²
 Trills her thick-warbled notes the summer long ;
 There flowery hill Hymettus, with the sound
 Of bee's industrious murmur, oft invites
 To studious musing ; there Ilissus rolls
 His whispering stream : within the walls, then view
 The schools of ancient sages ; his,³ who bred

¹ 'Idolisms ;' a term probably suggested by, and equivalent to, Bacon's 'Idola.'—² 'Attick bird : ' the nightingale, called so because Philomela, fabled to have been turned into a nightingale, was the daughter of a king of Athens.—³ 'His,' &c. : i. e., Aristotle. His school was the Lyceum, and Stoa was Zeno's.

Great Alexander to subdue the world,
 Lyceum there, and painted Stoa next :
 There shalt thou hear and learn the secret power
 Of harmony, in tones and numbers hit
 By voice or hand ; and various measur'd verse,
 Æolian¹ charms and Dorian² lyric odes,
 And his who gave them breath, but higher sung,
 Blind Melesigenes, thence Homer call'd,
 Whose poem Phœbus challenged for his own :
 Thence what the lofty grave tragedians taught
 In Chorus or Iambick, teachers best³
 Of moral prudence, with delight receiv'd
 In brief sententious precepts, while they treat
 Of fate, and chance, and change in human life,
 High actions and high passions best describing :
 Thence to the famous orators repair,
 Those ancient,⁴ whose resistless eloquence
 Wielded at will that fierce democratie,
 Shook the arsenal,⁵ and fulmin'd over Greece
 To Macedon and Artaxerxes' throne :
 To sage Philosophy next lend thine ear,
 From heaven descended to the low-roof'd house
 Of Socrates ; see there his tenement,
 Whom well inspir'd the oracle pronounc'd
 Wisest of men ; from whose mouth issued forth
 Mellifluous streams, that water'd all the schools
 Of Academicks⁶ old and new, with those
 Surnamed Peripatetics, and the sect
 Epicurean, and the Stoick severe ;
 These here revolve, or, as thou lik'st, at home,

¹ ' Æolian : ' those of Alcaeus and Sappho. — ² ' Dorian : ' those of Pindar. —
³ ' Teachers best : ' referring principally to Euripides. — ⁴ ' Those ancient : '
 Pericles and Demosthenes. — ⁵ ' Arsenal : ' magazine of defensive arms. —
⁶ ' Academicks : ' three schools—Plato, Arcesilas, and Carneades being their heads.

Till time mature thee to a kingdom's weight;
 These rules will render thee a king complete
 Within thyself, much more with empire join'd.

To whom our Saviour sagely thus replied.
 Think not but that I know these things, or think
 I knew them not; not therefore am I short
 Of knowing what I ought: he, who receives
 Light from above, from the fountain of light,
 No other doctrine needs, though granted true;
 But these are false, or little else but dreams,
 Conjectures, fancies, built on nothing firm.
 The first¹ and wisest of them all profess'd
 To know this only, that he nothing knew;
 The next² to fabling fell, and smooth conceits;
 A third³ sort doubted all things, though plain sense;
 Others⁴ in virtue placed felicity,
 But virtue join'd with riches and long life;
 In corporal pleasure he,⁵ and careless ease;
 The Stoick last in philosophick pride,
 By him called virtue; and his virtuous man,
 Wise, perfect in himself, and all possessing
 Equal to God, oft shames not to prefer,
 As fearing God nor man, contemning all
 Wealth, pleasure, pain or torment, death and life,
 Which, when he lists, he leaves, or boasts he can,
 For all his tedious talk is but vain boast,
 Or subtle shifts conviction to evade.
 Alas! what can they teach, and not mislead,
 Ignorant of themselves, of God much more,
 And how the world began, and how man fell
 Degraded by himself, on grace depending?
 Much of the soul they talk, but all awry,

And in themselves seek virtue, and to themselves
 All glory arrogate, to God give none;
 Rather accuse him under usual names,
 Fortune and Fate, as one regardless quite
 Of mortal things. Who therefore seeks in these
 True wisdom, finds her not; or, by delusion,
 Far worse, her false resemblance only meets,
 An empty cloud. However, many books,
 Wise men have said, are wearisome; who reads
 Incessantly, and to his reading brings not
 A spirit and judgment equal or superiour,
 (And what he brings what needs he elsewhere seek ?)
 Uncertain and unsettled still remains,
 Deep vers'd in books, and shallow in himself,
 Crude or intoxicate, collecting toys
 And trifles for choice matters, worth a sponge;¹
 As children² gathering pebbles on the shore.
 Or, if I would delight my private hours
 With musick or with poem, where so soon
 As in our native language, can I find
 That solace? All our law and story strew'd
 With hymns, our psalms with artful terms inscrib'd,
 Our Hebrew songs and harps, in Babylon
 That pleased so well our victors' ear, declare
 That rather Greece from us these arts deriv'd;
 Ill imitated, while they loudest sing
 The vices of their Deities, and their own,
 In fable, hymn, or song, so personating³
 Their gods ridiculous, and themselves past shame.
 Remove their swelling epithets, thick laid
 As varnish on a harlot's cheek, the rest,
 Thin sown with aught of profit or delight,

Will far be found unworthy to compare
 With Sion's songs, to all true tastes excelling,
 Where God is prais'd aright, and God-like men,
 The Holiest of Holies, and his Saints,
 (Such are from God inspir'd, not such from thee),
 Unless where moral virtue is express'd
 By light of Nature, not in all quite lost.
 Their orators thou then extoll'st, as those
 The top of eloquence ; statist¹ indeed,
 And lovers of their country, as may seem ;
 But herein to our prophets far beneath,
 As men divinely taught, and better teaching
 The solid rules of civil government,
 In their majestic unaffected style,
 Than all the oratory of Greece and Rome.
 In them is plainest taught, and easiest learnt,
 What makes a nation happy, and keeps it so,
 What ruins kingdoms, and lays cities flat ;
 These only with our law best form a king.

So spake the Son of God ; but Satan, now
 Quite at a loss (for all his darts were spent),
 Thus to our Saviour with stern brow replied.

Since neither wealth nor honour, arms nor arts,
 Kingdom nor empire pleases thee, nor aught
 By me propos'd in life contemplative
 Or active, tended on by glory or fame,
 What dost thou in this world ? The wilderness
 For thee is fittest place ; I found thee there,
 And thither will return thee ; yet remember
 What I foretell thee, soon thou shalt have cause
 To wish thou never hadst rejected, thus
 Nicely or cautiously, my offer'd aid,
 Which would have set thee in short time with ease

On David's throne, or throne of all the world,
Now at full age, fulness of time, thy season,
When prophesies of thee are best fulfill'd.
Now contrary, if I read aught in Heaven,
Or Heaven write aught of fate, by what the stars
Voluminous, or single characters,
In their conjunction met, give me to spell,
Sorrows, and labours, opposition, hate
Attend thee, scorns, reproaches, injuries,
Violence and stripes, and lastly cruel death ;
A kingdom they portend thee, but what kingdom,
Real or allegorick, I discern not ;
Nor when ; eternal sure, as without end,
Without beginning ; for no date prefix'd
Directs me in the starry rubrick set.

So saying he took (for still he knew his power
Not yet expir'd), and to the wilderness
Brought back the Son of God, and left him there,
Feigning to disappear. Darkness now rose,
As day-light sunk, and brought in lowering Night
Her shadowy offspring ; unsubstantial both,
Privation mere of light and absent day.
Our Saviour meek, and with untroubled mind
After his aery jaunt, though hurried sore,
Hungry and cold, betook him to his rest,
Wherever, under some concourse of shades,
Whose branching arms thick intertwin'd might shield
From dews and damps of night his shelter'd head ;
But, shelter'd, slept in vain ; for at his head
The Tempter watch'd, and soon with ugly dreams
Disturb'd his sleep. And either tropick now
'Gan thunder, and both ends of Heaven ; the clouds,
From many a horrid rift, abortive pour'd
Fierce rain with lightning mix'd, water with fire

In ruin reconcil'd : nor slept the winds
Within their stony caves, but rush'd abroad
From the four hinges of the world, and fell
On the vex'd wilderness, whose tallest pines,
Though rooted deep as high, and sturdiest oaks,
Bow'd their stiff necks, loaden with stormy blasts
Or torn up sheer. Ill wast thou shrouded then,
O patient Son of God, yet only stood'st
Unshaken ! Nor yet staid the terrour there ;
Infernal ghosts and hellish furies round
Environ'd thee, some howl'd, some yell'd, some shriek'd,
Some bent at thee their fiery darts, while thou
Sat'st unapall'd in calm and sinless peace !
Thus pass'd the night so foul, till Morning fair
Came forth, with pilgrim steps, in amice grey ;¹
Who with her radiant finger still'd the roar
Of thunder, chas'd the clouds, and laid the winds,
And grisly spectres, which the Fiend had rais'd
To tempt the Son of God with terrors dire.
And now the sun with more effectual beams
Had cheer'd the face of earth, and dried the wet
From drooping plant, or dropping tree ; the birds,
Who all things now behold more fresh and green,
After a night of storm so ruinous,
Clear'd up their choicest notes in bush and spray,
To gratulate the sweet return of morn.
Nor yet, amidst this joy and brightest morn,
Was absent, after all his mischief done,
The Prince of darkness ; glad would also seem
Of this fair change, and to our Saviour came ;
Yet with no new device (they all were spent),
Rather by this his last affront resolv'd,
Desperate of better course, to vent his rage

¹ 'Amice grey : ' a gray habit worn by ecclesiastics and pilgrims.

And mad despite to be so oft repell'd.
 Him walking on a sunny hill he found,
 Back'd on the north and west by a thick wood ;
 Out of the wood he starts in wonted¹ shape,
 And in a careless mood thus to him said.

Fair morning yet betides thee, Son of God,
 After a dismal night ; I heard the wrack,
 As earth and sky would mingle ; but myself
 Was distant ; and these flaws,² though mortals fear them
 As dangerous to the pillar'd frame of Heaven,
 Or to the earth's dark basis underneath,
 Are to the main³ as inconsiderable
 And harmless, if not wholesome, as a sneeze
 To man's less universe, and soon are gone ;
 Yet, as being oft times noxious where they light
 On man, beast, plant, wasteful and turbulent,
 Like turbulencies in the affairs of men,
 Over whose heads they roar, and seem to point,
 They oft fore-signify and threaten ill :
 This tempest at this desert most was bent ;
 Of men at thee, for only thou here dwell'st.
 Did I not tell thee, if thou didst reject
 The perfect season offer'd with my aid
 To win thy destin'd seat, but wilt prolong
 All to the push of fate, pursue thy way
 Of gaining David's throne no man knows when,—
 For both the when and how is no where told,—
 Thou shalt be what thou art ordain'd, no doubt ;
 For Angels have proclaim'd it, but concealing
 The time and means. Each act is rightliest done,
 Not when it must, but when it may be best :
 If thou observe not this, be sure to find,

What I foretold thee, many a hard assay
Of dangers, and adversities, and pains,
Ere thou of Israel's scepter get fast hold ;
Whereof this ominous night, that clos'd thee round,
So many terrors, voices, prodigies,
May warn thee, as a sure foregoing sign.

So talk'd he, while the Son of God went on
And staid not, but in brief him answer'd thus.

Me worse than wet thou find'st not ; other harm
Those terrours which thou speak'st of, did me none ;
I never fear'd they could, though noising loud
And threatening nigh : what they can do, as signs
Betokening, or ill boding, I contemn
As false portents, not sent from God, but thee ;
Who, knowing I shall reign past thy preventing,
Obtrud'st thy offer'd aid, that I, accepting,
At least might seem to hold all power of thee,
Ambitious Spirit ! and wouldst be thought my God ;
And storm'st refused, thinking to terrify
Me to thy will ! desist (thou art discern'd,
And toil'st in vain), nor me in vain molest.

To whom the Fiend, now swoln with rage, replied.
Then hear, O Son of David, Virgin-born,
For Son of God to me is yet in doubt ;
Of the Messiah I had heard foretold
By all the Prophets ; of thy birth at length,
Announc'd by Gabriel, with the first I knew,
And of the angelick song in Bethlehem field,
On thy birth-night that sung thee Saviour born.
From that time seldom have I ceas'd to eye
Thy infancy, thy childhood, and thy youth,
Thy manhood last, though yet in private bred ;
Till the ford of Jordan, whither all
Flock to the Baptist, I among the rest

(Though not to be baptiz'd), by voice from Heaven
 Heard thee pronounc'd the Son of God belov'd.
 Thenceforth I thought thee worth my nearer view
 And narrower scrutiny, that I might learn
 In what degree or meaning thou art call'd
 The Son of God ; which bears no single sense.
 The Son of God I also am, or was ;
 And if I was, I am ; relation stands ;
 All men are Sons of God ; yet thee I thought
 In some respect far higher, so declar'd :
 Therefore I watch'd thy footsteps from that hour
 And follow'd thee still on to this waste wild ;
 Where, by all best conjectures, I collect
 Thou art to be my fatal enemy :
 Good reason then, if I before-hand seek
 To understand my adversary, who
 And what he is ; his wisdom, power, intent ;
 By parl or composition, truce or league,
 To win him, or win from him what I can :
 And opportunity I here have had
 To try thee, sift thee, and confess have found thee
 Proof against all temptation, as a rock
 Of adamant, and, as a center, firm ;
 To the utmost of mere Man both wise and good,
 Not more ; for honours, riches, kingdoms, glory,
 Have been before contemn'd, and may again.
 Therefore, to know what more thou art than Man,
 Worth naming Son of God by voice from Heaven,
 Another method I must now begin.

So saying, he caught him up, and, without wing
 Of hippogrif,¹ bore through the air sublime,
 Over the wilderness and o'er the plain,
 Till underneath them fair Jerusalem,

The holy city, lifted high her towers,
 And higher yet the glorious temple rear'd
 Her pile, far off appearing like a mount
 Of alabaster, topt with golden spires:
 There, on the highest pinnacle, he set
 The Son of God; and added thus in scorn.

There stand, if thou wilt stand; to stand upright
 Will ask thee skill; I to thy Father's house
 Have brought thee, and highest plac'd; highest is best:
 Now show thy progeny; if not to stand,
 Cast thyself down; safely, if Son of God:
 For it is written, "He will give command
 Concerning thee to his Angels, in their hands
 They shall up lift thee, lest at any time
 Thou chance to dash thy foot against a stone."

To whom thus Jesus: Also it is written,
 "Tempt not the Lord thy God." He said, and stood:
 But Satan, smitten with amazement, fell.
 As when Earth's son Antæus (to compare
 Small things with greatest), in Irassa strove
 With Jove's Alcides,¹ and, oft foil'd, still rose,
 Receiving from his mother Earth new strength,
 Fresh from his fall, and fiercer grapple join'd,
 Throttled at length in the air, expir'd and fell;
 So, after many a foil, the Tempter proud,
 Renewing fresh assaults amidst his pride,
 Fell whence he stood to see his victor fall:
 And as that Theban monster,² that propos'd
 Her riddle, and him who solv'd it not devour'd,
 That once found out and solv'd, for grief and spite
 Cast herself headlong from the Ismenian³ steep;
 So, struck with dread and anguish, fell the Fiend,

¹ 'Alcides:' Hercules, son of Jove and Alcmena.—² 'Theban monster:' the Sphynx.—³ 'Ismenian:' a hill called so from the river Ismenus, near Thebes.

And to his crew, that sat consulting, brought (Joyless triumphals of his hop'd success)
 Ruin, and desperation, and dismay,
 Who durst so proudly tempt the Son of God.
 So Satan fell; and straight a fiery globe
 Of Angels on full sail of wing flew nigh,
 Who on their plummy vans receiv'd him soft
 From his uneasy station, and upbore,
 As on a floating couch, through the blithe air;
 Then, in a flowery valley, set him down
 On a green bank, and set before him spread
 A table of celestial food, divine
 Ambrosial fruits, fetch'd from the tree of life,
 And, from the fount of life, ambrosial drink,
 That soon refresh'd him wearied, and repair'd
 What hunger, if aught hunger, had impair'd,
 Or thirst; and, as he fed, angelick quire
 Sung heavenly anthems of his victory
 Over Temptation and the Tempter proud.

True image of the Father; whether thron'd
 In the bosom of bliss, and light of light
 Conceiving; or, remote from Heaven, enshrin'd
 In fleshly tabernacle, and human form,
 Wandering the wilderness; whatever place,
 Habit, or state, or motion, still expressing
 The Son of God, with God-like force endued
 Against the attempter of thy Father's throne,
 And thief of Paradise! Him long of old
 Thou didst debel,¹ and down from Heaven cast
 With all his army; now thou hast aveng'd
 Supplanted Adam, and, by vanquishing
 Temptation, hast regain'd lost Paradise,
 And frustrated the conquest fraudulent.

He never more henceforth will dare set foot
 In Paradise to tempt; his snares are broke :
 For, though that seat of earthly bliss be fail'd,
 A fairer Paradise is founded now
 For Adam and his chosen sons, whom thou,
 A Saviour, art come down to re-install,
 Where they shall dwell secure, when time shall be,
 Of Tempter and Temptation without fear.
 But thou, infernal Serpent ! shalt not long
 Rule in the clouds ; like ~~an~~ autumnal star,
 Or lightning, thou shalt fall from Heaven, trod down
 Under his feet : for proof, ere this thou feel'st
 Thy wound (yet not thy last and deadliest wound),
 By this repulse receiv'd, and hold'st in Hell
 No triumph : in her gates Abaddon¹ rues
 Thy bold attempt. Hereafter learn with awe
 To dread the Son of God : He, all unarm'd,
 Shall chase thee, with the terroure of his voice,
 From thy demoniack holds, possession foul,
 Thee and thy legions ; yelling they shall fly,
 And beg to hide them in a herd of swine,
 Lest he command them down into the deep,
 Bound, and to torment sent before their time.—
 Hail, Son of the Most High, heir of both worlds,
 Queller of Satan ! On thy glorious work
 Now enter ; and begin to save mankind.

Thus they the Son of God, our Saviour meek,
 Sung victor, and, from heavenly feast refresh'd,
 Brought on his way with joy ; he, unobserv'd,
 Home to his mother's house private return'd.

SAMSON AGONISTES.

A Dramatic Poem.

Tragedia est imitatio actionis serie, &c. per misericordiam et metum perficiens talium affectuum illustrationem.

OF THAT SORT OF DRAMATIC POEM WHICH IS CALLED TRAGEDY.

TRAGEDY, as it was anciently composed, hath been ever held the gravest, moralest, and most profitable of all other poems: therefore said by Aristotle to be of power, by raising pity and fear, or terror, to purge the mind of those and such like passions; that is, to temper and reduce them to just measure with a kind of delight, stirred up by reading or seeing those passions well imitated. Nor is Nature wanting in her own effects to make good his assertion: for so, in physis, things of melancholic hue and quality are used against melancholy, sour against sour, salt to remove salt humours. Hence philosophers and other gravest writers, as Cicero, Plutarch, and others, frequently cite out of tragic poets both to adorn and illustrate their discourse. The Apostle Paul himself thought it not unworthy to insert a verse of Euripides into the text of Holy Scripture, 1 Cor. xv. 33; and Paræus, commenting on the Revelation, divides the whole book, as a tragedy, into acts, distinguished each by a chorus of heavenly harpings and song between. Heretofore men in highest dignity have laboured not a little to be thought able to compose a tragedy. Of that honour Dionysius the elder was no less ambitious, than before of his attaining to the tyranny. Augustus Cæsar also had begun his Ajax, but, unable to please his own judgment with what he had begun, left it unfinished. Seneca, the philosopher, is by some thought the author of those tragedies (at least the best of them) that go under that name. Gregory Nazianzen, a Father of the Church, thought it not unbecoming the sanctity of his person to write a tragedy, which is entitled Christ Suffering. This is mentioned to vindicate tragedy from the small esteem, or rather infamy, which in the account of many it undergoes at this day with other common interludes; happening through the poet's error of intermixing comic stuff with tragic sadness and gravity; or introducing trivial and vulgar persons, which by all judicious hath been counted absurd; and brought in without discretion, corruptly to gratify the people. And though Ancient Tragedy use no prologue, yet using sometimes, in case of self-defence, or explanation, that which Martial calls an epistle; in behalf of this tragedy coming forth after the ancient manner, much different from what among us passes for best, thus much before-hand may be epistled; that Chorus is here introduced after the Greek manner, not anciently only but modern, and still in use among the Italians. In the modelling therefore of this poem, with good reason, the Ancients and Italians are rather followed, as of much more authority and fame. The measure of verse used in the Chorus is of all sorts, called by the Greeks Monostrophic, or rather Apolelymenon,¹ without regard had to Strophe, Antistrophe, or Epode, which were a kind of stanzas framed only for the music, then used with the Chorus that sung; not essential to the poem, and therefore not material; or, being divided into stanzas or pauses, they may be called Allæostrophæ. Division into act and scene, referring chiefly to the stage (to which this work never was intended), is here omitted.

It suffices if the whole drama be found not produced beyond the fifth act. Of the style and uniformity, and that commonly called the plot, whether intricate or explicit, which is nothing indeed but such œconomy or disposition of the fable as may stand best with verisimilitude and decorum; they only will best judge who are not unacquainted with Æschylus, Sophocles, and Euripides, the three tragic poets unequalled yet by any, and the best rule to all who endeavour to write tragedy. The circumscription of time, wherein the whole drama begins and ends, is, according to ancient rule, and best example, within the space of twenty-four hours.

THE PERSONS.

SAMSON.	HARAPHA, of Gath.
MANOAH, the Father of	Public Officer.
Samson.	Messenger.
DALILA, his Wife.	Chorus of Danites.

The Scene before the Prison in Gaza.

THE ARGUMENT.

Samson, made captive, blind, and now in the prison at Gaza, there to labour as in a common workhouse, on a festival day, in the general cessation from labour, comes forth into the open air, to a place nigh, somewhat retired, there to sit awhile and bemoan his condition. Where he happens at length to be visited by certain friends and equals of his tribe, which make the Chorus, who seek to comfort him what they can; then by his old father Manoah, who endeavours the like, and withal tells him his purpose to procure his liberty by ransom; lastly, that this feast was proclaimed by the Philistines as a day of thanksgiving for their deliverance from the hands of Samson, which yet more troubles him. Manoah then departs to prosecute his endeavour with the Philistine lords for Samson's redemption; who in the mean while is visited by other persons; and lastly by a public officer to require his coming to the feast before the lords and people, to play or show his strength in their presence; he at first refuses, dismissing the public officer with absolute denial to come; at length, persuaded inwardly that this was from God, he yields to go along with him, who came now the second time with great threatenings to fetch him: The Chorus yet remaining on the place, Manoah returns full of joyful hope to procure ere long his son's deliverance: in the midst of which discourse an Hebrew comes in haste, confused at first, and afterward more distinctly, relating the catastrophe, what Samson had done to the Philistines, and by accident to himself; wherewith the tragedy ends.

SAMSON, Attendant leaving him.

A LITTLE onward lend thy guiding hand
To these dark steps, a little further on;

For yonder bank hath choice of sun or shade :
There I am wont to sit, when any chance
Relieves me from my task of servile toil,
Daily in the common prison else enjoin'd me,
Where I, a prisoner chain'd, scarce freely draw
The air imprison'd also, close and damp,
Unwholesome draught : but here I feel amends,
The breath of Heaven fresh blowing, pure and sweet,
With day-spring born ; here leave me to respire.—
This day a solemn feast the people hold
To Dagon,¹ their sea-idol, and forbid
Laborious works ; unwillingly this rest
Their superstition yields me ; hence with leave
Retiring from the popular noise, I seek
This unfrequented place to find some ease,
Ease to the body some, none to the mind
From restless thoughts, that, like a deadly swarm
Of hornets arm'd, no sooner found alone,
But rush upon me thronging, and present
Times past, what once I was, and what am now.
O, wherefore was my birth from Heaven foretold
Twice by an Angel, who at last in sight
Of both my parents all in flames ascended
From off the altar, where an offering burn'd
As in a fiery column charioting
His God-like presence, and from some great act
Or benefit reveal'd to Abraham's race ?
Why was my breeding order'd and prescrib'd
As of a person separate to God,
Design'd for great exploits ; if I must die
Betray'd, captiv'd, and both my eyes put out,
Made of my enemies the scorn and gaze ;
To grind in brazen fetters under task

¹ ' Dagon : ' the idol of the Philistines, half a man and half a fish.

With this Heaven-gifted strength ? O glorious strength,
Put to the labour of a beast, debas'd
Lower than bond-slave ! Promise was that I
Should Israel from Philistian yoke deliver ;
Ask for this great deliverer now, and find him
Eyeless in Gaza at the mill with slaves,
Himself in bonds under Philistian yoke :
Yet stay, let me not rashly call in doubt
Divine prediction ; what if all foretold
Had been fulfill'd but through mine own default,
Whom have I to complain of but myself ?
Who this high gift of strength committed to me,
In what part lodg'd, how easily bereft me,
Under the seal of silence could not keep,
But weakly to a woman must reveal it,
O'ercome with importunity and tears.
O impotence of mind, in body strong !
But what is strength without a double share
Of wisdom ? vast, unwieldy, burdensome,
Proudly secure, yet liable to fall
By weakest subtleties, not made to rule,
But to subserve where wisdom bears command !
God, when he gave me strength, to show withal
How slight the gift was, hung it in my hair.
But peace, I must not quarrel with the will
Of highest dispensation, which herein
Haply had ends above my reach to know :
Suffices that to me strength is my bane,
And proves the source of all my miseries ;
So many, and so huge, that each apart
Would ask a life to wail ; but chief of all,
O loss of sight, of thee I most complain !
Blind among enemies, O worse than chains,
Dungeon, or beggery, or decrepit age !

Light, the prime work of God, to me is extinct,
And all her various objects of delight,
Annull'd, which might in part my grief have eas'd,
Inferiour to the vilest now become
Of man or worm; the vilest here excel me;
They creep, yet see; I, dark in light, expos'd
To daily fraud, contempt, abuse, and wrong,
Within doors, or without, still as a fool,
In power of others, never in my own;
Scarce half I seem to live, dead more than half.
O dark, dark, dark, amid the blaze of noon,
Irrecoverably dark, total eclipse
Without all hope of day!
O first created Beam, and thou great Word,
"Let there be light, and light was over all;"
Why am I thus bereav'd thy prime decree?
The sun to me is dark
And silent as the moon,
When she deserts the night,
Hid in her vacant interlunar cave.
Since light so necessary is to life,
And almost life itself, if it be true
That light is in the soul,
She all in every part; why was the sight
To such a tender ball as the eye confin'd,
So obvious and so easy to be quench'd?
And not, as feeling, through all parts diffus'd
That she might look at will through every pore?
Then had I not been thus exil'd from light,
As in the land of darkness, yet in light,
To live a life half-dead, a living death,
And buried; but, O yet more miserable!
Myself my sepulchre, a moving grave;
Buried, yet not exempt,

By privilege of death and burial,
 From worst of other evils, pains and wrongs;
 But made hereby obnoxious more
 To all the miseries of life,
 Life in captivity
 Among inhuman foes.
 But who are these ? for with joint pace I hear
 The tread of many feet steering this way;
 Perhaps my enemies, who come to stare
 At my affliction, and perhaps to insult,
 Their daily practice to afflict me more.

Enter CHORUS.

Cho. This, this is he ; softly awhile,
 Let us not break in upon him :
 O change beyond report, thought, or belief !
 See how he lies at random, carelessly diffus'd,
 With languish'd head unpropt,
 As one past hope, abandon'd,
 And by himself given over ;
 In slavish habit, ill-fitted weeds
 O'er-worn and soil'd ;
 Or do my eyes misrepresent ? Can this be he,
 That heroick, that renown'd
 Irresistible Samson ? whom unarm'd
 No strength of man, or fiercest wild beast, could withstand ;
 Who tore the lion, as the lion tears the kid ;
 Ran on embattled armies clad in iron ;
 And, weaponless himself,
 Made arms ridiculous, useless the forgery
 Of brazen shield and spear, the hammer'd cuirass,
 Chalybean¹ temper'd steel, and frock of mail
 Adamantéan proof ?

¹ 'Chalybean : ' as if made by the Chalybes, famous ancient workers in iron.

But safest he who stood aloof,
 When insupportably his foot advanc'd,
 In scorn of their proud arms and warlike tools,
 Spurn'd them to death by troops. The bold Ascalonite¹
 Fled from his lion ramp;² old warriors turn'd
 Their plated backs under his heel:
 Or, grovelling, soil'd their crested helmets in the dust.
 Then with what trivial weapon came to hand,
 The jaw of a dead ass, his sword of bone,
 A thousand foreskins fell, the flower of Palestine,
 In Ramath-lechi, famous to this day.
 Then by main force pull'd up, and on his shoulders bore
 The gates of Azza,³ post, and massy bar,
 Up to the hill by Hebron,⁴ seat of giants old,
 No journey of a sabbath-day, and loaded so;
 Like whom⁵ the Gentiles feign to bear up Heaven.
 Which shall I first bewail,
 Thy bondage or lost sight;
 Prison within prison
 Inseparably dark?
 Thou art become (O worst imprisonment!)
 The dungeon of thyself; thy soul,
 (Which men enjoying sight oft without cause complain)
 Imprison'd now indeed,
 In real darkness of the body dwells,
 Shut up from outward light
 To incorporate with gloomy night;
 For inward light, alas!
 Puts forth no visual beam.
 O mirror of our fickle state,
 Since man on earth, unparallel'd!

The rarer thy example stands,
 By how much from the top of wonderful glory
 Strongest of mortal men,
 To lowest pitch of abject fortune thou art fallen.
 For him I reckon not in high estate
 Whom long descent of birth,
 Or the sphere of fortune, raises ;
 But thee whose strength, while virtue was her mate,
 Might have subdued the earth,
 Universally crown'd with highest praises.

Sam. I hear the sound of words ; their sense the air
 Dissolves unjointed ere it reach my ear.

Cho. He speaks, let us draw nigh. Matchless in might,
 The glory late of Israel, now the grief ;
 We come, thy friends and neighbours not unknown,
 From Eshtaol and Zora's¹ fruitful vale,
 To visit or bewail thee ; or, if better,
 Counsel or consolation we may bring,
 Salve to thy sores ; apt words have power to swage
 The tumours of a troubled mind,
 And are as balm to fester'd wounds.

Sam. Your coming, Friends, revives me ; for I learn,
 Now of my own experience, not by talk,
 How counterfeit a coin they are who friends
 Bear in their superscription, (of the most
 I would be understood ;) in prosperous days
 They swarm, but in adverse withdraw their head,
 Not to be found, though sought. Ye see, O Friends,
 How many evils have enclos'd me round ;
 Yet that which was the worst now least afflicts me,
 Blindness ; for had I sight, confus'd with shame,
 How could I once look up, or heave the head,

¹ 'Eshtaol and Zora:' two towns in Dan ; the latter, Samson's birth-place

Who, like a foolish pilot, have shipwreck'd
 My vessel trusted to me from above,
 Gloriously rigg'd ; and for a word, a tear,
 Fool ! have divulged the secret gift of God
 To a deceitful woman ? tell me, Friends,
 Am I not sung and proverb'd for a fool
 In every street ? do they not say, how well
 Are come upon him his deserts ? yet why ?
 Immeasurable strength they might behold
 In me, of wisdom nothing more than mean ;
 This with the other should, at least, have pair'd,
 These two, proportion'd ill, drove me transverse.

Cho. Tax not divine disposal ; wisest men
 Have err'd, and by bad women been deceiv'd ;
 And shall again, pretend they ne'er so wise.
 Deject not then so overmuch thyself,
 Who hast of sorrow thy full load besides :
 Yet, truth to say, I oft have heard men wonder
 Why thou shouldst wed Philistian women rather
 Than of thy own tribe fairer, or as fair,
 At least of thy own nation, and as noble.

Sam. The first I saw at Timna, and she pleas'd
 Me, not my parents, that I sought to wed
 The daughter of an infidel : They knew not
 That what I motion'd was of God ; I knew
 From intimate impulse, and therefore urg'd
 The marriage on ; that by occasion hence
 I might begin Israel's deliverance,
 The work to which I was divinely call'd.
 She proving false, the next I took to wife
 (O that I never had ! fond wish too late),
 Was in the vale of Sorec, Dalila,
 That specious monster, my accomplish'd snare.
 I thought it lawful from my former act,

And the same end ; still watching to oppress
 Israel's oppressours : of what now I suffer
 She was not the prime cause, but I myself
 Who, vanquish'd with a peal of words, (O weakness !)
 Gave up my fort of silence to a woman.

Cho. In seeking just occasion to provoke
 The Philistine, thy country's enemy,
 Thou never wast remiss, I bear thee witness :
 Yet Israël still serves with all his sons.

Sam. The fault I take not on me, but transfer
 On Israel's governours and heads of tribes,
 Who, seeing those great acts which God had done
 Singly by me against their conquerours,
 Acknowledg'd not, or not at all consider'd,
 Deliverance offer'd : I on the other side
 Us'd no ambition to commend my deeds ;
 The deeds themselves, though mute, spoke loud the doer :
 But they persisted deaf, and would not seem
 To count them things worth notice, till at length
 Their lords the Philistines with gather'd powers
 Enter'd Judea seeking me, who then
 Safe to the rock of Etham¹ was retir'd ;
 Not flying, but fore-casting in what place
 To set upon them, what advantag'd best :
 Meanwhile the men of Judah, to prevent
 The harass of their land, beset me round ;
 I willingly on some conditions came
 Into their hands, and they as gladly yield me,
 To the uncircumcis'd a welcome prey,
 Bound with two cords ; but cords to me were threads
 Touch'd with the flame : on their whole host I flew
 Unarm'd, and with a trivial weapon fell'd
 Their choicest youth ; they only liv'd who fled.

Had Judah that day join'd, or one whole tribe,
 They had by this possess'd the towers of Gath,
 And lorded over them whom they now serve :
 But what more oft, in nations grown corrupt,
 And by their vices brought to servitude,
 Than to love bondage more than liberty,
 Bondage with ease than strenuous liberty ;
 And to despise, or envy, or suspect
 Whom God hath of his special favour rais'd
 As their deliverer ? if he aught begin,
 How frequent to desert him, and at last
 To heap ingratitude on worthiest deeds ?

Cho. Thy words to my remembrance bring
 How Succoth and the fort of Penuel
 Their great deliverer contemn'd,
 The matchless Gideon, in pursuit
 Of Madian and her vanquish'd kings :
 And how ingrateful Ephraim¹
 Had dealt with Jephtha, who by argument,
 Not worse than by his shield and spear,
 Defended Israel from the Ammonite,
 Had not his prowess quell'd their pride
 In that sore battle, when so many died
 Without reprieve, adjudged to death,
 For want of well pronouncing Shibboleth.

Sam. Of such examples add me to the roll ;
 Me easily indeed mine may neglect,
 But God's proposed deliverance not so.

Cho. Just are the ways of God,
 And justifiable to men ;
 Unless there be, who think not God at all :
 If any be, they walk obscure ;
 For of such doctrine never was there school,

But the heart of the fool,
And no man therein doctor but himself.

Yet more there be, who doubt his ways not just,
As to his own edicts found contradicting,
Then give the reins to wandering thought,
Regardless of his glory's diminution ;
Till, by their own perplexities involv'd,
They ravel more, still less resolv'd,
But never find self-satisfying solution.

As if they would confine the Interminable,
And tie him to his own prescript,
Who made our laws to bind us, not himself,
And hath full right to exempt
Whom so it pleases him by choice
From national obstruction, without taint
Of sin, or legal debt ;
For with his own laws he can best dispense.

He would not else, who never wanted means,
Nor in respect of the enemy just cause,
To set his people free,
Have prompted this heroick Nazarite,
Against his vow of strictest purity,
To seek in marriage that fallacious bride,
Unclean, unchaste.

Down, reason, then ; at least vain reasonings, down ;
Though reason here aver,
That moral verdict quits her of unclean :
Unchaste was subsequent, her stain not his.

But see ! here comes thy reverend Sire
With careful step, locks white as down,
Old Manoah : Advise
Forthwith how thou ought'st to receive him.

Sam. Ay me ! another inward grief, awak'd
With mention of that name, renews the assault.

Enter MANOAH.

Man. Brethren and men of Dan, for such ye seem,
Though in this uncouth place ; if old respect,
As I suppose, towards your once gloried friend,
My son, now captive, hither hath inform'd
Your younger feet, while mine cast back with age
Came lagging after ; say if he be here.

Cho. As signal now in low dejected state,
As erst in highest, behold him where he lies.

Man. O miserable change ! is this the man,
That invincible Samson, far renown'd,
The dread of Israel's foes, who with a strength
Equivalent to Angels walk'd their streets,
None offering fight ; who single combatant
Duell'd their armies rank'd in proud array,
Himself an army, now unequal match
To save himself against a coward arm'd
At one spear's length. O ever-failing trust
In mortal strength ! and oh ! what not in man
Deceivable and vain ? Nay, what thing good
Pray'd for, but often proves our woe, our bane ?
I pray'd for children, and thought barrenness
In wedlock a reproach ; I gain'd a son,
And such a son as all men hail'd me happy ;—
Who would be now a father in my stead ?
O wherefore did God grant me my request,
And as a blessing with such pomp adorn'd ?
Why are his gifts desirable, to tempt
Our earnest prayers, then, given with solemn hand
As graces, draw a scorpion's tail behind ?
For this did the Angel twice descend ? for this
Ordain'd thy nature holy, as of a plant
Select, and sacred, glorious for awhile,
The miracle of men ; then in an hour

Ensnar'd, assaulted, overcome, led bound,
Thy foes' derision, captive, poor, and blind,
Into a dungeon thrust, to work with slaves ?
Alas ! methinks whom God hath chosen once
To worthiest deeds, if he through frailty err,
He should not so o'erwhelm, and as a thrall
Subject him to so foul indignities,
Be it but for honour's sake of former deeds.

Sam. Appoint not heavenly disposition, Father ;
Nothing of all these evils hath befallen me
But justly ; I myself have brought them on,
Sole author I, sole cause : If aught seem vile,
As vile hath been my folly, who have profan'd
The mystery of God given me under pledge
Of vow, and have betray'd it to a woman,
A Canaanite, my faithless enemy.
This well I knew, nor was at all surpris'd,
But warn'd by oft experience : Did not she
Of Timna first betray me, and reveal
The secret wrested from me in her highth
Of nuptial love profess'd, carrying it straight
To them who had corrupted her, my spies,
And rivals ? In this other was there found
More faith, who also in her prime of love,
Spousal embraces, vitiated with gold,
Though offer'd only, by the scent conceiv'd
Her spurious first-born, treason against me ?
Thrice she assay'd with flattering prayers and sighs,
And amorous reproaches, to win from me
My capital secret, in what part my strength
Lay stor'd, in what part summ'd, that she might know ;
Thrice I deluded her, and turn'd to sport
Her importunity, each time perceiving
How openly, and with what impudence

She purpos'd to betray me, and (which was worse
 Than undissembled hate) with what contempt
 She sought to make me traitor to myself ;
 Yet the fourth time, when, mustering all her wiles,
 With blandish'd parlies, feminine assaults,
 Tongue-batteries, she surceas'd not, day nor night,
 To storm me over-watch'd, and wearied out,
 At times when men seek most repose and rest,
 I yielded, and unlock'd her all my heart,
 Who, with a grain of manhood well resolv'd,
 Might easily have shook off all her snares :
 But foul effeminacy held me yok'd
 Her bond-slave ; O indignity, O blot
 To honour and religion ! servile mind
 Rewarded well with servile punishment !
 The base degree to which I now am fallen,
 These rags, this grinding is not yet so base
 As was my former servitude, ignoble,
 Unmanly, ignominious, infamous,
 True slavery, and that blindness worse than this,
 That saw not how degenerately I serv'd.

Man. I cannot praise thy marriage choices, Son.
 Rather approv'd them not : but thou didst plead
 Divine impulsion prompting how thou might'st
 Find some occasion to infest our foes.
 I state not that ; this I am sure, our foes
 Found soon occasion thereby to make thee
 Their captive, and their triumph ; thou the sooner
 Temptation found'st, or over-potent charms,
 To violate the sacred trust of silence
 Deposited within thee ; which to have kept
 Tacit, was in thy power : true ; and thou bear'st
 Enough, and more, the burden of that fault ;
 Bitterly hast thou paid, and still art paying,

That rigid score. A worse thing yet remains ;
This day the Philistines a popular feast
Here celebrate in Gaza ; and proclaim
Great pomp, and sacrifice, and praises loud,
To Dagon, as their God who hath deliver'd
Thee, Samson, bound and blind into their hands,
Them out of thine, who slew'st them many a slain.
So Dagon shall be magnified, and God,
Besides whom is no God, compared with idols,
Disglorified, blasphem'd, and had in scorn
By the idolatrous rout amidst their wine ;
Which to have come to pass by means of thee,
Samson, of all thy sufferings think the heaviest,
Of all reproach the most with shame that ever
Could have befallen thee and thy father's house.

Sam. Father, I do acknowledge and confess
That I this honour, I this pomp, have brought
To Dagon, and advanc'd his praises high
Among the Heathen round ; to God have brought
Dishonour, obloquy, and op'd the mouths
Of idolists, and atheists ; have brought scandal
To Israel, diffidence of God, and doubt
In feeble hearts, propense enough before
To waver, or fall off and join with idols ;
Which is my chief affliction, shame and sorrow,
The anguish of my soul, that suffers not
Mine eye to harbour sleep, or thoughts to rest
This only hope relieves me, that the strife
With me hath end ; all the contést is now
'Twixt God and Dagon ; Dagon hath presum'd,
Me overthrown, to enter lists with God,
His deity comparing and preferring
Before the God of Abraham. He, be sure,
Will not connive, or linger, thus provok'd,

But will arise, and his Great Name assert :
Dagon must stoop, and shall ere long receive
Such a discomfit, as shall quite despoil him
Of all these boasted trophies won on me,
And with confusion blank his worshippers.

Man. With cause this hope relieves me, and these words
I as a prophecy receive ; for God,
Nothing more certain, will not long defer
To vindicate the glory of his Name
Against all competition, nor will long
Endure it doubtful whether God be Lord,
Or Dagon. But for thee what shall be done ?
Thou must not, in the mean while here forgot,
Lie in this miserable loathsome plight,
Neglected. I already have made way
To some Philistian lords, with whom to treat
About thy ransom : well they may by this
Have satisfied their utmost of revenge
By pains and slaveries, worse than death, inflicted
On thee, who now no more canst do them harm.

Sam. Spare that proposal, Father ; spare the trouble
Of that solicitation ; let me here,
As I deserve, pay on my punishment ;
And expiate, if possible, my crime,
Shameful garrulity. To have reveal'd
Secrets of men, the secrets of a friend,
How heinous had the fact been, how deserving
Contempt, and scorn of all, to be excluded
All friendship, and avoided as a blab,
The mark of fool set on his front ! But I
God's counsel have not kept, his holy secret
Presumptuously have publish'd, impiously,
Weakly at least, and shamefully ; a sin

That Gentiles in their parables condemn
To their abyss and horrid pains confin'd.

Man. Be penitent, and for thy fault contrite;
But act not in thy own affliction, Son :
Repent the sin ; but, if the punishment
Thou canst avoid, self-preservation bids ;
Or the execution leave to high disposal,
And let another hand, not thine, exact
Thy penal forfeit from thyself : perhaps
God will relent, and quit thee all his debt ;
Who ever more approves, and more accepts
(Best pleas'd with humble and filial submission,)
Him, who, imploring mercy, sues for life,
Than who, self-rigorous, chooses death as due ;
Which argues over-just, and self-displeas'd
For self-offence, more than for God offended.
Reject not then what offer'd means, who knows
But God hath set before us, to return thee
Home to his country and thy sacred house,
Where thou mayst bring thy offerings, to avert
His further ire, with prayers and vows renew'd.

Sam. His pardon I implore ; but as for life,
To what end should I seek it ? when in strength
All mortals I excell'd, and great in hopes
With youthful courage, and magnanimous thought
Of birth from Heaven foretold, and high exploits,
Full of divine instinct, after some proof
Of acts indeed heroick, far beyond
The sons of Anak, famous now and blaz'd,
Fearless of danger, like a petty god
I walk'd about admired of all and dreaded
On hostile ground, none daring my affront.
Then swollen with pride into the snare I fell
Of fair fallacious looks, venereal trains,

Softened with pleasure and voluptuous life ;
At length to lay my head and hallow'd pledge
Of all my strength in the lascivious lap
Of a deceitful concubine, who shore me
Like a tame wether, all my precious fleece,
Then turn'd me out ridiculous, despoil'd,
Shaven, and disarm'd among mine enemies.

Cho. Desire of wine and all delicious drinks,
Which many a famous warrior overturns,
Thou couldst repress ; nor did the dancing ruby
Sparkling, out-pour'd, the flavour, or the smell,
Or taste that cheers the heart of gods and men,
Allure thee from the cool crystalline stream.

Sam. Wherever fountain or fresh current flow'd
Against the eastern ray, translucent, pure
With touch ethereal of Heaven's fiery rod,
I drank, from the clear milky juice allaying
Thirst, and refresh'd : nor envied them the grape
Whose heads that turbulent liquor fills with fumes.

Cho. Oh madness, to think use of strongest wines
And strongest drinks our chief support of health
When God with these forbidd'n made choice to rear
His mighty champion, strong above compare,
Whose drink was only from the liquid brook.

Sam. But what avail'd this temperance, not complete
Against another object more enticing ?
What boots it at one gate to make defence,
And at another to let in the foe,
Effeminately vanquish'd ? by which means,
Now blind, dishearten'd, sham'd, dishonour'd, quell'd,
To what can I be useful, wherein serve
My nation, and the work from Heaven impos'd,
But to sit idle on the household hearth,
A burdenous drone ; to visitants a gaze,

Or pitied object, these redundant locks
Robustious to no purpose clustering down,
Vain monument of strength ; till length of years
And sedentary numbness craze my limbs
To a contemptible old age obscure ?
Here rather let me drudge, and earn my bread ;
Till vermin, or the draff of servile food,
Consume me, and oft invocated death
Hasten the welcome end of all my pains.

Man. Wilt thou then serve the Philistines with that gift
Which was expressly given thee to annoy them ?
Better at home lie bed-rid, not only idle,
Inglorious, unemploy'd, with age out-worn.
But God, who caus'd a fountain at thy prayer
From the dry ground to spring, thy thirst to allay
After the brunt of battle, can as easy
Cause light again within thy eyes to spring,
Wherewith to serve him better than thou hast ;
And I persuade me so ; why else this strength
Miraculous yet remaining in those locks ?
His might continues in thee not for nought,
Nor shall his wonderous gifts be frustrate thus.

Sam. All otherwise to me my thoughts portend,
That these dark orbs no more shall treat with light,
Nor the other light of life continue long,
But yield to double darkness nigh at hand :
So much I feel my genial spirits droop,
My hopes all flat, Nature within me seems
In all her functions weary of herself ;
My race of glory run, and race of shame,
And I shall shortly be with them that rest.

Man. Believe not these suggestions, which proceed
From anguish of the mind and humours black,
That mingle with thy fancy. I however

Must not omit a father's timely care
 To prosecute the means of thy deliverance
 By ransom, or how else : mean while be calm,
 And healing words from these thy friends admit. [Exit.]

Sam. O that Torment should not be confined
 To the body's wounds and sores,
 With maladies innumerable
 In heart, head, breast, and reins ;
 But must secret passage find
 To the inmost mind,
 There exercise all his fierce accidents,
 And on her purest spirits prey,
 As on entrails, joints, and limbs,
 With answerable pains, but more intense.
 Though void of corporal sense.

My griefs not only pain me
 As a lingering disease,
 But, finding no redress, ferment and rage ;
 Nor less than wounds immedicable
 Rankle, and fester, and gangrene,
 To black mortification.
 Thoughts, my tormenters, arm'd with deadly stings,
 Mangle my apprehensive tenderest parts,
 Exasperate, exulcerate, and raise
 Dire inflammation, which no cooling herb
 Or med'cinal liquor can assuage,
 Nor breath of vernal air from snowy Alp.¹
 Sleep hath forsook and given me o'er
 To death's benumbing opium as my only cure :
 Thence faintings, swoonings of despair,
 And sense of Heaven's desertion.

I was his nursling once, and choice delight,
 His destin'd from the womb,

¹ ' Alp : ' used for any lofty hill

Promis'd his heavenly message twice descending.
Under his special eye
Abstemious I grew up, and thriv'd amain ;
He led me on to mightiest deeds,
Above the nerve of mortal arm,
Against the uncircumcis'd, our enemies :
But now hath cast me off as never known,
And to those cruel enemies,
Whom I by his appointment had provok'd,
Left me all helpless with the irreparable loss
Of sight, reserv'd alive to be repeated
The subject of their cruelty and scorn.
Nor am I in the list of them that hope ;
Hopeless are all my evils, all remediless :
This one prayer yet remains, might I be heard,
No long petition, speedy death,
The close of all my miseries, and the balm.

Cho. Many are the sayings of the wise,
In ancient and in modern books inroll'd,
Extolling patience as the truest fortitude ;
And to the bearing well of all calamities,
All chances incident to man's frail life,
Consolatories writ
With studied argument, and much persuasion sought
Lenient of grief and anxious thought :
But with the afflicted in his pangs their sound
Little prevails, or rather seems a tune
Harsh, and of dissonant mood from his complaint ;
Unless he feel within
Some source of consolation from above,
Secret refreshings, that repair his strength,
And fainting spirits uphold.

God of our fathers, what is man !
That thou towards him with hand so various,

Or might I say contrarious,
Temper'st thy providence through his short course,
Not evenly, as thou rul'st
The angelick orders, and inferiour creatures mute,
Irrational and brute.
Nor do I name of men the common rout,
That wandering loose about
Grow up and perish, as the summer-fly,
Heads without name no more remembered ;
But such as thou hast solemnly elected,
With gifts and graces eminently adorn'd,
To some great work, thy glory,
And peoples' safety, which in part they effect :
Yet toward these thus dignified, thou oft,
Amidst their highth of noon,
Changest thy countenance, and thy hand, with no regard
Of highest favours past
From thee on them, or them to thee of service.

Nor only dost degrade them, or remit
To life obscur'd, which were a fair dismission,
But throw'st them lower than thou didst exalt them high ;
Unseemly falls in human eye,
Too grievous for the trespass or omission ;
Oft leavest them to the hostile sword
Of heathen and profane, their carcasses
To dogs and fowls a prey, or else captiv'd ;
Or to the unjust tribunals, under change of times,
And condemnation of the ingrateful multitude.
If these they 'scape, perhaps in poverty
With sickness and disease thou bow'st them down,
Painful diseases and deform'd,
In crude old age ;
Though not disordinate, yet causeless suffering
The punishment of dissolute days : in fine,

Just, or unjust, alike seem miserable,
For oft alike both come to evil end.

So deal not with this once thy glorious champion,
The image of thy strength, and mighty minister.
What do I beg? how hast thou dealt already!
Behold him in this state calamitous, and turn
His labours, for thou canst, to peaceful end.—

But who is this, what thing of sea or land?
Female of sex it seems,
That so bedeck'd, ornate, and gay,
Comes this way sailing
Like a stately ship
Of Tarsus, bound for the isles
Of Javan¹ or Gadire²
With all her bravery on, and tackle trim,
Sails fill'd, and streamers waving,
Court'd by all the winds that hold them play,
An amber scent of odorous perfume
Her harbinger, a damsel train behind;
Some rich Philistian matron she may seem;
And now at nearer view, no other certain
Than Dalila thy Wife.

Sam. My Wife! my Traitress: let her not come near me.

Cho. Yet on she moves, now stands and eyes thee fix'd,
About to have spoke; but now, with head declined,
Like a fair flower surcharg'd with dew, she weeps,
And words address'd seem into tears dissolv'd,
Wetting the borders of her silken veil:
But now again she makes address to speak.

Enter DALILA.

Dal. With doubtful feet and wavering resolution
I came, still dreading thy displeasure, Samson,

Which to have merited, without excuse,
 I cannot but acknowledge ; yet, if tears
 May expiate (though the fact more evil drew
 In the perverse event than I foresaw),
 My penance hath not slacken'd, though my pardon
 No way assur'd. But conjugal affection,
 Prevailing over fear and timorous doubt,
 Hath led me on, desirous to behold
 Once more thy face, and know of thy estate,
 If aught in my ability may serve
 To lighten what thou suffer'st, and appease
 Thy mind with what amends is in my power,
 Though late, yet in some part to recompense
 My rash, but more unfortunate, misdeed.

Sam. Out, out, Hyæna ! these are thy wonted arts
 And arts of every woman false like thee,
 To break all faith, all vows, deceive, betray,
 Then as repentant to submit, beseech,
 And reconciliation move with feign'd remorse,
 Confess, and promise wonders in her change ;
 Not truly penitent, but chief to try
 Her husband, how far urg'd his patience bears,
 His virtue or weakness which way to assail :
 Then with more cautious and instructed skill
 Again transgresses, and again submits ;
 That wisest and best men, full oft beguil'd,
 With goodness principled not to reject
 The penitent, but ever to forgive,
 Are drawn to wear out miserable days,
 Entangled with a poisonous bosom snake,
 If not by quick destruction soon cut off,
 As I by thee, to ages an example.

Dal. Yet hear me, Samson ; not that I endeavour
 To lessen or extenuate my offence ;

But on the other side, if it be weigh'd
By itself, with aggravations not surcharg'd,
Or else with just allowance counterpois'd,
I may, if possible, thy pardon find
The easier towards me, or thy hatred less.
First granting, as I do, it was a weakness
In me, but incident to all our sex,
Curiosity, inquisitive, impórtune
Of secrets, then with like infirmity
To publish them, both common female faults :
Was it not weakness also to make known
For importunity, that is for nought,
Wherein consisted all thy strength and safety ?
To what I did, thou show'dst me first the way.
But I to enemies reveal'd, and should not :
Nor should'st thou have trusted that to woman's frailty :
Ere I to thee, thou to thyself wast cruel.
Let weakness then with weakness come to parle,
So near related, or the same of kind,
Thine forgive mine ; that men may censure thine
The gentler, if severely thou exact not
More strength from me, than in thyself was found.
And what if love, which thou interpret'st hate,
The jealousy of love, powerful of sway
In human hearts, nor less in mine towards thee,
Caus'd what I did ? I saw thee mutable
Of fancy, fear'd lest one day thou wouldst leave me
As her at Timna, sought by all means therefore
How to endear, and hold thee to me firmest :
No better way I saw than by impórtuning
To learn thy secrets, get into my power
Thy key of strength and safety : thou wilt say,
Why then reveal'd ? I was assur'd by those
Who tempted me, that nothing was design'd

Against thee but safe custody, and hold :
That made for me ; I knew that liberty
Would draw thee forth to perilous enterprises,
While I at home sat full of cares and fears,
Wailing thy absence in my widow'd bed ;
Here I should still enjoy thee, day and night,
Mine and love's prisoner, not the Philistines',
Whole to myself, unhazarded abroad,
Fearless at home of partners in my love.
These reasons in love's law have past for good,
Though fond and reasonless to some perhaps ;
And love hath oft, well meaning, wrought much woe,
Yet always pity or pardon hath obtain'd.
Be not unlike all others, not austere
As thou art strong, inflexible as steel.
If thou in strength all mortals dost exceed,
In uncompassionate anger do not so.

Sam. How cunningly the sorceress displays
Her own transgressions, to upbraid me mine !
That malice, not repentance, brought thee hither,
By this appears ; I gave, thou say'st, the example,
I led the way ; bitter reproach, but true ;
I to myself was false ere thou to me ;
Such pardon therefore as I give my folly,
Take to thy wicked deed ; which when thou seest
Impartial, self-severe, inexorable,
Thou wilt renounce thy seeking, and much rather
Confess it feign'd : Weakness is thy excuse,
And I believe it ; weakness to resist
Philistian gold : If weakness may excuse,
What murderer, what traitor, parricide,
Incestuous, sacrilegious, but may plead it ?
All wickedness is weakness : that plea therefore
With God or Man will gain thee no remission.

But love constrain'd thee ; call it furious rage
To satisfy thy lust : love seeks to have love ;
My love how couldst thou hope, who took'st the way
To raise in me inexpiable hate,
Knowing, as needs I must, by thee betray'd ?
In vain thou striv'st to cover shame with shame,
Or by evasions thy crime uncover'st more.

Dal. Since thou determin'st weakness for no plea
In man or woman, though to thy own condemning,
Hear what assaults I had, what snares besides,
What sieges girt me round, ere I consented ;
Which might have aw'd the best-resolv'd of men,
The constantest, to have yielded without blame.
It was not gold, as to my charge thou lay'st,
That wrought with me : Thou know'st the magistrates
And princes of my country came in person,
Solicited, commanded, threaten'd, urg'd,
Adjur'd by all the bonds of civil duty
And of religion, press'd how just it was,
How honourable, how glorious, to entrap
A common enemy, who had destroy'd
Such numbers of our nation : and the priest
Was not behind, but ever at my ear,
Preaching how meritorious with the gods
It would be to ensnare an irreligious
Dishonourer of Dagon : what had I
To oppose against such powerful arguments ?
Only my love of thee held long debate
And combated in silence all these reasons
With hard contést ; at length that grounded maxim,
So rife and celebrated in the mouths
Of wisest men, that to the public good
Private respects must yield, with grave authority

Took full possession of me, and prevail'd ;
Virtue, as I thought, truth, duty, so enjoining.

Sam. I thought where all thy circling wiles would end ;
In feign'd religion—smooth hypocrisy !
But had thy love, still odiously pretended,
Been, as it ought, sincere, it would have taught thee
Far other reasonings, brought forth other deeds.
I, before all the daughters of my tribe
And of my nation, chose thee from among
My enemies, lov'd thee, as too well thou knew'st ;
Too well ; unbosom'd all my secrets to thee,
Not out of levity, but over-power'd
By thy request, who could deny thee nothing ;
Yet now am judg'd an enemy. Why then
Didst thou at first receive me for thy husband,
Then, as since then, thy country's foe profess'd ?
Being once a wife, for me thou wast to leave
Parents and country ; nor was I their subject,
Nor under their protection, but my own,
Thou mine, not theirs : If aught against my life
Thy country sought of thee, it sought unjustly,
Against the law of nature, law of nations ;
No more thy country, but an impious crew
Of men conspiring to uphold their state
By worse than hostile deeds, violating the ends
For which our country is a name so dear ;
Not therefore to be obey'd. But zeal mov'd thee ;
To please thy gods thou didst it ; gods unable
To acquit themselves and prosecute their foes
But by ungodly deeds, the contradiction
Of their own deity, gods cannot be ;
Less therefore to be pleased, obey'd, or fear'd.
These false pretexes and varnish'd colours failing,
Bare in thy guilt, how foul must thou appear !

Dal. In argument with men, a woman ever
Goes by the worse, whatever be her cause.

Sam. For want of words no doubt, or lack of breath ;
Witness when I was worried with thy peals.

Dal. I was a fool, too rash, and quite mistaken
In what I thought would have succeeded best.
Let me obtain forgiveness of thee, Samson ;
Afford me place to show what recompense
Towards thee I intend for what I have misdone,
Misguided ; only what remains past cure
Bear not too sensibly, nor still insist
To afflict thyself in vain : though sight be lost,
Life yet hath many solaces, enjoy'd
Where other senses want not their delights,
At home in leisure and domestick ease,
Exempt from many a care and chance to which
Eye-sight exposes daily men abroad.
I to the lords will intercede, not doubting
Their favourable ear, that I may fetch thee
From forth this loathsome prison-house, to abide
With me, where my redoubled love and care
With nursing diligence, to me glad office,
May ever tend about thee to old age
With all things grateful cheer'd, and so supplied,
That, what by me thou hast lost, thou least shalt miss.

Sam. No, no ; of my condition take no care ;
It fits not ; thou and I long since are twain :
Nor think me so unwary or accurs'd,
To bring my feet again into the snare
Where once I have been caught : I know thy trains,
Though dearly to my cost, thy gins, and toils ;
Thy fair enchanted cup, and warbling charms,
No more on me have power ; their force is null'd ;
So much of adder's wisdom I have learn'd,

To fence my ear against thy sorceries.
If in my flower of youth and strength, when all men
Lov'd, honour'd, fear'd me, thou alone couldst hate me
Thy husband, slight me, sell me, and forego me ;
How wouldst thou use me now, blind, and thereby
Deceivable, in most things as a child
Helpless, thence easily contemn'd, and scorn'd,
And last neglected ! How wouldst thou insult,
When I must live uxorious to thy will
In perfect thralldom ; how again betray me,
Bear my words and doings to the lords
To gloss upon, and, censuring, frown or smile !
This jail I count the house of liberty
To thine, whose doors my feet shall never enter.

Dal. Let me approach at least, and touch thy hand.

Sam. Not for thy life, lest fierce remembrance wake
My sudden rage to tear thee joint by joint.
At distance I forgive thee ; go with that ;
Bewail thy falsehood, and the pious works
It hath brought forth to make thee memorable
Among illustrious women, faithful wives !
Cherish thy hasten'd widowhood with the gold
Of matrimonial treason ! so farewell.

Dal. I see thou art implacable, more deaf
To prayers than winds and seas ; yet winds to seas
Are reconcil'd at length, and sea to shore :
Thy anger unappeasable, still rages,
Eternal tempest, never to be calm'd.
Why do I humble thus myself, and, suing
For peace, reap nothing but repulse and hate ;
Bid go with evil omen, and the brand
Of infamy upon my name denounc'd ?
To mix with thy concernments I desist
Henceforth, nor too much disapprove my own.

Fame, if not double-fac'd, is double-mouth'd,
And with contráry blast proclaims most deeds ;
On both his wings, one black, the other white,
Bears greatest names in his wild aery flight.
My name perhaps among the circumcis'd
In Dan, in Judah, and the bordering tribes,
To all posterity may stand defam'd,
With malediction mention'd, and the blot
Of falsehood most unconjugal traduc'd.
But in my country, where I most desire,
In Ecron, Gaza, Ashod, and in Gath,
I shall be named among the famousest
Of women, sung at solemn festivals,
Living and dead recorded, who, to save
Her country from a fierce destroyer, chose
Above the faith of wedlock-bands; my tomb
With odours visited and annual flowers;
Not less renown'd than in Mount Ephraim
Jael, who, with inhospitable guile
Smote Sisera sleeping, through the temples nail'd.
Nor shall I count it heinous to enjoy
The public marks of honour and reward,
Conferr'd upon me for the piety
Which to my country I was judged to have shown.
At this whoever envies or repines,
I leave him to his lot, and like my own. [Exit.

Cho. She's gone, a manifest serpent by her sting
Discover'd in the end, till now conceal'd.

Sam. So let her go; God sent her to debase me,
And aggravate my folly, who committed
To such a viper his most sacred trust
Of secresy, my safety, and my life.

Cho. Yet beauty, though injurious, hath strange power,
After offence returning, to regain

Love once possess'd, nor can be easily
Repuls'd, without much inward passion felt
And secret sting of amorous remorse.

Sam. Love-quarrels oft in pleasing concord end,
Not wedlock-treachery endangering life.

Cho. It is not virtue, wisdom, valour, wit,
Strength, comeliness of shape, or amplest merit,
That woman's love can win or long inherit;
But what it is, hard is to say,
Harder to hit,

(Which way soever men refer it),
Much like thy riddle, Samson, in one day
Or seven, though one should musing sit.

If any of these, or all, the Timnian bride
Had not so soon preferr'd
Thy paranymph,¹ worthless to thee compar'd,
Successour in thy bed,
Nor both so loosely disallied
Their nuptials, nor this last so treacherously
Had shorn the fatal harvest of thy head.
Is it for that such outward ornament
Was lavish'd on their sex, that inward gifts
Were left for haste unfinish'd, judgment scant,
Capacity not rais'd to apprehend
Or value what is best
In choice, but ofttest to affect the wrong?
Or was too much of self-love mix'd,
Of constancy no root infix'd,

That either they love nothing, or not long?

Whate'er it be, to wisest men and best
Seeming at first all heavenly under virgin veil,
Soft, modest, meek, demure,
Once join'd, the contrary she proves, a thorn

Intestine, far within defensive arms
A cleaving mischief, in his way to virtue
Adverse and turbulent, or by her charms
Draws him awry enslav'd
With dotage, and his sense deprav'd
To folly and shameful deeds which ruin ends.
What pilot so expert but needs must wreck,
Imbark'd with such a steers-mate at the helm !

Favour'd of Heaven, who finds
One virtuous, rarely found,
That in domestick good combines :
Happy that house ! his way to peace is smooth :
But virtue, which breaks through all opposition,
And all temptation can remove,
Most shines, and most is acceptable above.

Therefore God's universal law
Gave to the man despotick power
Over his female in due awe,
Nor from that right to part an hour,
Smile she or lour :
So shall he least confusion draw
On his whole life, not sway'd
By female usurpation, or dismay'd.
But had we best retire ? I see a storm.

Sam. Fair days have oft contracted wind and rain.

Cho. But this another kind of tempest brings.

Sam. Be less abstruse, my riddling days are past.

Cho. Look now for no enchanting voice, nor fear
The bait of honied words ; a rougher tongue
Draws hitherward ; I know him by his stride,
The giant Harapha of Gath, his look
Haughty, as is his pile high-built and proud.
Comes he in peace ? what wind hath blown him hither
I less conjecture than when first I saw

The sumptuous Dalila floating this way :
His habit carries peace, his brow defiance.

Sam. Or peace or not, alike to me he comes.

Cho. His fraught¹ we soon shall know, he now arrives.

Enter HARAPHA.

Har. I come not, Samson, to condole thy chance,
As these perhaps, yet wish it had not been,
Though for no friendly intent. I am of Gath ;
Men call me Harapha, of stock renown'd
As Og, or Anak, and the Emims old
That Kiriathaim² held ; thou know'st me now,
If thou at all art known. Much I have heard
Of thy prodigious might and feats perform'd,
Incredible to me, in this displeas'd,
That I was never present on the place
Of those encounters, where we might have tried
Each other's force in camp or listed field ;
And now am come to see of whom such noise
Hath walk'd about, and each limb to survey,
If thy appearance answer loud report.

Sam. The way to know were not to see but taste.

Har. Dost thou already single me ? I thought
Gyves and the mill had tam'd thee. O that fortune
Had brought me to the field, where thou art fam'd
To have wrought such wonders with an ass's jaw !
I should have forc'd thee soon with other arms,
Or left thy carcass where the ass lay thrown :
So had the glory of prowess been recover'd
To Palestine, won by a Philistine,
From the unforeskinn'd race, of whom thou bear'st
The highest name for valiant acts ; that honour,

Certain to have won by mortal duel from thee,
I lose, prevented by thy eyes put out.

Sam. Boast not of what thou wouldst have done, but do
What then thou wouldst ; thou seest it in thy hand.

Har. To combat with a blind man I disdain,
And thou hast need much washing to be touch'd.

Sam. Such usage as your honourable lords
Afford me, assassinated and betray'd,
Who durst not with their whole united powers
In fight withstand me single and unarm'd,
Nor in the house with chamber-ambushes
Close-banded durst attack me, no, not sleeping,
Till they had hir'd a woman with their gold
Breaking her marriage-faith to circumvent me.
Therefore, without feign'd shifts, let be assign'd
Some narrow place enclos'd, where sight may give thee,
Or rather flight, no great advantage on me ;
Then put on all thy gorgeous arms, thy helmet
And brigandine¹ of brass, thy broad habergeon,²
Vant-brace³ and greves,⁴ and gauntlet, add thy spear,
A weaver's beam, and seven-times-folded shield ;
I only with an oaken staff will meet thee,
And raise such outcries on thy clatter'd iron,
Which long shall not withhold me from thy head,
That in a little time, while breath remains thee,
Thou oft shalt wish thyself at Gath, to boast
Again in safety what thou wouldst have done
To Samson, but shalt never see Gath more.

Har. Thou durst not thus disparage glorious arms,
Which greatest heroes have in battle worn,
Their ornament and safety, had not spells
And black enchantments, some magician's art,

³ 'Vant-brace:' armour for the arms.—⁴ 'Greves:' armour for legs.

Arm'd thee or charm'd thee strong, which thou from Heaven
Feign'dst at thy birth was given thee in thy hair,
Where strength can least abide, though all thy hairs
Were bristles ranged like those that ridge the back
Of chaf'd wild boars, or ruffled porcupines.

Sam. I know no spells, use no forbidden arts ;
My trust is in the Living God, who gave me
At my nativity this strength, diffus'd
No less through all my sinews, joints, and bones,
Than thine, while I preserv'd these locks unshorn,
The pledge of my unviolated vow.
For proof hereof, if Dagon be thy God,
Go to his temple, invoke his aid
With solemnest devotion, spread before him
How highly it concerns his glory now
To frustrate and dissolve these magick spells,
Which I to be the power of Israel's God
Avow, and challenge Dagon to the test,
Offering to combat thee his champion bold,
With the utmost of his godhead seconded :
Then thou shalt see, or rather, to thy sorrow,
Soon feel, whose God is strongest, thine or mine.

Har. Presume not on thy God, whate'er he be ;
Thee he regards not, owns not, hath cut off
Quite from his people, and deliver'd up
Into thy enemies' hand, permitted them
To put out both thine eyes, and fetter'd send thee
Into the common prison, there to grind
Among the slaves and asses, thy comrades,
As good for nothing else ; no better service
With those thy boisterous locks, no worthy match
For valour to assail, nor by the sword
Of noble warriour, so to stain his honour,
But by the barber's razor best subdued.

Sam. All these indignities, for such they are
From thine, these evils I deserve, and more,
Acknowledge them from God inflicted on me
Justly, yet despair not of his final pardon,
Whose ear is ever open, and his eye
Gracious to re-admit the suppliant :
In confidence whereof I once again
Defy thee to the trial of mortal fight,
By combat to decide whose God is God,
Thine, or whom I with Israel's sons adore.

Har. Fair honour that thou dost thy God, in trusting
He will accept thee to defend his cause,
A Murderer, a Revolter, and a Robber !

Sam. Tongue-doughty Giant, how dost thou proveme these ?

Har. Is not thy nation subject to our lords ?
Their magistrates confess'd it when they took thee
As a league-breaker, and deliver'd bound
Into our hands : for hadst thou not committed
Notorious murder on those thirty men
At Ascalon, who never did thee harm,
Then like a robber stripp'dst them of their robes ?
The Philistines, when thou hadst broke the league,
Went up with armed powers thee only seeking,
To others did no violence nor spoil.

Sam. Among the daughters of the Philistines
I chose a wife, which argued me no foe ;
And in your city held my nuptial feast :
But your ill-meaning politician lords,
Under pretence of bridal friends and guests,
Appointed to await me thirty spies,
Who, threatening cruel death, constrain'd the bride
To wring from me, and tell to them, my secret,
That solved the riddle which I had propos'd.
When I perceiv'd all set on enmity,

As on my enemies, wherever chanc'd,
I used hostility, and took their spoil,
To pay my underminers in their coin.
My nation was subjected to your lords ;
It was the force of conquest ; force with force
Is well ejected when the conquer'd can.
But I, a private person, whom my country
As a league-breaker gave up bound, presum'd
Single rebellion, and did hostile acts.
I was no private, but a person rais'd
With strength sufficient, and command from Heaven,
To free my country ; if their servile minds
Me, their deliverer sent, would not receive,
But to their masters gave me up for nought,
The unworthier they ; whence to this day they serve.
I was to do my part from Heaven assign'd,
And had perform'd it, if my known offence
Had not disabled me, not all your force :
These shifts refuted, answer thy appelland,
Though by his blindness maim'd for high attempts,
Who now defies thee thrice to single fight,
As a petty enterprise of small enforce.

Har. With thee ! a man condemn'd, a slave inroll'd,
Due by the law to capital punishment !
To fight with thee no man of arms will deign.

Sam. Cam'st thou for this, vain boaster, to survey me,
To descant on my strength, and give thy verdict ?
Come nearer ; part not hence so slight inform'd ;
But take good heed my hand survey not thee.

Har. O Baal-zebub ! can my ears unus'd
Hear these dishonours, and not render death ?

Sam. No man withholds thee, nothing from thy hand
Fear I incurable ; bring up thy van,
My heels are fetter'd, but my fist is free.

Har. This insolence other kind of answer fits.

Sam. Go, baffled coward ! lest I run upon thee,
Though in these chains, bulk without spirit vast,
And with one buffet lay thy structure low,
Or swing thee in the air, then dash thee down
To the hazard of thy brains and shatter'd sides.

Har. By Ashtaroth, ere long thou shalt lament
These braveries, in irons loaden on thee. [Exit.

Cho. His giantship is gone somewhat crest-fallen,
Stalking with less unconscionable strides,
And lower looks, but in a sultry chafe.

Sam. I dread him not, nor all his giant brood,
Though Fame divulge him father of five sons,
All of gigantick size, Goliath chief.

Cho. He will directly to the lords, I fear,
And with malicious counsel stir them up
Some way or other yet further to afflict thee.

Sam. He must allege some cause, and offer'd fight
Will not dare mention, lest a question rise
Whether he durst accept the offer or not ;
And, that he durst not, plain enough appear'd.
Much more affliction than already felt
They cannot well impose, nor I sustain ;
If they intend advantage of my labours,
The work of many hands, which earns my keeping,
With no small profit daily to my owners.
But come what will, my deadliest foe will prove
My speediest friend, by death to rid me hence ;
The worst that he can give, to me the best.
Yet so it may fall out, because their end
Is hate, not help to me, it may with mine
Draw their own ruin who attempt the deed.

Cho. Oh how comely it is, and how reviving
To the spirits of just men long oppress'd !

When God into the hands of their deliverer
Puts invincible might
To quell the mighty of the earth, the oppressour,
The brute and boisterous force of violent men,
Hardy and industrious to support
Tyrannick power, but raging to pursue
The righteous and all such as honour truth ;
He all their ammunition
And feats of war defeats,
With plain heroick magnitude of mind
And celestial vigour arm'd ;
Their armouries and magazines contemns,
Renders them useless ; while
With winged expedition,
Swift as the lightning glance, he executes
His errand on the wicked, who, surpris'd,
Lose their defence, distracted and amaz'd.

But patience is more oft the exercise
Of saints, the trial of their fortitude,
Making them each his own deliverer,
And victor over all
That tyranny or fortune can inflict.
Either of these is in thy lot,
Samson, with might endued
Above the sons of men ; but sight bereav'd
May chance to number thee with those Whom patience finally must crown.

This idol's day hath been to thee no day of rest
Labouring thy mind
More than the working day thy hands.
And yet perhaps more trouble is behind,
For I descry this way
Some other tending ; in his hand
A sceptre or quaint staff he bears,

Comes on amain, speed in his look.
 By his habit I discern him now
 A public officer, and now at hand ;
 His message will be short and voluble.

Enter Officer.

Off. Hebrews, the prisoner Samson here I seek.

Cho. His manacles remark him, there he sits.

Off. Samson, to thee our lords thus bid me say ;
 This day to Dagon is a solemn feast,
 With sacrifices, triumph, pomp, and games :
 Thy strength they know surpassing human rate,
 And now some public proof thereof require
 To honour this great feast, and great assembly ;
 Rise therefore with all speed, and come along,
 Where I will see thee hearten'd, and fresh clad,
 To appear, as fits, before the illustrious lords.

Sam. Thou know'st I am an Hebrew, therefore tell them,
 Our Law forbids at their religious rites
 My presence ; for that cause I cannot come.

Off. This answer, be assured, will not content them.

Sam. Have they not sword-players, and every sort
 Of gymnick¹ artists, wrestlers, riders, runners,
 Jugglers, and dancers, anticks, mummers, mimicks,
 But they must pick me out, with shackles tir'd,
 And over-labour'd at their public mill,
 To make them sport with blind activity ?
 Do they not seek occasion of new quarrels
 On my refusal to distress me more,
 Or make a game of my calamities ?
 Return the way thou cam'st, I will not come.

Off. Regard thyself ; this will offend them highly.

Sam. Myself ? my conscience, and internal peace.

Can they think me so broken, so debas'd
 With corporal servitude, that my mind ever
 Will condescend to such absurd commands ?
 Although their drudge, to be their fool or jester,
 And in my midst of sorrow and heart grief
 To show them feats, and play before their god,
 The worst of all indignities, yet on me
 Join'd with extreme contempt ? I will not come.

Off. My message was impos'd on me with speed,
 Brooks no delay : is this thy resolution ?

Sam. So take it with what speed thy message needs.

Off. I am sorry what this stoutness will produce. [Exit.]

Sam. Perhaps thou shalt have cause to sorrow indeed.

Cho. Consider, Samson ; matters now are strain'd

Up to the highth, whether to hold or break :
 He's gone, and who knows how he may report
 Thy words by adding fuel to the flame ?
 Expect another message more imperious,
 More lordly thundering than thou well wilt bear.

Sam. Shall I abuse this consecrated gift
 Of strength, again returning with my hair
 After my great transgression ; so requite
 Favour renew'd, and add a greater sin
 By prostituting holy things to idols ?
 A Nazarite in place abominable
 Vaunting my strength in honour to their Dagon !
 Besides, how vile, contemptible, ridiculous,
 What act more execrably unclean, profane !

Cho. Yet with this strength thou serv'st the Philistines,
 Idolatrous, uncircumcis'd, unclean.

Sam. Not in their idol-worship. but by labour
 Honest and lawful to deserve my food
 Of those, who have me in their civil power.

Cho. Where the heart joins not, outward acts defile not.

Sam. Where outward force constrains, the sentence holds.
But who constrains me to the temple of Dagon,
Not dragging? the Philistian lords command.
Commands are no constraints. If I obey them,
I do it freely, venturing to displease
God for the fear of man, and man prefer,
Set God behind: which in his jealousy
Shall never, unrepented, find forgiveness.
Yet that he may dispense with me, or thee,
Present in temples at idolatrous rites
For some important cause, thou need'st not doubt.

Cho. How thou wilt here come off surmounts my reach.

Sam. Be of good courage; I begin to feel
Some rousing motions in me, which dispose
To something extraordinary my thoughts.
I with this messenger will go along,
Nothing to do, be sure, that may dishonour
Our Law, or stain my vow of Nazarite.
If there be aught of presage in the mind
This day will be remember'd in my life
By some great act, or of my days the last.

Cho. In time thou hast resolv'd, the man returns.

Off. Samson, this second message from our lords
To thee I am bid say. Art thou our slave,
Our captive, at the public mill our drudge,
And dar'st thou at our sending and command
Dispute thy coming? come without delay;
Or we shall find such engines to assail
And hamper thee, as thou shalt come of force,
Though thou wert firmlier fasten'd than a rock.

Sam. I could be well content to try their art,
Which to no few of them would prove pernicious.
Yet, knowing their advantages too many,
Because they shall not trail me through their streets

Like a wild beast, I am content to go.
Masters' commands come with a power resistless
To such as owe them absolute subjection;
And for a life who will not change his purpose?
(So mutable are all the ways of men;)
Yet this be sure, in nothing to comply
Scandalous or forbidden in our Law.

Off. I praise thy resolution: doff these links:
By this compliance thou wilt win the lords
To favour, and perhaps to set thee free.

Sam. Brethren, farewell; your company along
I will not wish, lest it perhaps offend them
To see me girt with friends; and how the sight
Of me, as of a common enemy,
So dreaded once, may now exasperate them,
I know not: lords are lordliest in their wine;
And the well-feasted priest then soonest fir'd
With zeal, if aught religion seem concern'd;
No less the people, on their holy-days,
Impetuous, insolent, unquenchable:
Happen what may, of me expect to hear
Nothing dishonourable, impure, unworthy
Our God, our Law, my Nation, or myself,
The last of me or no I cannot warrant.

Cho. Go, and the Holy One
Of Israel be thy guide
To what may serve his glory best, and spread his Name
Great among the Heathen round;
Send thee the Angel of thy birth, to stand
Fast by thy side, who from thy father's field
Rode up in flames after his message told
Of thy conception, and be now a shield
Of fire; that Spirit, that first rush'd on thee
In the camp of Dan.

Be efficacious in thee now at need!
For never was from Heaven imparted
Measure of strength so great to mortal seed,
As in thy wonderous actions hath been seen.—
But wherefore comes old Manoah in such haste
With youthful steps? much livelier than erewhile
He seems; supposing here to find his son,
Or of him bringing to us some glad news?

Enter MANOAH.

Man. Peace with you, Brethren; my inducement hither
Was not at present here to find my son,
By order of the lords now parted hence
To come and play before them at their feast.
I heard all as I came, the city rings,
And numbers thither flock; I had no will,
Lest I should see him forc'd to things unseemly.
But that, which mov'd my coming now, was chiefly
To give ye part with me what hope I have
With good success to work his liberty.

Cho. That hope would much rejoice us to partake
With thee; say, reverend Sire, we thirst to hear.

Man. I have attempted one by one the lords
Either at home, or through the high street passing,
With supplication prone and father's tears,
To accept of ransom for my son their prisoner.
Some much averse I found and wonderous harsh,
Contemptuous, proud, set on revenge and spite;
That part most reverenc'd Dagon and his priests:
Others more moderate seeming, but their aim
Private reward, for which both God and State
They easily would set to sale: a third
More generous far and civil, who confess'd
They had enough reveng'd; having reduc'd

Their foe to misery beneath their fears,
The rest was magnanimity to remit,
If some convenient ransom were propos'd. .
What noise or shout was that? it tore the sky.

Cho. Doubtless the people shouting to behold
Their once great dread, captive, and blind before them,
Or at some proof of strength before them shown.

Man. His ransom, if my whole inheritance
May compass it, shall willingly be paid
And number'd down: much rather I shall choose
To live the poorest in my tribe, than richest,
And he in that calamitous prison left.
No, I am fix'd not to part hence without him.
For his redemption all my patrimony,
If need be, I am ready to forego
And quit: not wanting him, I shall want nothing.

Cho. Fathers are wont to lay up for their sons,
Thou for thy son art bent to lay out all;
Sons wont to nurse their parents in old age,
Thou in old age carest how to nurse thy son,
Made older than thy age through eye-sight lost.

Man. It shall be my delight to tend his eyes,
And view him sitting in the house, ennobled
With all those high exploits by him achiev'd,
And on his shoulders waving down those locks
That of a nation arm'd the strength contain'd:
And I persuade me, God hath not permitted
His strength again to grow up with his hair,
Garrison'd round about him like a camp
Of faithful soldiery, were not his purpose
To use him further yet in some great service;
Not to sit idle with so great a gift
Useless, and thence ridiculous about him.

And since his strength with eye-sight was not lost,
God will restore him eye-sight to his strength.

Cho. Thy hopes are nor ill-founded, nor seem vain
Of his delivery, and thy joy thereon
Conceiv'd, agreeable to a father's love,
In both which we, as next, participate.

Man. I know your friendly minds, and—O what noise!—
Mercy of Heaven! what hideous noise was that?
Horribly loud, unlike the former shout.

Cho. Noise call you it, or universal groan,
As if the whole inhabitation perish'd!
Blood, death, and deathful deeds, are in that noise,
Ruin, destruction at the utmost point.

Man. Of ruin indeed methought I heard the noise:
Oh! it continues, they have slain my son.

Cho. Thy son is rather slaying them; that outcry
From slaughter of one foe could not ascend.

Man. Some dismal accident it needs must be;
What shall we do, stay here or run and see?

Cho. Best keep together here, lest, running thither,
We unawares run into danger's mouth.
This evil on the Philistines is fallen;
From whom could else a general cry be heard?
The sufferers then will scarce molest us here;
From other hands we need not much to fear.
What if, his eye-sight (for to Israel's God
Nothing is hard), by miracle restor'd,
He now be dealing dole among his foes,
And over heaps of slaughter'd walk his way?

Man. That were a joy presumptuous to be thought.

Cho. Yet God hath wrought things as incredible
For his people of old; what hinders now?

Man. He can, I know, but doubt to think he will;

Yet hope would fain subscribe, and tempts belief.
A little stay will bring some notice hither.

Cho. Of good or bad so great, of bad the sooner;
For evil news rides post, while good news bates.
And to our wish I see one hither speeding,
An Hebrew, as I guess, and of our tribe.

Enter Messenger.

Mess. O whither shall I run, or which way fly
The sight of this so horrid spectacle,
Which erst my eyes beheld, and yet behold?
For dire imagination still pursues me.
But providence or instinct of nature seems,
Or reason though disturb'd, and scarce consulted,
To have guided me aright, I know not how,
To thee first, reverend Manoah, and to these
My countrymen, whom here I knew remaining,
As at some distance from the place of horror,
So in the sad event too much concern'd.

Man. The accident was loud, and here before thee
With rueful cry, yet what it was we hear not;
No preface needs, thou seest we long to know.

Mess. It would burst forth, but I recover breath
And sense distract, to know well what I utter.

Man. Tell us the sum, the circumstance defer.

Mess. Gaza yet stands, but all her sons are fallen,
All in a moment overwhelm'd and fallen.

Man. Sad, but thou know'st to Israelites not saddest
The desolation of a hostile city.

Mess. Feed on that first, there may in grief be surfeit.

Man. Relate by whom.

Mess. By Samson.

Man. That still lessens
The sorrow, and converts it nigh to joy.

Mess. Ah ! Manoah, I refrain too suddenly
To utter what will come at last too soon ;
Lest evil tidings with too rude irruption
Hitting thy aged ear should pierce too deep.

Man. Suspense in news is torture, speak them out.

Mess. Take then the worst in brief,—Samson is dead !

Man. The worst indeed ! O all my hopes defeated
To free him hence ! but death, who sets all free,
Hath paid his ransom now and full discharge.
What windy joy this day had I conceiv'd
Hopeful of his delivery, which now proves
Abortive as the first-born bloom of spring
Nipt with the lagging rear of winter's frost !
Yet ere I give the reins to grief, say first,
How died he ; death to life is crown or shame.
All by him fell, thou say'st ; by whom fell he ?
What glorious hand gave Samson his death's wound ?

Mess. Unwounded of his enemies he fell.

Man. Wearied with slaughter then, or how ? explain.

Mess. By his own hands.

Man. Self-violence ? what cause
Brought him so soon at variance with himself
Among his foes ?

Mess. Inevitable cause
At once both to destroy and be destroy'd ;
The edifice, where all were met to see him,
Upon their heads and on his own he pull'd.

Man. O lastly over-strong against thyself !
A dreadful way thou took'st to thy revenge.
More than enough we know ; but while things yet
Are in confusion, give us, if thou canst,
Eye-witness of what first or last was done,
Relation more particular and distinct.

Mess. Occasions drew me early to this city ;

And, as the gates I enter'd with sun-rise,
The morning trumpets festival proclaim'd
Through each high street : little had I dispatch'd,
When all abroad was rumour'd that this day
Samson should be brought forth, to show the people
Proof of his mighty strength in feats and games ;
I sorrow'd at his captive state, but minded
Not to be absent at that spectacle.
The building was a spacious theater
Half-round, on two main pillars vaulted high,
With seats where all the lords, and each degree
Of sort, might sit in order to behold ;
The other side was open, where the throng
On banks and scaffolds under sky might stand ;
I among these aloof obscurely stood.
The feast and noon grew high, and sacrifice
Had fill'd their hearts with mirth, high cheer, and wine,
When to their sports they turn'd. Immediately
Was Samson as a public servant brought,
In their state livery clad ; before him pipes
And timbrels, on each side went armed guards,
Both horse and foot, before him and behind
Archers, and slingers, cataphracts,¹ and spears.
At sight of him the people with a shout
Rifted the air, clamouring their god with praise,
Who had made their dreadful enemy their thrall.
He patient, but undaunted, where they led him,
Came to the place ; and what was set before him,
Which without help of eye might be assay'd,
To heave, pull, draw, or break, he still perform'd
All with incredible, stupendious force :
None daring to appear antagonist.
At length for intermission' sake they led him

Between the pillars ; he his guide requested
(For so from such as nearer stood we heard)
As over-tir'd to let him lean awhile
With both his arms on those two massy pillars,
That to the arched roof gave main support.
He, unsuspecting, led him ; which when Samson
Felt in his arms, with head awhile inclin'd,
And eyes fast fix'd, he stood, as one who pray'd,
Or some great matter in his mind revolv'd ;
At last with head erect thus cried aloud ;
“Hitherto, Lords, what your commands impos'd
I have perform'd, as reason was, obeying,
Not without wonder or delight beheld :
Now of my own accord, such other trial
I mean to show you of my strength, yet greater,
As with amaze shall strike all who behold.”
This utter'd, straining all his nerves he bow'd ;
As with the force of winds and waters pent,
When mountains tremble, those two massy pillars
With horrible convulsion to and fro
He tugg'd, he shook, till down they came and drew
The whole roof after them, with burst of thunder
Upon the heads of all who sat beneath,
Lords, ladies, captains, counsellors, or priests,
Their choice nobility and flower, not only
Of this but each Philistian city round,
Met from all parts to solemnise this feast.
Samson, with these immix'd, inevitably
Pull'd down the same destruction on himself ;
The vulgar only 'scaped who stood without.

Cho. O dearly-bought revenge, yet glorious !
Living or dying thou hast fulfill'd
The work for which thou wast foretold
To Israel, and now ly'st victorious

Among thy slain self-kill'd,
Not willingly, but tangled in the fold
Of dire necessity, whose law in death conjoin'd
Thee with thy slaughter'd foes, in number more
Than all thy life hath slain before.

1st Semichor. While their hearts were jocund and sublime,
Drunk with idolatry, drunk with wine,
And fat regorg'd of bulls and goats,
Chaunting their idol, and preferring
Before our living Dread who dwells,
In Silo,¹ his bright sanctuary :
Among them he a Spirit of phrenzy sent,
Who hurt their minds,
And urg'd them on with mad desire,
To call in haste for their destroyer ;
They, only set on sport and play,
Unweetingly impórtuned
Their own destruction to come speedy upon them.
So fond are mortal men,
Fallen into wrath divine,
As their own ruin on themselves to invite,
Insensate left, or to sense reprobate,
And with blindness internal struck.

2d Semichor. But he, though blind of sight,
Despis'd and thought extinguish'd quite,
With inward eyes illuminated,
His fiery virtue rous'd
From under ashes into sudden flame,
And as an evening dragon came,
Assailant on the perched roosts
And nests in order rang'd
Of tame villatick fowl ; but as an eagle
His cloudless thunder bolted on their heads.

¹ ' Silo : ' Shiloh, where the ark and tabernacle then were.

So Virtue, given for lost,
 Depress'd, and overthrown, as seem'd
 Like that self-begotten bird¹
 In the Arabian woods embost,²
 That no second knows nor third,
 And lay ere while a holocaust,³
 From out her ashy womb now teem'd,
 Revives, reflourishes, then vigorous most
 When most unactive deem'd ;
 And, though her body die, her fame survives
 A secular⁴ bird, ages of lives.

Man. Come, come ; no time for lamentation now,
 Nor much more cause ; Samson hath quit himself
 Like Samson, and heroickly hath finish'd
 A life heroick ; on his enemies
 Fully reveng'd, hath left them years of mourning,
 And lamentation to the sons of Caphtor⁵
 Through all Philistian bounds ; to Israel
 Honour hath left, and freedom, let but them
 Find courage to lay hold on this occasion ;
 To himself and father's house eternal fame ;
 And, which is best and happiest yet, all this
 With God not parted from him, as was fear'd,
 But favouring and assisting to the end.
 Nothing is here for tears, nothing to wail
 Or knock the breast ; no weakness, no contempt,
 Dispraise, or blame ; nothing but well and fair,
 And what may quiet us in a death so noble.
 Let us go find the body where it lies
 Soak'd in his enemies' blood ; and from the stream
 With lavers pure, and cleansing herbs, wash off

The clotted gore. I, with what speed the while (Gaza is not in plight to say us nay),
 Will send for all my kindred, all my friends,
 To fetch him hence, and solemnly attend
 With silent obsequy, and funeral train,
 Home to his father's house : there will I build him
 A monument, and plant it round with shade
 Of laurel ever green, and branching palm,
 With all his trophies hung, and acts inroll'd
 In copious legend, or sweet lyrick song.
 Thither shall all the valiant youth resort,
 And from his memory inflame their breasts
 To matchless valour, and adventures high :
 The virgins also shall, on feastful days,
 Visit his tomb with flowers ; only bewailing
 His lot unfortunate in nuptial choice,
 From whence captivity and loss of eyes.

Cho. All is best, though we oft doubt
 What the unsearchable dispose
 Of Highest Wisdom brings about,
 And ever best found in the close.
 Oft He seems to hide his face,
 But unexpectedly returns,
 And to his faithful champion hath in place
 Bore witness gloriously ; whence Gaza mourns,
 And all that band them to resist
 His uncontrollable intent :
 His servants He, with new acquist¹
 Of true experience, from this great event
 With peace and consolation hath dismiss'd,
 And calm of mind all passion spent.

COMUS:

A Mask.

PRESENTED AT LUDLOW CASTLE, 1634, BEFORE JOHN, EARL OF BRIDGEWATER,¹ THEN PRESIDENT OF WALES.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE

JOHN LORD VISCOUNT BRACKLEY,²

SON AND HEIR APPARENT TO THE EARL OF BRIDGEWATER, ETC.

MY LORD,

This poem, which received its first occasion of birth from yourself and others of your noble family, and much honour from your own person in the performance, now returns again to make a final dedication of itself to you. Although not openly acknowledged³ by the author, yet it is a legitimate offspring, so lovely, and so much desired, that the often copying of it hath tired my pen, to give my several friends satisfaction, and brought me to a necessity of producing it to the public view; and now to offer it up in all rightful devotion to those fair hopes, and rare endowments of your much promising youth, which give a full assurance, to all that know you, of a future excellence. Live, sweet Lord, to be the honour of your name, and receive this as your own, from the hands of him, who hath by many favours been long obliged to your most honoured parents, and as in this representation your attendant Thyrsis, so now in all real expression,

Your faithful and most humble Servant,

H. LAWES.⁴

¹ 'John Earl of Bridgewater,' before whom Comus was first presented, and whose sons and daughter performed the characters of the Brothers and the Lady. It is said that these latter had been benighted in Haywood Forest, and that Milton founded Comus on this incident. Earl John died 1649. He was a royalist.

² 'Lord Brackley:' he became Earl of Bridgewater, and died in 1686.

³ 'Not openly acknowledged' till 1645.

⁴ 'H. Lawes:' a celebrated musician, who composed the music for Comus. He was an amiable man, and, though a royalist, an intimate friend of Milton's, who dedicated to him his 13th Sonnet. He composed an immense variety of sacred and other music.

The ATTENDANT SPIRIT descends or enters.

BEFORE the starry threshold of Jove's court
My mansion is, where those immortal shapes
Of bright æreal spirits live inspher'd
In regions mild of calm and serene air,
Above the smoke and stir of this dim spot,
Which men call Earth ; and, with low-thoughted care
Confin'd and pester'd³ in this pinfold⁴ here,
Strive to keep up a frail and feverish being,
Unmindful of the crown that Virtue gives,
After this mortal change, to her true servants,
Amongst the enthron'd gods on sainted seats,
Yet some there be, that by due steps aspire

¹ 'Thomas Egerton : ' the fourth son of the Earl. He died at the age of twenty-three.—² 'The Lady Alice,' as her portraits testify, was very beautiful. She became the Countess of Carbery.—³ 'Pester'd : ' i. e., crowded.—⁴ 'Pinfold : ' i. e., sheepfold.

To lay their just hands on that golden key,
 That opes the palace of Eternity:
 To such my errand is ; and, but for such,
 I would not soil these pure ambrosial weeds
 With the rank vapours of this sin-worn mould.

But to my task. Neptune, besides the sway
 Of every salt flood, and each ebbing stream,
 Took in by lot 'twixt high and nether¹ Jove
 Imperial rule of all the sea-girt isles,
 That, like to rich and various gems, inlay
 The unadorned bosom of the deep :
 Which he, to grace his tributary gods,
 By course commits to several government,
 And gives them leave to wear their sapphire crowns,
 And wield their little tridents : But this Isle,
 The greatest and the best of all the main,
 He quarters to his blue-hair'd deities ;
 And all this tract that fronts the falling sun
 A noble Peer¹ of mickle trust and power
 Has in his charge, with temper'd awe to guide
 An old and haughty nation, proud in arms :
 Where his fair offspring, nurs'd in princely lore,
 Are coming to attend their father's state,
 And new-entrusted scepter : but their way
 Lies through the perplex'd paths of this drear wood,
 The nodding horror of whose shady brows
 Threats the forlorn and wandering passenger ;
 And here their tender age might suffer peril,
 But that by quick command from sovran Jove
 I was dispatch'd for their defence and guard :
 And listen why ; for I will tell you now

¹ 'High and nether:' i. e., the upper and the lower dominions of Jove.—

* 'Peer:' Earl of Bridgewater, then President of Wales and the Marches.

What never yet was heard in tale or song,
From old or modern bard, in hall or bower.

Bacchus, that first from out the purple grape
Crush'd the sweet poison of misused wine,
After the Tuscan mariners¹ transform'd,
Coasting the Tyrrhene shore, as the winds listed,
On Circe's island fell : (Who knows not Circe,²
The daughter of the Sun, whose charmed cup
Whoever tasted lost his upright shape,
And downward fell into a grovelling swine?)
This Nymph, that gaz'd upon his clustering locks
With ivy berries wreath'd, and his blithe youth,
Had by him, ere he parted thence, a son
Much like his father, but his mother more,
Whom therefore she brought up, and Comus nam'd :
Who, ripe and frolic of his full-grown age,
Roving the Celtick and Iberian³ fields,
At last betakes him to this ominous wood ;
And in thick shelter of black shades imbowe'd
Excels his mother at her mighty art,
Offering to every weary traveller
His orient liquor in a crystal glass,
To quench the drouth of Phœbus ; which as they taste
(For most do taste through fond intemperate thirst),
Soon as the potion works, their human countenance,
The express resemblance of the gods, is chang'd
Into some brutish form of wolf, or bear ;
Or ounce, or tiger, hog, or bearded goat,
All other parts remaining as they were ;
And they, so perfect is their misery,
Not once perceive their foul disfigurement,
But boast themselves more comely than before ;

¹ 'Tuscan mariners:' changed into beasts; see Ovid, Met. lib. iii.—
² Circe: see the Odyssey.—³ 'Celtick and Iberian:' France and Spain.

And all their friends and native home forget,
 To roll with pleasure in a sensual sty.
 Therefore when any, favour'd of high Jove,
 Chances to pass through this adventurous glade,
 Swift as the sparkle of a glancing star
 I shoot from Heaven to give him safe convoy,
 As now I do : But first I must put off
 These my sky robes spun out of Iris' woof,
 And take the weeds and likeness of a swain¹
 That to the service of this house belongs,
 Who with his soft pipe, and smooth-ditted song,
 Well knows to still the wild winds when they roar,
 And hush the waving woods ; nor of less faith,
 And in this office of his mountain watch
 Likeliest, and nearest to the present aid
 Of this occasion. But I hear the tread
 Of hateful steps ; I must be viewless now.

*Enter COMUS, with a charming rod in one hand, his glass in the other ; with him a rout of monsters, headed like sundry sorts of wild beasts, but otherwise like men and women, their apparel glistening ;
 they come in making a riotous and unruly noise,
 with torches in their hands.*

Comus. The star that bids the shepherd fold,
 Now the top of heaven doth hold ;
 And the gilded car of day
 His glowing axle doth allay
 In the steep Atlantick stream ;
 And the slope sun his upward beam
 Shoots against the dusky pole,
 Pacing toward the other goal
 Of his chamber in the East,

Meanwhile welcome Joy, and Feast,
 Midnight Shout, and Revelry,
 Topsy Dance, and Jollity.
 Braid your locks with rosy twine,
 Dropping odours, dropping wine.
 Rigour now is gone to bed,
 And Advice with scrupulous head.
 Strict Age and sour Severity,
 With their grave saws, in slumber lie,
 We that are of purer fire,
 Imitate the starry quire,
 Who, in their nightly watchful spheres,
 Lead in swift round the months and years.
 The sounds and seas, with all their finny drove,
 Now to the moon in wavering morrice¹ move ;
 And, on the tawny sands and shelves,
 Trip the pert faeries and the dapper elves.
 By dimpled brook and fountain-brim,
 The Wood-Nymphs, deck'd with daisies trim,
 Their merry wakes and pastimes keep ;
 What hath Night to do with Sleep ?²
 Night hath better sweets to prove ;
 Venus now wakes, and wakens Love.
 Come, let us our rights begin ;
 'Tis only day-light that makes sin,
 Which these dun shades will ne'er report.—
 Hail, Goddess of nocturnal sport,
 Dark-veil'd Cotytto !³ to whom the secret flame
 Of midnight torches burns ; mysterious dame,
 That ne'er art call'd, but when the dragon woom
 Of Stygian darkness spits her thickest gloom,

¹ 'Morrice : ' or Moorish dance.—² 'Night to do with sleep : ' Byron imitates this in his 'Most Glorious Night! Thou wert not sent for slumber.'—

³ 'Cotytto : ' goddess of wantonness.

And makes one blot of all the air ;
 Stay thy cloudy ebon chair,
 Wherein thou ridest with Hecat',¹ and befriend
 Us thy vow'd priests, till utmost end
 Of all thy dues be done, and none left out ;
 Ere the blabbing eastern scout,
 The nice Morn, on the Indian steep
 From her cabin'd loop-hole peep,
 And to the tell-tale sun descry
 Our conceal'd solemnity.—
 Come, knit hands, and beat the ground
 In a light fantastick round.

THE MEASURE.

Break off, break off, I feel the different pace
 Of some chaste footing near about this ground.
 Run to your shrouds, within these brakes and trees ;
 Our number may affright : Some virgin sure
 (For so I can distinguish by mine art)
 Benighted in these woods. Now to my charms,
 And to my wily trains ; I shall ere long
 Be well stock'd with as fair a herd as graz'd
 About my mother Circe. Thus I hurl
 My dazzling spells into the spungy air,
 Of power to cheat the eye with blear illusion,
 And give it false presentments, lest the place
 And my quaint habits breed astonishment,
 And put the damsel to suspicious flight ;
 Which must not be, for that's against my course :
 I, under fair pretence of friendly ends,
 And well-plac'd words of glozing courtesy
 Baited with reasons not unplaussible,
 Wind me into the easy-hearted man,

And hug him into snares. When once her eye
Hath met the virtue of this magick dust,
I shall appear some harmless villager,
Whom thrift keeps up about his country gear.
But here she comes ; I fairly step aside,
And hearken, if I may, her business here.

Enter THE LADY.

Lady. This way the noise was, if mine ear be true,
My best guide now : Methought it was the sound
Of riot and ill-manag'd merriment,
Such as the jocund flute, or gamesome pipe,
Stirs up among the loose unletter'd hinds ;
When for their teeming flocks, and granges full,
In wanton dance they praise the bounteous Pan,
And thank the gods amiss. I should be loth
To meet the rudeness, and swill'd insolence,
Of such late wassailers ; yet O ! where else
Shall I inform my unacquainted feet
In the blind mazes of this tangled wood ?
My Brothers, when they saw me wearied out
With this long way, resolving here to lodge
Under the spreading favour of these pines,
Stept, as they said, to the next thicket-side,
To bring me berries, or such cooling fruit
As the kind hospitable woods provide.
They left me then when the gray-hooded Even,
Like a sad votarist in palmer's weed,
Rose from the hindmost wheels of Phœbus' wain,
But where they are, and why they came not back,
Is now the labour of my thoughts ; 'tis likeliest
They had engag'd their wandering steps too far ;
And envious darkness, ere they could return,
Had stole them from me : else, O thievish Night,

Why shouldst thou, but for some felonious end,
In thy dark lantern thus close up the stars,
That Nature hung in Heaven, and fill'd their lamps
With everlasting oil, to give due light
To the misled and lonely traveller ?
This is the place, as well as I may guess,
Whence even now the tumult of loud mirth
Was rife, and perfect in my listening ear ;
Yet nought but single darkness do I find.
What might this be ? A thousand fantasies
Begin to throng into my memory,
Of calling shapes, and beckoning shadows dire,
And aery tongues that syllable men's names
On sands, and shores, and desert wildernesses.
These thoughts may startle well, but not astound,
The virtuous mind, that ever walks attended
By a strong siding champion, Conscience.—
O welcome, pure-ey'd Faith ; white-handed Hope,
Thou hovering Angel, girt with golden wings ;
And thou, unblemish'd form of Chastity !
I see ye visibly, and now believe
That He, the Súpreme Good, to whom all things ill
Are but as slavish officers of vengeance,
Would send a glistering guardian, if need were,
To keep my life and honour unassail'd.
Was I deceiv'd, or did a sable cloud
Turn forth her silver lining on the night ?
I did not err, there does a sable cloud
Turn forth her silver lining on the night,
And casts a gleam over this tufted grove :
I cannot halloo to my Brothers, but
Such noise as I can make to be heard farthest
I'll venture ; for my new-enliven'd spirits
Prompt me ; and they perhaps are not far off.

SONG.

Sweet Echo, sweetest Nymph, that livest unseen
 Within thy aery shell,¹
 By slow Meander's margent green,
 And in the violet-embroider'd vale,
 Where the love-lorn nightingale
 Nightly to thee her sad song mourneth well ;
 Canst thou not tell me of a gentle pair
 That liketh thy Narcissus are ?
 O, if thou have
 Hid them in some flowery cave,
 Tell me but where,
 Sweet queen of parley, daughter of the sphere !
 So may'st thou be translated to the skies,
 And give² resounding grace to all Heaven's harmonies.

Enter COMUS.

Comus. Can any mortal mixture of earth's mould
 Breathe such divine enchanting ravishment ?
 Sure something holy lodges in that breast,
 And with these raptures moves the vocal air
 To testify his hidden residence.
 How sweetly did they float upon the wings
 Of silence, through the empty-vaulted night,
 At every fall smoothing the raven-down
 Of darkness, till it smil'd ! I have oft heard
 My mother Circe with the Syrens three,
 Amidst the flowery-kirtled Naiades,
 Culling their potent herbs and baleful drugs ;
 Who, as they sung, would take the prison'd soul,
 And lap it in Elysium : Scylla³ wept,

¹ 'Shell:' the horizon.—² 'Give,' &c. : what an exquisite fancy this of echo in heaven redoubling the divine music!—³ 'Scylla' and 'Charybdis:' the two famous opposing whirlpools.

And chid her barking waves into attention,
 And fell Charybdis murmur'd soft applause :
 Yet they in pleasing slumber lull'd the sense,
 And in sweet madness robb'd it of itself ;
 But such a sacred and home-felt delight,
 Such sober certainty of waking bliss,
 I never heard till now.—I'll speak to her,
 And she shall be my queen.—Hail, foreign wonder !
 Whom certain these rough shades did never breed,
 Unless the goddess that in rural shrine
 Dwell'st here with Pan, or Sylvan ; by blest song
 Forbidding every bleak unkindly fog
 To touch the prosperous growth of this tall wood.

Lady. Nay, gentle shepherd, ill is lost that praise,
 That is address'd to unattending ears ;
 Not any boast of skill, but extreme shift
 How to regain my sever'd company,
 Compell'd me to awake the courteous Echo
 To give me answer from her mossy couch.

Comus. What chance, good lady, hath bereft you thus ?

Lady. Dim darkness, and this leafy labyrinth.

Comus. Could that divide you from near-ushering guides ?

Lady. They left me weary on a grassy turf.

Comus. By falsehood, or discourtesy, or why ?

Lady. To seek i' the valley some cool friendly spring.

Comus. And left your fair side all unguarded, Lady ?

Lady. They were but twain, and purposed quick return.

Comus. Perhaps forestalling night prevented them.

Lady. How easy my misfortune is to hit !

Comus. Imports their loss, besides the present need ?

Lady. No less than if I should my Brothers lose.

Comus. Were they of manly prime, or youthful bloom ?

Lady. As smooth as Hebe's their unrazor'd lips.

Comus. Two such I saw, what time the labour'd ox

In his loose traces from the furrow came,
 And the swink'd¹ hedger at his supper sat ;
 I saw them under a green mantling vine,
 That crawls along the side of yon small hill,
 Plucking ripe clusters from the tender shoots ;
 Their port was more than human, as they stood :
 I took it for a faery vision
 Of some gay creatures of the element,
 That in the colours of the rainbow live,
 And play i' the plighted² clouds. I was aw-struck,
 And, as I past, I worshipt ; if those you seek,
 It were a journey like the path to Heaven,
 To help you find them.

Lady. Gentle Villager,

What readiest way would bring me to that place ?

Comus. Due west it rises from this shrubby point.

Lady. To find out that, good Shepherd, I suppose,
 In such a scant allowance of star-light,
 Would overtask the best land-pilot's art,
 Without the sure guess of well-practis'd feet.

Comus. I know each lane, and every alley green,
 Dingle,³ or bushy dell of this wild wood,
 And every bosky bourn⁴ from side to side,
 My daily walks and ancient neighbourhood ;
 And if your stray attendants be yet lodg'd,
 Or shroud within these limits, I shall know
 Ere morrow wake, or the low-roosted lark
 From her thatch'd pallet rouse ; if otherwise,
 I can conduct you, Lady, to a low
 But loyal cottage, where you may be safe
 Till further quest.

 a valley between two steep hills. — ⁴ 'Bosky bourn' : 'a bushy valley with a rivulet.

Lady. Shepherd, I take thy word,
 And trust thy honest offer'd courtesy,
 Which oft is sooner found in lowly sheds
 With smoky rafters, than in tap'stry halls
 In courts of princes, where it first was nam'd,
 And yet is most pretended : In a place
 Less warranted than this, or less secure,
 I cannot be, that I should fear to change it.—
 Eye me, blest Providence, and square my trials
 To my proportion'd strength !—Shepherd, lead on. [Exeunt.]

Enter THE TWO BROTHERS.

First B. Unmuffle, ye faint stars ; and thou, fair moon,
 That won'tst to love the traveller's benison,
 Stoop thy pale visage through an amber cloud,
 And disinherit Chaos, that reigns here
 In double night of darkness and of shades ;
 Or, if your influence be quite damm'd up
 With black usurping mists, some gentle taper,
 Though a rush-candle from the wicker hole
 Of some clay habitation, visit us
 With thy long-levell'd rule of streaming light ;
 And thou shalt be our star of Arcady,¹
 Or Tyrian Cynosure.

Sec. B. Or, if our eyes
 Be barr'd that happiness, might we but hear
 The folded flocks penn'd in their wattled cotes,
 Or sound of pastoral reed with oaten stops,
 Or whistle from the lodge, or village cock
 Count the night watches to his feathery dames,
 'Twould be some solace yet, some little cheering,

¹ 'Arcady,' &c. : it was fabled that Calisto, daughter of the King of Arcadia, was turned into the Greater Bear, by which the Greeks steer their course ; and her son Arcas into the Lesser, called Cynosura, by which the Tyrians steer theirs.

In this close dungeon of innumerable boughs.
 But, O that hapless virgin, our lost Sister !
 Where may she wander now, whither betake her
 From the chill dew, among rude burs and thistles ?
 Perhaps some cold bank is her bolster now,
 Or 'gainst the rugged bark of some broad elm
 Leans her unpillow'd head, fraught with sad fears.
 What, if in wild amazement and affright ?
 Or, while we speak, within the direful grasp
 Of savage hunger, or of savage heat ?

First B. Peace, Brother ; be not over-exquisite
 To cast the fashion¹ of uncertain evils :
 For grant they be so, while they rest unknown,
 What need a man forestall his date of grief,
 And run to meet what he would most avoid ?
 Or if they be but false alarms of fear,
 How bitter is such self-delusion !
 I do not think my Sister so to seek,
 Or so unprincipled in Virtue's book,
 And the sweet peace that goodness bosoms ever,
 As that the single want of light and noise
 (Not being in danger, as I trust she is not),
 Could stir the constant mood of her calm thoughts,
 And put them into misbecoming plight.
 Virtue could see to do what Virtue would
 By her own radiant light, though sun and moon
 Were in the flat sea sunk. And Wisdom's self
 Oft seeks to sweet retired solitude ;
 Where, with her best nurse, Contemplation,
 She plumes her feathers, and lets grow her wings,
 That in the various bustle of resort
 Were all-to ruffled, and sometimes impair'd.
 He that has light within his own clear breast,

May sit i' the center, and enjoy bright day :
But he that hides a dark soul and foul thoughts,
Benighted walks under the mid-day sun ;
Himself is his own dungeon.

Sec. B. 'Tis most true,
That musing Meditation most affects
The pensive secrecy of desert cell,
Far from the cheerful haunt of men and herds,
And sits as safe as in a senate house ;
For who would rob a hermit of his weeds,
His few books, or his beads, or maple dish,
Or do his gray hairs any violence ?
But Beauty, like the fair Hesperian tree
Laden with blooming gold, had need the guard
Of dragon-watch with unenchanted eye,
To save her blossoms and defend her fruit,
From the rash hand of bold Incontinence.
You may as well spread out the unsunn'd heaps
Of miser's treasure by an outlaw's den,
And tell me it is safe, as bid me hope
Danger will wink on opportunity,
And let a single helpless maiden pass
Uninjured in this wild surrounding waste.
Of night, or loneliness, it recks me not ;
I fear the dread events that dog them both,
Lest some ill-greeting touch attempt the person
Of our unowned Sister.

First B. I do not, Brother,
Infer, as if I thought my Sister's state
Secure, without all doubt or controversy ;
Yet, where an equal poise of hope and fear
Does arbitrate the event, my nature is
That I incline to hope, rather than fear,
And gladly banish squint suspicion.

What was that snaky-headed Gorgon shield,
That wise Minerva wore, unconquer'd virgin,
Wherewith she freez'd her foes to congeal'd stone,
But rigid looks of chaste austerity,
And noble grace, that dash'd brute violence
With sudden adoration and blank awe ?
So dear to Heaven is saintly Chastity,
That, when a soul is found sincerely so,
A thousand liveried angels lackey her,
Driving far off each thing of sin and guilt;
And, in clear dream and solemn vision
Tell her of things that no gross ear can hear ;
Till oft converse with heavenly habitants
Begin to cast a beam on the outward shape,
The unpolluted temple of the mind,
And turns it by degrees to the soul's essence,
Till all be made immortal : But when Lust,
By unchaste looks, loose gestures, and foul talk,
But most by lewd and lavish act of sin,
Lets in defilement to the inward parts,
The soul grows clotted by contagion,
Imbodies, and imbrutes, till she quite lose
The divine property of her first being.
Such are those thick and gloomy shadows damp,
Oft seen in charnel vaults and sepulchres
Lingering, and sitting by a new made grave,
As loth to leave the body that it lov'd,
And link'd itself by carnal sensuality
To a degenerate and degraded state.

Sec. B. How charming is divine Philosophy!
Not harsh, and crabbed, as dull fools suppose ;
But musical as is Apollo's lute,
And a perpetual feast of nectar'd sweets,
Where no crude surfeit reigns.

First B. List, list ; I hear
Some far-off halloo break the silent air.

Sec. B. Methought so too ; what should it be ?

First B. For certain
Either some one like us night-founder'd here,
Or else some neighbour woodman, or at worst,
Some roving robber calling to his fellows.

Sec. B. Heaven keep my sister. Again, again, and near !
Best draw, and stand upon our guard.

First B. I'll halloo :
If he be friendly, he comes well ; if not,
Defence is a good cause, and Heaven be for us.

Enter the ATTENDANT SPIRIT, habited like a Shepherd.

That halloo I should know ; what are you ? speak ;
Come not too near, you fall on iron stakes else.

Spi. What voice is that ? my young lord ? speak again.

Sec. B. O Brother, 'tis my father's shepherd, sure.

First B. Thyrsis ? Whose artful strains have oft delay'd
The huddling brook to hear his madrigal,
And sweeten'd every muskrose of the dale ?
How camest thou here, good swain ? hath any ram
Slipt from the fold, or young kid lost his dam,
Or straggl'ing wether the pent flock forsook ?
How couldst thou find this dark sequester'd nook ?

Spi. O my lov'd master's heir, and his next joy,
I came not here on such a trivial toy
As a stray'd ewe, or to pursue the stealth
Of pilfering wolf ; not all the fleecy wealth,
That doth enrich these downs, is worth a thought
To this my errand, and the care it brought.
But, O my virgin Lady, where is she ?
How chance she is not in your company ?

First B. To tell thee sadly,¹ Shepherd, without blame,
Or our neglect, we lost her as we came.

Spi. Ay me unhappy ! then my fears are true.

First B. What fears, good Thyrsis ? Pr'ythee briefly shew.

Spi. I'll tell ye ; 'tis not vain or fabulous
(Though so esteem'd by shallow ignorance),
What the sage poets, taught by the heavenly Muse,
Storied of old, in high immortal verse,
Of dire chimeras, and enchanted isles,
And rifted rocks whose entrance leads to Hell ;
For such there be ; but unbelief is blind.

Within the navel of this hideous wood,
Immur'd in cypress shades a sorcerer dwells,
Of Bacchus and of Circe born, great Comus,
Deep skill'd in all his mother's witcheries ;
And here to every thirsty wanderer
By sly enticement gives his baneful cup,
With many murmurs² mix'd, whose pleasing poison
The visage quite transforms of him that drinks,
And the inglorious likeness of a beast
Fixes instead, unmoulding reason's mintage
Character'd in the face : This have I learnt
Tending my flocks hard by i' the hilly crofts,
That brow this bottom-glade ; whence night by night
He and his monstrous rout are heard to howl,
Like stabled wolves, or tigers at their prey,
Doing abhorred rites to Hecate
In their obscured haunts of inward bowers.
Yet have they many baits, and guileful spells,
To inveigle and invite the unwary sense
Of them that pass unweeting by the way.
This evening late, by then the chewing flocks
Had ta'en their supper on the savoury herb

Of knot-grass dew-besprent,¹ and were in fold,
I sat me down to watch upon a bank
With ivy canopied, and interwove
With flaunting honey-suckle, and began,
Wrapt in a pleasing fit of melancholy,
To meditate my rural minstrelsy,
Till fancy had her fill ; but, ere a close,
The wonted roar was up amidst the woods,
And fill'd the air with barbarous dissonance ;
At which I ceased, and listen'd them awhile,
Till an unusual stop of sudden silence
Gave respite to the drowsy frightened steeds,
That draw the litter of close-curtain'd Sleep ;
At last a soft and solemn-breathing sound
Rose like a steam of rich distill'd perfumes,
And stole upon the air, that even Silence
Was took ere she was ware, and wish'd she might
Deny her nature, and be never more,
Still to be so displac'd. I was all ear,
And took in strains that might create a soul
Under the ribs of Death : but O ! ere long,
Too well I did perceive it was the voice
Of my most honour'd Lady, your dear Sister,
Amaz'd I stood, harrow'd with grief and fear,
And, O poor hapless nightingale, thought I,
How sweet thou sing'st, how near the deadly snare !
Then down the lawns I ran with headlong haste,
Through paths and turnings often trod by day ;
Till, guided by mine ear I found the place
Where that damn'd wisard, hid in sly disguise
(For so by certain signs I knew), had met,
Already, ere my best speed could prevent,
The aidless innocent Lady his wish'd prey ;

Who gently ask'd if he had seen such two,
 Supposing him some neighbour villager.
 Longer I durst not stay, but soon I guess'd
 Ye were the two she meant ; with that I sprung
 Into swift flight, till I had found you here ;
 But further know I not.

Sec. B. O night, and shades !
 How are ye join'd with Hell in triple knot
 Against the unarm'd weakness of one virgin,
 Alone, and helpless ! Is this the confidence
 You gave me, Brother ?

First B. Yes, and keep it still ;
 Lean on it safely ; not a period
 Shall be unsaid for me : Against the threats
 Of malice, or of sorcery, or that power
 Which erring men call Chance, this I hold firm ;—
 Virtue may be assail'd, but never hurt,
 Surpris'd by unjust force, but not enthral'd ;
 Yea, even that, which mischief meant most harm,
 Shall in the happy trial prove most glory :
 But evil on itself shall back recoil,
 And mix no more with goodness ; when at last
 Gather'd like scum,¹ and settled to itself,
 It shall be in eternal restless change
 Self-fed and self-consumed : If this fail,
 The pillar'd firmament is rottenness,
 And earth's base built on stubble.—But come, let's on.
 Against the opposing will and arm of Heaven
 May never this just sword be lifted up !
 But for that damn'd magician, let him be girt
 With all the grisly legions that troop
 Under the sooty flag of Acheron,

¹ 'Scum : ' like the spots on the sun, at once born and burned by the fire of the luminary.

Harpies and Hydras, or all the monstrous forms
 Twixt Africa and Ind, I'll find him out,
 And force him to return his purchase back
 Or drag him by the curls to a foul death,
 Curs'd as his life.

Spi. Alas ! good venturous Youth,
 I love thy courage yet, and bold emprise ;
 But here thy sword can do thee little stead ;
 Far other arms and other weapons must
 Be those, that quell the might of hellish charms :
 He with his bare wand can unthread thy joints,
 And crumble all thy sinews.

First B. Why pr'ythee, Shepherd,
 How durst thou then thyself approach so near,
 As to make this relation ?

Spi. Care, and utmost shifts,
 How to secure the lady from surprisal,
 Brought to my mind a certain shepherd lad,
 Of small regard to see to, yet well skill'd
 In every virtuous plant, and healing herb,
 That spreads her verdant leaf to the morning ray :
 He lov'd me well, and oft would beg me sing ;
 Which when I did, he on the tender grass
 Would sit and hearken even to ecstasy,
 And in requital ope his leathern scrip,
 And show me simples of a thousand names,
 Telling their strange and vigorous faculties :
 Amongst the rest a small unsightly root,
 But of divine effect, he cull'd me out ;
 The leaf was darkish, and had prickles on it,
 But in another country, as he said,
 Bore a bright golden flower, but not in this soil :
 Unknown, and like¹ esteem'd, and the dull swain

Treads on it daily with his clouted shoon :
 And yet more med'cinal is it than that Moly,
 That Hermes once to wise Ulysses gave ;
 He call'd it Hæmony, and gave it me,
 And bade me keep it as of sovran use
 'Gainst all enchantments, mildew, blast, or damp,
 Or ghastly furies' apparition.
 I purs'd it up, but little reckoning made,
 Till now that this extremity compell'd :
 But now I find it true ; for by this means
 I knew the foul enchanter though disguis'd,
 Enter'd the very lime-twigs of his spells,
 And yet came off : If you have this about you
 (As I will give you when we go), you may
 Boldly assault the necromancer's hall ;
 Where if he be, with dauntless hardihood,
 And brandish'd blade, rush on him ; break his glass,
 And shed the luscious liquour on the ground,
 But seize his wand ; though he and his curs'd crew
 Fierce sign of battle make, and menace high,
 Or like the sons of Vulcan vomit smoke,
 Yet will they soon retire, if he but shrink.

First B. Thyrsis, lead on apace, I'll follow thee ;
 And some good Angel bear a shield before us !

The Scene changes to a stately palace, set out with all manner of deliciousness : soft music, tables spread with all dainties. COMUS appears with his rabble, and the LADY set in an enchanted chair, to whom he offers his glass, which she puts by, and goes about to rise.

Comus. Nay, Lady, sit ; if I but wave this wand,
 Your nerves are all chain'd up in alabaster,

And you a statue, or, as Daphne was,
Root-bound that fled Apollo.

Lady. Fool, do not boast ;
Thou canst not touch the freedom of my mind
With all thy charms, although this corporal rind
Thou hast immanacled, while Heaven sees good.

Comus. Why are you vex'd, Lady? Why do you frown
Here dwell no frowns, nor anger ; from these gates
Sorrow flies far : See here be all the pleasures,
That fancy can beget on youthful thoughts,
When the fresh blood grows lively, and returns
Brisk as the April buds in primrose-season.
And first, behold this cordial julep here,
That flames and dances in his crystal bounds,
With spirits of balm and fragrant syrups mix'd :
Not that Nepenthes, which the wife of Thone
In Egypt¹ gave to Jove-born Helena,
Is of such power to stir up joy as this,
To life so friendly, or so cool to thirst.
Why should you be so cruel to yourself,
And to those dainty limbs, which Nature lent
For gentle usage and soft delicacy ?
But you invert the covenants of her trust,
And harshly deal, like an ill borrower,
With that which you receiv'd on other terms ;
Scorning the unexempt condition,
By which all mortal frailty must subsist,
Refreshment after toil, ease after pain,
That have been tir'd all day without repast,
And timely rest have wanted ; but, fair Virgin,
This will restore all soon.

Lady. 'Twill not, false traitor !
'Twill not restore the truth and honesty,

That thou hast banish'd from thy tongue with lies.
 Was this the cottage, and the safe abode,
 Thou toldst me of? What grim aspects are these,
 These ugly-headed monsters? Mercy guard me!
 Hence with thy brew'd enchantments, foul deceiver!
 Hast thou betray'd my credulous innocence
 With visor'd falsehood and base forgery?
 And wouldst thou seek again to trap me here
 With lickerish baits, fit to ensnare a brute?
 Were it a draught for Juno when she banquets,
 I would not taste thy treasonous offer; none,
 But such as are good men, can give good things;
 And that, which is not good, is not delicious
 To a well-govern'd and wise appetite.

Comus. O foolishness of men! that lend their ears
 To those budge doctors of the Stoick fur,¹
 And fetch their precepts from the Cynick tub,
 Praising the lean and sallow Abstinence.
 Wherefore did Nature pour her bounties forth
 With such a full and unwithdrawing hand,
 Covering the earth with odours, fruits, and flocks,
 Thronging the seas with spawn innumerable,
 But all to please and sate the curious taste?
 And set to work millions of spinning worms,
 That in their green shops weave the smooth-hair'd silk,
 To deck their sons; and, that no corner might
 Be vacant of her plenty, in her own loins
 She hutch'd² the all-worshipt ore, and precious gems,
 To store her children with: If all the world
 Should in a pet of temperance feed on pulse,
 Drink the clear stream, and nothing wear but frieze,
 The All-giver would be unthank'd, would be unprais'd,

Not half his riches known, and yet despis'd ;
And we should serve him as a grudging master,
As a penurious niggard of his wealth ;
And live like Nature's bastards, not her sons,
Who would be quite surcharged with her own weight,
And strangled with her waste fertility ;
The earth cumber'd, and the wing'd air dark'd with plumes,
The herds would over-multitude their lords,
The sea o'erfraught would swell, and the unsought diamonds
Would so imblaze the forehead of the deep,
And so bestud with stars, that they below
Would grow inur'd to light, and come at last
To gaze upon the sun with shameless brows.
List, Lady ; be not coy, and be not cozen'd
With that same vaunted name, Virginity.
Beauty is Nature's coin, must not be hoarded,
But must be current ; and the good thereof
Consists in mutual and partaken bliss,
Unsavoury in the enjoyment of itself ;
If you let slip time, like a neglected rose
It withers on the stalk with languish'd head.
Beauty is Nature's brag, and must be shown
In courts, at feasts, and high solemnities,
Where most may wonder at the workmanship ;
It is for homely features to keep home,
They had their name thence ; coarse complexions,
And cheeks of sorry grain, will serve to ply
The sampler, and to tease the huswife's wool
What need a vermeil-tinctured lip for that,
Love-darting eyes, or tresses like the Morn ?
There was another meaning in these gifts ;
Think what, and be advis'd ; you are but young yet.
Lady. I had not thought to have unlock'd my lips
In this unhallow'd air, but that this juggler

Would think to charm my judgement, as mine eyes
 Obtruding false rules prank'd in reason's garb.
 I hate when Vice can bolt¹ her arguments,
 And Virtue has no tongue to check her pride.—
 Impostor! do not charge most innocent Nature,
 As if she would her children should be riotous
 With her abundance; she, good cateress,
 Means her provision only to the good,
 That live according to her sober laws,
 And holy dictate of spare Temperance:
 If every just man, that now pines with want,
 Had but a moderate and beseeeming share
 Of that which lewdly-pamper'd Luxury
 Now heaps upon some few with vast excess,
 Nature's full blessings would be well dispens'd
 In unsuperfluous even proportion,
 And she no whit incumber'd with her store;
 And then the Giver would be better thank'd,
 His praise due paid: For swinish Gluttony
 Ne'er looks to Heaven amidst his gorgeous feast,
 But with besotted base ingratitude
 Crams, and blasphemes his Feeder. Shall I go on?
 Or have I said enough? To him that dares
 Arm his profane tongue with contemptuous words
 Against the sun-clad Power of Chastity,
 Fain would I something say, yet to what end?
 Thou hast nor ear, nor soul, to apprehend
 The sublime notion, and high mystery,
 That must be utter'd to unfold the sage
 And serious doctrine of Virginity;
 And thou art worthy that thou shouldst not know
 More happiness than this thy present lot.
 Enjoy your dear wit, and gay rhetoric,

¹ 'Bolt:' to sift and separate.

That hath so well been taught her dazzling fence ;
 Thou art not fit to hear thyself convinc'd :
 Yet, should I try, the uncontrouled worth
 Of this pure cause would kindle my rapt spirits
 To such a flame of sacred vehemence,
 That dumb things would be mov'd to sympathize,
 And the brute Earth would lend her nerves, and shake,
 Till all thy magick structures, rear'd so high,
 Were shatter'd into heaps o'er thy false head.

Comus. She fables not ; I feel that I do fear
 Her words set off by some superiour power ;
 And though not mortal, yet a cold shuddering dew
 Dips me all o'er, as when the wrath of Jove
 Speaks thunder, and the chains of Erebus,
 To some of Saturn's crew. I must dissemble,
 And try her yet more strongly.—Come, no more ;
 This is mere moral babble, and direct
 Against the canon-laws of our foundation :
 I must not suffer this ; yet 'tis but the lees
 And settlings of a melancholy blood :
 But this will cure all straight ; one sip of this
 Will bathe the drooping spirits in delight,
 Beyond the bliss of dreams. Be wise, and taste.—

The BROTHERS rush in with swords drawn, wrest his glass out of his hand, and break it against the ground ; his rout make sign of resistance, but are all driven in. The ATTENDANT SPIRIT comes in.

Spi. What, have you let the false enchanter 'scape ?
 O ye mistook, ye should have snatch'd his wand,
 And bound him fast ; without his rod revers'd,
 And backward mutters of dissevering power,
 We cannot free the Lady that sits here
 In stony fetters fix'd, and motionless :

Yet stay, be not disturb'd ; now I bethink me,
 Some other means I have which may be us'd,
 Which once of Melibœus old I learnt,
 The soothest¹ shepherd that e'er pip'd on plains.

There is a gentle Nymph not far from hence,
 That with moist curb sways the smooth Severn stream,
 Sabrina is her name, a virgin pure ;
 Whilom she was the daughter of Locrine,
 That had the scepter from his father Brute.²
 She, guiltless damsel, flying the mad pursuit
 Of her enraged stepdame Guendolen,
 Commended her fair innocence to the flood,
 That staid her flight with his cross-flowing course.
 The Water-Nymphs, that in the bottom play'd,
 Held up their pearly wrists, and took her in,
 Bearing her straight to aged Nereus' hall ;
 Who, piteous of her woes, rear'd her lank head,
 And gave her to his daughters to imbathe
 In nectar'd lavers, strew'd with asphodel ;
 And through the porch and inlet of each sense
 Dropp'd in ambrosial oils, till she reviv'd,
 And underwent a quick immortal change,
 Made goddess of the river : still she retains
 Her maiden gentleness, and oft at eve
 Visits the herds along the twilight meadows,
 Helping all urchin³ blasts, and ill-luck signs
 That the shrewd meddling elfe delights to make,
 Which she with precious vial'd liquours heals ;
 For which the shepherds at their festivals
 Carol her goodness loud in rustick lays,
 And throw sweet garland wreaths into her stream
 Of pansies, pinks, and gaudy daffadils.

 a beast of evil omen.

And, as the old swain said, she can unlock
 The clasping charm, and thaw the numming spell,
 If she be right invok'd in warbled song ;
 For maidenhood she loves, and will be swift
 To aid a virgin, such as was herself,
 In hard-besetting need ; this will I try,
 And add the power of some adjuring verse.

SONG.

Sabrina fair,
 Listen where thou art sitting
 Under the glassy, cool, translucent wave,
 In twisted braids of lillies knitting
 The loose train of thy amber-dropping hair ;
 Listen for dear honour's sake,
 Goddess of the silver lake,
 Listen, and save.
 Listen, and appear to us,
 In name of great Oceanus ;
 By the earth-shaking Neptune's mace,
 And Tethys'¹ grave majestic pace,
 By hoary Nereus' wrinkled look,
 And the Carpathian wizard's² hook,
 By scaly Triton's winding shell,
 And old sooth-saying Glaucus' spell,
 By Leucothea's lovely hands,
 And her Son that rules the strands,
 By Thetis'³ tinsel-slipper'd feet,
 And the songs of Syrens sweet,
 By dead Parthenope's⁴ dear tomb,
 And fair Ligea's⁵ golden comb,

³ 'Glaucus,' 'Leucothea,' 'her Son' Palaemon, 'Thetis:' all sea-deities. —
⁴ 'Parthenope:' a Syren buried in Naples; see Wordsworth's sonnet on the Departure of Scott for Italy. — ⁵ 'Ligea:' another of the Syrens.

Wherewith she sits on diamond rocks,
 Sleeking her soft alluring locks ;
 By all the Nymphs that nightly dance
 Upon thy streams with wily glance,
 Rise, rise, and heave thy rosy head,
 From thy coral-paven bed,
 And bridle in thy headlong wave,
 Till thou our summons answer'd have.

Listen, and save !

SABRINA rises, attended by Water-Nymphs, and sings.

By the rushy-fringed bank,
 Where grows the willow, and the osier dank,
 My sliding chariot stays,
 Thick set with agate, and the azure sheen
 Of turkis blue, and emerald green,
 That in the channel strays ;
 Whilst from off the waters fleet
 Thus I set my printless feet
 O'er the cowslip's velvet head,
 That bends not as I tread ;
 Gentle Swain, at thy request,
 I am here.

Spi. Goddess dear,
 We implore thy powerful hand
 To undo the charmed band
 Of true virgin here distress'd,
 Through the force, and through the wile,
 Of unblest enchanter vile.

Sab. Shepherd, 'tis my office best
 To help ensnared chastity :
 Brightest Lady, look on me ;
 Thus I sprinkle on thy breast
 Drops, that from my fountain pure

I have kept, of precious cure ;
 Thrice upon thy finger's tip,
 Thrice upon thy rubied lip :
 Next this marble venom'd seat,
 Smear'd with gums of glutinous heat,
 I touch with chaste palms moist and cold :—
 Now the spell hath lost his hold ;
 And I must haste, ere morning hour,
 To wait in Amphitrite's bower.

SABRINA descends, and the LADY rises out of her Seat.

Spi. Virgin, daughter of Loocrine,¹
 Sprung of old Anchises' line,
 May thy brimmed waves for this
 Their full tribute never miss
 From a thousand petty rills,
 That tumble down the snowy hills :
 Summer drouth, or singed air,
 Never scorch thy tresses fair,
 Nor wet October's torrent flood
 Thy molten crystal fill with mud ;
 May thy billows roll ashore
 The beryl and the golden ore ;
 May thy lofty head be crown'd
 With many a tower and terrace round,
 And here and there thy banks upon
 With groves of myrrh and cinnamon !
 Come, Lady, while Heaven lends us grace,
 Let us fly this cursed place,
 Lest the sorcerer us entice
 With some other new device.
 Not a waste or needless sound
 Till we come to holier ground ;

¹ 'Loocrine:' descended from Eneas, the son of Anchises.

I shall be your faithful guide
 Through this gloomy covert wide,
 And not many furlongs thence
 Is your Father's residence,
 Where this night are met in state
 Many a friend to gratulate
 His wish'd presence ; and beside
 All the swains, that there abide,
 With jigs and rural dance resort ;
 We shall catch them at their sport,
 And our sudden coming there
 Will double all their mirth and chere :
 Come, let us haste, the stars grow high,
 But night sits monarch yet in the mid sky.

*The Scene changes, presenting Ludlow Town and the President's Castle ; then come in Country Dancers ;
 after them the ATTENDANT SPIRIT, with the Two BROTHERS and the LADY.*

SONG.

Spi. Back, Shepherds, back ; enough your play,
 Till next sun-shine holiday :
 Here be, without duck¹ or nod,
 Other trippings to be trod
 Of lighter toes, and such court guise
 As Mercury did first devise,
 With the mincing Dryades,
 On the lawns, and on the leas.

This second Song presents them to their Father and Mother.

Noble Lord, and Lady bright,
 I have brought ye new delight ;

¹ ' Duck : ' bow.

Here behold so goodly grown
 Three fair branches of your own ;
 Heaven hath timely tried their youth,
 Their faith, their patience, and their truth,
 And sent them here through hard assays
 With a crown of deathless praise,
 To triumph in victorious dance
 O'er sensual Folly and Intemperance.

The Dances being ended, the SPIRIT epiloguizes.

Spi. To the ocean now I fly,
 And those happy climes that lie
 Where day never shuts his eye,
 Up in the broad fields of the sky;
 There I suck the liquid air
 All amidst the gardens fair
 Of Hesperus,¹ and his daughters three
 That sing about the golden tree :
 Along the crisped shades and bowers
 Revels the spruce and jocund Spring ;
 The Graces, and the rosy-bosom'd Hours,
 Thither all their bounties bring ;
 There eternal Summer dwells,
 And West-winds, with musky wing,
 About the cedars' alleys fling
 Nard and Cassia's balmy smells.
 Iris there with humid bow
 Waters the odorous banks, that blow
 Flowers of more mingled hue
 Than her purpled² scarf can shew ;
 And drenches with Elysian dew
 (List, mortals, if your ears be true),
 Beds of hyacinth and roses,

Where young Adonis oft reposes,
Waxing well of his deep wound
In slumber soft, and on the ground
Sadly sits the Assyrian queen :¹
But far above in spangled sheen
Celestial Cupid, her fam'd son, advanc'd
Holds his dear Psyche² sweet entranc'd,
After her wandering labours long,
Till free consent the Gods among
Make her his eternal bride,
And from her fair unspotted side
Two blissful twins are to be born,
Youth and Joy: so Jove hath sworn.

But now my task is smoothly done,
I can fly, or I can run,
Quickly to the green earth's end,
Where the bow'd welkin slow doth bend ;
And from thence can soar as soon
To the corners of the moon.

Mortals, that would follow me,
Love Virtue ; she alone is free :
She can teach ye how to climb
Higher than the sphery chime ;³
Or if Virtue feeble were,
Heaven itself would stoop to her.

ARCADÉS.¹

PART OF

A Mask,

PRESENTED AT HAREFIELD, BEFORE THE COUNTESS-DOWAGER
OF DERBY.

I. SONG.

Look, Nymphs and Shepherds, look,
What sudden blaze of majesty
Is that which we from hence descry,
Too divine to be mistook :

 This, this is she²
To whom our vows and wishes bend ;
Here our solemn search hath end.

Fame, that, her high worth to raise,
Seem'd erst so lavish and profuse,
We may justly now accuse
Of detraction from her praise :

 Less than half we find exprest
 Envy bid conceal the rest.

¹ 'Arcades : ' the fragment of a larger performance, the rest of which was probably in prose. It was performed at Harefield before the Countess of Derby, its heroine, not later than 1636. She was married at the time to Lord Chancellor Egerton, and died in 1635-6. She was related to Edmund Spenser, who celebrated her, when a widow, in his 'Colin Clout's come home again,' as Amaryllis.—² 'This is she : ' namely, the Countess of Derby.

Mark, what radiant state she spreads,
 In circle round her shining throne,
 Shooting her beams like silver threads ;
 This, this is she alone,
 Sitting, like a goddess bright,
 In the center of her light.

Might she the wise Latona¹ be,
 Or the tower'd Cybele,²
 Mother of a hundred gods ?
 Juno dares not give her odds :
 Who had thought this clime had held
 A deity so unparallel'd ?

As they come forward, the GENIUS of the Wood appears, and turning towards them, speaks.

Gen. Stay, gentle Swains ; for, though in this disguise,
 I see bright honour sparkle through your eyes ;
 Of famous Arcady ye are, and sprung
 Of that renowned flood, so often sung,
 Divine Alphéus, who by secret sluice
 Stole under seas, to meet his Arethuse ;
 And ye, the breathing roses of the wood,
 Fair silver-buskin'd Nymphs, as great and good ;
 I know, this quest of yours, and free intent,
 Was all in honour and devotion meant
 To the great mistress of yon princely shrine,
 Whom with low reverence I adore as mine ;
 And, with all helpful service, will comply
 To further this night's glad solemnity ;

And lead ye, where ye may more near behold
 What shallow-searching Fame hath left untold ;
 Which I full oft, amidst these shades alone,
 Have sat to wonder at, and gaze upon :
 For know, by lot from Jove I am the Power
 Of this fair wood, and live in oaken bower,
 To nurse the saplings tall, and curl the grove
 With ringlets quaint, and wanton windings wove.
 And all my plants I save from nightly ill
 Of noisome winds, and blasting vapours chill :
 And from the boughs brush off the evil dew,
 And heal the harms of thwarting thunder blue,
 Or what the cross dire-looking planet smites,
 Or hurtful worm with canker'd venom bites.
 When evening gray doth rise, I fetch my ground
 Over the mount, and all this hallow'd round ;
 And early, ere the odorous breath of morn
 Awakes the slumbering leaves, or tassell'd horn
 Shakes the high thicket, haste I all about,
 Number my ranks, and visit every sprout
 With puissant words, and murmurs made to bless.
 But else in deep of night, when drowsiness
 Hath lock'd up mortal sense, then listen I
 To the celestial Syrens'¹ harmony,
 That sit upon nine infolded spheres,
 And sing to those that hold the vital shears,
 And turn the adamantine spindle round,
 On which the fate of gods and men is wound.

¹ 'Syrens:' this is an apt allusion to Plato's notion of Fate or Necessity holding a spindle of adamant, while, with her three daughters, Lachesis, Clotho, and Atropos, she conducts a ravishing musical harmony. Nine Syrens or Muses sit on the summit of the spheres, and produce a music, in harmony with which the spindle revolves, and the three daughters of Fate for ever sing—a notion involving many and mysterious lessons.

Such sweet compulsion doth in musick lie
 To lull the daughters of Necessity,
 And keep unsteady Nature to her law,
 And the low world in measured motion draw
 After the heavenly tune, which none can hear
 Of human mould, with gross unpurged ear;
 And yet such musick worthiest were to blaze
 The peerless highth of her immortal praise,
 Whose lustre leads us, and for her most fit,
 If my inferiour hand or voice could hit
 Inimitable sounds : yet, as we go,
 Whate'er the skill of lesser god can show,
 I will assay, her worth to celebrate,
 And so attend ye toward her glittering state ;
 Where ye may all, that are of noble stem,
 Approach, and kiss her sacred vesture's hem.

II. SONG.

O'er the smooth enamell'd green
 Where no print of step hath been,
 Follow me, as I sing
 And touch the warbled string,
 Under the shady roof
 Of branching elm star-proof.
 Follow me ;
 I will bring you where she sits,
 Clad in splendour as befits
 Her deity.
 Such a rural Queen
 All Arcadia hath not seen.

III. SONG.

Nymph and Shepherds, dance no more
By sandy Ladon's¹ lillied banks ;
On old Lycæus, or Cyllene hoar,
Trip no more in twilight ranks ;
Through Erymanth your loss deplore,
A better soil shall give ye thanks.
From the stony Mænalus
Bring your flocks, and live with us ;
Here ye shall have greater grace,
To serve the Lady of this place.
Though Syrinx² your Pan's mistress were,
Yet Syrinx well might wait on her,
Such a rural Queen
All Arcadia hath not seen.

MINOR POEMS.

LYCIDAS.

A MONODY.

In this MONODY, the Author bewails a learned Friend,¹ unfortunately drowned in his passage from Chester on the Irish Seas, 1637. And by occasion foretells the ruin of our corrupted clergy, then in their highth.

YET once more,² O ye laurels, and once more
Ye myrtles brown, with ivy never-sere,
I come to pluck your berries harsh and crude ;
And, with forced fingers rude,
Shatter your leaves before the mellowing year :
Bitter constraint, and sad occasion dear,
Compels me to disturb your season due :
For Lycidas is dead, dead ere his prime,
Young Lycidas, and hath not left his peer :
Who would not sing for Lycidas ? He knew
Himself to sing, and build the lofty rhyme.

¹ Edward King, Esq., the son of Sir John King, knight, secretary for Ireland. He was sailing from Chester to Ireland, on a visit to his friends in that country, when in calm weather, not far from the English coast, the ship struck upon a rock, and suddenly sunk to the bottom with all that were on board, August 10, 1637. Mr King was a fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge, and was only twenty-five years of age at his death. He had been distinguished at college by his piety and learning ; and the year after his death there appeared a collection of elegiac verses on his loss—three in Greek, nineteen in Latin, and thirteen in English—Milton's being the last in the collection. King had been intended for the Church.—² 'Once more : ' meaning, I am again called back to poetry, by a distressing necessity, from other studies.

He must not float upon his watery bier
Unwept, and welter to the parching wind,
Without the meed of some melodious tear.

Begin then, Sisters¹ of the sacred well,²
That from beneath the seat of Jove doth spring ;
Begin, and somewhat loudly sweep the string.
Hence with denial vain, and coy excuse :
So may some gentle Muse
With lucky words favour my destin'd urn ;
And, as he passes, turn,
And bid fair peace be to my sable shroud.

For we were nurs'd upon the self-same hill,
Fed the same flock by fountain, shade, and rill.
Together both, ere the high lawns appear'd
Under the opening eye-lids of the morn,
We drove afield, and both together heard
What time the gray-fly winds her sultry horn,
Battening our flocks with the fresh dews of night,
Oft, till the star, that rose, at evening, bright,
Toward heaven's descent had slop'd his westering wheel.
Mean while the rural ditties were not mute,
Temper'd to the oaten flute ;
Rough Satyrs danc'd, and Fauns with cloven heel
From the glad sound would not be absent long ;
And old Damœtas loved to hear our song.

But, O the heavy change, now thou art gone,
Now thou art gone, and never must return !
Thee, Shepherd, thee the woods, and desert caves
With wild thyme and the gadding vine o'ergrown,
And all their echoes mourn :
The willows, and the hazel copses green,
Shall now no more be seen
Fanning their joyous leaves to thy soft lays.

As killing as the canker to the rose,
 Or taint-worm to the weanling herds that graze,
 Or frost to flowers, that their gay wardrobe wear,
 When first the white-thorn blows ;
 Such, Lycidas, thy loss to shepherds' ear.

Where were ye, Nymphs, when the remorseless deep
 Clos'd o'er the head of your loved Lycidas ?
 For neither were ye playing on the steep,¹
 Where your old Bards, the famous Druids, lie,
 Nor on the shaggy top of Mona² high,
 Nor yet where Deva³ spreads her wisard stream :
 Ay me ! I fondly dream !
 Had ye been there—for what could they have done ?
 What could the Muse⁴ herself that Orpheus⁵ bore,
 The Muse herself, for her enchanting son,
 Whom universal Nature did lament,
 When, by the rout that made the hideous roar,
 His gory visage down the stream was sent,
 Down the swift Hebrus⁶ to the Lesbian shore ?

Alas ! what boots it with incessant care
 To tend the homely, slighted shepherd's trade,
 And strictly meditate the thankless Muse ?
 Were it not better done, as others use,
 To sport with Amaryllis⁷ in the shade,
 Or with the tangles of Neæra's hair ?
 Fame is the spur that the clear spirit doth raise
 (That last infirmity of noble mind)
 To scorn delights, and live laborious days ;
 But the fair guerdon when we hope to find,
 And think to burst out into sudden blaze,

³ 'Deva:' the English Dee beside Chester, called 'wisard,' as the sacred boundary between Wales and England.—⁴ 'The Muse:' Calliope.—⁵ 'Orpheus:' torn in pieces by the Bacchanalians.—⁶ 'Hebrus:' a river in Thrace.
⁷ 'Amaryllis,' &c.: see Horace.

Comes the blind Fury¹ with the abhorred shears,
 And slits the thin-spun life. "But not the praise,"
 Phœbus replied, and touch'd my trembling ears ;
 "Fame is no plant that grows on mortal soil,
 Nor in the glistening foil
 Set off to the world, nor in broad rumour lies ;
 But lives and spreads aloft by those pure eyes,
 And perfect witness of all-judging Jove ;
 As he pronounces lastly on each deed,
 Of so much fame in heaven expect thy meed."

O fountain Arethuse, and thou honour'd flood,
 Smooth-sliding Mincius,² crown'd with vocal reeds.
 That strain I heard was of a higher mood :
 But now my oat proceeds,
 And listens to the herald of the sea
 That came in Neptune's plea ;
 He ask'd the waves, and ask'd the felon winds,
 What hard mishap hath doom'd this gentle swain ?
 And question'd every gust of rugged wings
 That blows from off each beaked promontory :
 They knew not of his story ;
 And sage Hippotades³ their answer brings,
 That not a blast was from his dungeon stray'd ;
 The air was calm, and on the level brine
 Sleek Panope with all her sisters play'd.
 It was that fatal and perfidious bark,
 Built in the eclipse, and rigg'd with curses dark,
 That sunk so low that sacred head of thine.

Next Camus,⁴ reverend sire, went footing slow,
 His mantle hairy, and his bonnet sedge,
 Inwrought with figures dim, and on the edge

Like to that sanguine flower inscrib'd with woe.
 "Ah! Who hath reft (qoth he) my dearest pledge?"
 Last came, and last did go,
 The pilot¹ of the Galilean lake;
 Two massy keys he bore of metals twain
 (The golden opes, the iron shuts amain),
 He shook his miter'd locks, and stern bespake:
 "How well could I have spar'd for thee, young swain,
 Enow of such, as for their bellies' sake
 Creep, and intrude, and climb into the fold?
 Of other care they little reckoning make,
 Than how to scramble at the shearers' feast,
 And shove away the worthy bidden guest;
 Blind mouths! that scarce themselves know how to hold
 A sheep-hook, or have learn'd aught else the least
 That to the faithful herdman's art belongs!
 What recks it them? What need they? They are sped;
 And when they list, their lean and flashy songs
 Grate on their scrannel² pipes of wretched straw;
 The hungry sheep look up, and are not fed,
 But, swoln with wind and the rank mist they draw,
 Rot inwardly, and foul contagion spread:
 Besides what the grim wolf with privy paw
 Daily devours apace, and nothing sed:³
 But that two-handed engine⁴ at the door
 Stands ready to smite once, and smite no more."
 Return, Alpheus,⁵ the dread voice is past,
 That shrunk thy streams; return, Sicilian Muse,
 And call the vales, and bid them hither cast
 Their bells, and flowerets of a thousand hues.
 Ye valleys low, where the mild whispers use

¹ 'The pilot:' Peter.—² 'Scrannel:' screeching.—³ 'Sed:' old spelling for said.—⁴ 'Two-handed engine:' the sword with the two edges issuing out of Christ's mouth.—⁵ 'Alpheus:' the Sicilian Muse of Theocritus and others.

Of shades, and wanton winds, and gushing brooks,
 On whose fresh lap the swart-star¹ sparely looks ;
 Throw hither all your quaint enamell'd eyes,
 That on the green turf suck the honied showers,
 And purple all the ground with vernal flowers.
 Bring the rathe primrose that forsaken dies,
 The tufted crow-toe, and pale jessamine,
 The white pink, and the pansy freak'd with jet,
 The glowing violet,
 The musk-rose, and the well-attir'd woodbine,
 With cowslips wan that hang the pensive head,
 And every flower that sad embroidery wears :
 Bid amaranthus all his beauty shed,
 And daffodillies fill their cups with tears,
 To strew the laureat herse where Lycid lies.
 For, so to interpose a little ease,
 Let our frail thoughts dally with false surmise ;
 Ay me! Whilst thee the shores and sounding seas
 Wash far away, where'er thy bones are hurl'd,
 Whether beyond the stormy Hebrides,
 Where thou perhaps, under the whelming tide,
 Visit'st the bottom of the monstrous world ;
 Or whether thou, to our moist² vows denied,
 Sleep'st by the fable of Bellerus³ old,
 Where the great Vision of the guarded Mount⁴
 Looks towards Namancos⁵ and Bayona's hold ;

¹ 'Swart-star:' dog-star. — ² 'Moist:' wet with tears. — ³ 'Bellerus:' a Cornish giant. — ⁴ 'The guarded Mount:' Mount St Michael; not far from the Land's end in Cornwall, whence at low water it is accessible. The guarded mount, says Mr Warton, is simply the fortified mount; * and the great vision is the famous apparition of the Archangel Michael, who is said to have appeared on the top of the mount, and to have directed a church to be built there. — ⁵ 'Namancos,' or Numantia: a town of Old Castile, once highly celebrated in the Spanish history.

* Is it not the Archangel rather than the fortress, who guards the mount?

Look homeward, Angel,¹ now, and melt with ruth :
And, O ye dolphins, waft the hapless youth.

Weep no more, woful Shepherds, weep no more,
For Lycidas your sorrow is not dead,
Sunk though he be beneath the watery floor ;
So sinks the day-star in the ocean bed,
And yet anon repairs his drooping head,
And tricks his beams, and with new-spangled ore
Flames in the forehead of the morning sky :
So Lycidas sunk low, but mounted high,
Through the dear night of Him that walk'd the waves ;
Where, other groves, and other streams along,
With nectar pure his oozy locks he laves,
And hears the unexpressive nuptial song,
In the blest kingdoms meek of joy and love.
There entertain him all the saints above,
In solemn troops, and sweet societies,
That sing, and, singing, in their glory move,
And wipe the tears for ever from his eyes.
Now, Lycidas, the shepherds weep no more ;
Henceforth thou art the Genius of the shore,
In thy large recompense, and shalt be good
To all that wander in that perilous flood.

Thus sang the uncouth swain to the oaks and rills,
While the still morn went out with sandals gray ;
He touch'd the tender stops of various quills,
With eager thought warbling his Dorick lay :
And now the sun had stretch'd out all the hills,
And now was dropt into the western bay :
At last he rose, and twitch'd his mantle blue :
To-morrow to fresh woods, and pastures new.

L'ALLEGRO.¹

HENCE, loathed Melancholy,
Of Cerberus and blackest Midnight born,
In Stygian cave forlorn,
'Mongst horrid shapes, and shrieks, and sights unholy!
Find out some uncouth cell,
Where brooding Darkness spreads his jealous wings,
And the night-raven sings ;
There under ebon shades and low-brow'd rocks,
As ragged as thy locks,
In dark Cimmerian desert ever dwell.
But come, thou goddess fair and free,
In Heaven yclep'd Euphrosyne,
And by Men, heart-easing Mirth ;
Whom lovely Venus, at a birth,
With two sister Graces² more,
To ivy-crowned Bacchus bore :
Or whether (as some sager sing)
The frolic wind that breathes the spring,
Zephyr, with Aurora playing,
As he met her once a-Maying ;
There on beds of violets blue,
And fresh-blown roses wash'd in dew,
Fill'd her with thee a daughter fair,
So buxom, blithe, and debonair.
Haste thee, Nymph, and bring with thee
Jest, and youthful Jollity,

Quips,¹ and Cranks,² and wanton Wiles,
Nods, and Becks, and wreathed Smiles,
Such as hang on Hebe's cheek,
And love to live in dimples sleek ;
Sport that wrinkled Care derides,
And Laughter holding both his sides.
Come, and trip it, as you go,
On the light fantastick toe ;
And in thy right hand lead with thee
The mountain-nymph sweet Liberty ;
And, if I give thee honour due,
Mirth, admit me of thy crew,
To live with her, and live with thee,
In unproved³ pleasures free ;
To hear the lark begin his flight,
And singing startle the dull night,
From his watch-tower in the skies,
Till the dappled dawn doth rise ;
Then to come, in spite of sorrow,
And at my window bid good morrow,
Through the sweet-briar, or the vine,
Or the twisted eglantine :⁴
While the cock, with lively din,
Scatters the rear of Darkness thin ;
And to the stack, or the barn-door,
Stoutly struts his dame before :
Oft listening how the hounds and horn
Cheerly rouse the slumbering morn,
From the side of some hoar hill,
Through the high wood echoing shrill :
Some time walking, not unseen,
By hedge-row elms, on hillocks green,

Right against the eastern gate
 Where the great sun begins his state,
 Robed in flames, and amber light
 The clouds in thousand liveries dight ;
 While the ploughman, near at hand,
 Whistles o'er the furrow'd land,
 And the milkmaid singeth blithe,
 And the mower whets his sithe,
 And every shepherd tells his tale
 Under the hawthorn in the dale.
 Straight mine eye hath caught new pleasures,
 Whilst the landskip round it measures ;
 Russet lawns, and fallows gray,
 Where the nibbling flocks do stray ;
 Mountains, on whose barren breast
 The labouring clouds do often rest ;
 Meadows trim with daisies pied,¹
 Shallow brooks, and rivers wide :
 Towers and battlements it sees
 Bosom'd high in tufted trees,
 Where perhaps some Beauty lies,
 The Cynosure² of neighbouring eyes.
 Hard by, a cottage chimney smokes,
 From betwixt two aged oaks,
 Where Corydon³ and Thyrsis, met,
 Are at their savoury dinner set
 Of herbs, and other country messes,
 Which the neat-handed Phillis dresses ;
 And then in haste her bower she leaves,
 With Thestylis to bind the sheaves ;
 Or, if the earlier season lead,
 To the tann'd haycock in the mead.

 classical names adapted to modern manners and labours.

Sometimes with secure delight
 The upland hamlets will invite,
 When the merry bells ring round,
 And the jocund rebecks¹ sound
 To many a youth, and many a maid,
 Dancing in the chequer'd shade ;
 And young and old come forth to play
 On a sun-shine holy-day,
 Till the live-long day-light fail :
 Then to the spicy nut-brown ale,
 With stories told of many a feat,
 How faery Mab the junkets² eat ;
 She was pinch'd, and pull'd, she sed ;
 And he, by friar's lantern³ led,
 Tells how the drudging Goblin⁴ swet.
 To earn his cream-bowl duly set,
 When in one night, ere glimpse of morn,
 His shadowy flail hath thresh'd the corn,
 That ten day-labourers could not end ;
 Then lies him down the lubbar⁵ fiend,
 And, stretch'd out all the chimney's length,
 Basks at the fire his hairy strength ;
 And crop-full out of doors he flings,
 Ere the first cock his matin rings.
 Thus done the tales, to bed they creep,
 By whispering winds soon lull'd asleep.
 Tower'd cities please us then,
 And the busy hum of men,
 Where throngs of knights and barons bold,
 In weeds of peace, high triumphs hold,
 With store of ladies, whose bright eyes
 Rain influence, and judge the prize

Of wit or arms, while both contend
 To win her grace, whom all commend.
 There let Hymen oft appear
 In saffron¹ robe, with taper clear,
 And pomp, and feast, and revelry,
 With mask, and antique pageantry ;
 Such sights as youthful poets dream
 On summer eves by haunted stream.
 Then to the well-trod stage anon,
 If Jonson's learned sock be on,
 Or sweetest Shakspeare, Fancy's child,
 Warble his native wood-notes wild.

And ever, against eating cares,
 Lap me in soft Lydian airs,
 Married to immortal verse ;
 Such as the meeting soul may pierce,
 In notes, with many a winding bout²
 Of linked sweetness long drawn out,
 With wanton heed and giddy cunning ;
 The melting voice through mazes running,
 Untwisting all the chains that tie
 The hidden soul of harmony ;
 That Orpheus' self may heave his head
 From golden slumber on a bed
 Of heap'd Elysian flowers, and hear
 Such strains as would have won the ear
 Of Pluto, to have quite set free
 His half-regain'd Eurydice.

These delights if thou canst give,
 Mirth, with thee I mean to live.

² 'Bout:' fold or twist.

IL PENSEROSO.¹

HENCE, vain deluding Joys,
The brood of Folly without father bred !
How little you bested,
Or fill the fixed mind with all your toys !
Dwell in some idle brain,
And fancies fond with gaudy shapes possess,
As thick and numberless
As the gay motes that people the sun-beams ;
Or likest hovering dreams,
The fickle pensioners of Morpheus' train.
But hail, thou Goddess, sage and holy,
Hail, divinest Melancholy !
Whose saintly visage is too bright
To hit the sense of human sight,
And therefore to our weaker view
O'erlaid with black, staid Wisdom's hue ;
Black, but such as in esteem
Prince Memnon's sister² might beseem,
Or that starr'd Ethiop queen³ that strove
To set her beauty's praise above
The Sea-Nymphs, and their powers offended :
Yet thou art higher far descended :
Thee, bright-hair'd Vesta,⁴ long of yore,
The solitary Saturn⁵ bore
His daughter she ; in Saturn's reign,
Such mixture was not held a stain :

¹ 'Il Penseroso : ' The Thoughtful or Pensive Man. — ² ' Prince Memnon's sister : ' an imaginary character. — ³ ' Ethiop queen : ' Cassiope, Queen of Ethiopia, who was said to have been turned into a constellation. — ⁴ ' Vesta ' means genius. — ⁵ ' Saturn ' represents gloomy and deep-thoughted minds.

Oft in glimmering bowers and glades
 He met her, and in secret shades
 Of woody Ida's inmost grove,
 Whilst yet there was no fear of Jove.
 Come, pensive Nun, devout and pure,
 Sober, stedfast, and demure,
 All in a robe of darkest grain,
 Flowing with majestick train,
 And sable stole of cyprus¹ lawn,
 Over thy decent shoulders drawn.
 Come, but keep thy wonted state,
 With even step, and musing gait;
 And looks commérce with the skies,
 Thy rapt soul sitting in thine eyes :
 There, held in holy passion still,
 Forget thyself to marble, till
 With a sad leaden downward cast
 Thou fix them on the earth as fast :
 And join with thee calm Peace, and Quiet,
 Spare Fast, that oft with Gods doth diet,
 And hears the Muses in a ring
 Aye round about Jove's altar sing :
 And add to these retired Leisure,
 That in trim gardens takes his pleasure :
 But first, and chiefest, with thee bring,
 Him that yon soars on golden wing,
 Guiding the fiery-wheeled² throne,
 The Cherub Contemplation ;
 And the mute Silence hist along,
 'Less Philomel³ will deign a song,
 In her sweetest saddest plight,
 Smoothing the rugged brow of night,

¹ 'Cyprus:' a thin transparent texture. — ² 'Fiery-wheeled:' an allusion to Ezekiel's wheels. — ³ 'Philomel:' the nightingale.

While Cynthia¹ checks her dragon yoke,
Gently o'er the accustom'd oak :
Sweet bird, that shun'st the noise of folly,
Most musical, most melancholy !
Thee, chauntress, oft, the woods among,
I woo, to hear thy even-song ;
And, missing thee, I walk unseen
On the dry smooth-shaven green,
To behold the wandering moon,
Riding near her highest noon,
Like one that had been led astray
Through the heaven's wide pathless way ;
And oft, as if her head she bow'd,
Stooping through a fleecy cloud.
Oft, on a plat of rising ground,
I hear the far-off Curfeu sound,
Over some wide-water'd shore,
Swinging slow with sullen roar :
Or, if the air will not permit,
Some still removed place will fit,
Where glowing embers through the room
Teach light to counterfeit a gloom ;
Far from all resort of mirth,
Save the cricket on the hearth,
Or the belman's² drowsy charm,
To bless the doors from nightly harm.
Or let my lamp, at midnight hour,
Be seen in some high lonely tower,
Where I may oft out-watch the Bear,
With thrice great Hermes, or unsphere
The spirit of Plato, to unfold
What worlds or what vast regions hold

¹ 'Cynthia : ' the moon.—² 'Belman : ' the watchman, who anciently muttered blessings as he passed.

The immortal mind that hath forsook
 Her mansion in this fleshly nook :
 And of those demons¹ that are found
 In fire, air, flood, or under ground,
 Whose power hath a true consent
 With planet, or with element.
 Sometime let gorgeous Tragedy
 In scepter'd pall come sweeping by,
 Presenting Thebes,² or Pelops' line,³
 Or the tale of Troy divine ;
 Or what (though rare) of later age
 Ennobled hath the buskin'd stage.

But, O sad Virgin, that thy power
 Might raise Musæus⁴ from his bower !
 Or bid the soul of Orpheus sing
 Such notes, as, warbled to the string,
 Drew iron tears down Pluto's cheek,
 And made Hell grant what love did seek !
 Or call up him⁵ that left half-told
 The story of Cambuscan bold,
 Of Camball, and of Algarsife,
 And who had Canace to wife,
 That own'd the virtuous ring and glass ;
 And of the wonderous horse of brass
 On which the Tartar king did ride :
 And if aught else great bards beside
 In sage and solemn tunes have sung,
 Of turneys, and of trophies hung
 Of forests, and enchantments drear,
 Where more is meant than meets the ear.

¹ 'Demons : ' fallen angels permitted to rule over the elements (according to the scholastic belief) till the day of judgment. — ² 'Thebes : ' Eschylus' 'Seven before Thebes.' — ³ 'Pelops' line : ' the Electra of Sophocles, &c. — ⁴ 'Musæus : ' an ancient Greek poet, of a grave and solemn cast of genius. — ⁵ 'Him : ' Chaucer in his 'Squire's Tale.'

Thus, Night, oft see me in thy pale career
 Till civil-suited¹ Morn appear ;
 Not trick'd and frounc'd² as she was wont
 With the Attick boy to hunt,
 But kercheft in a comely cloud,
 While rocking winds are piping loud,
 Or usher'd with a shower still,
 When the gust hath blown his fill,
 Ending on the rustling leaves,
 With minute drops from off the eaves.
 And, when the sun begins to fling
 His flaring beams, me, goddess, bring
 To arched walks of twilight groves,
 And shadows brown, that Sylvan³ loves,
 Of pine, or monumental oak,
 Where the rude axe, with heaved stroke,
 Was never heard the Nymphs to daunt,
 Or fright them from their hallow'd haunt.
 There in close covert by some brook,
 Where no profaner eye may look,
 Hide me from day's garish eye,
 While the bee with honied thigh,
 That at her flowery work doth sing,
 And the waters murmuring,
 With such consort as they keep,
 Entice the dewy-feather'd Sleep ;
 And let some strange mysterious Dream
 Wave at his wings in aery stream
 Of lively portraiture display'd,
 Softly on my eye-lids laid.
 And, as I wake, sweet musick breathe
 Above, about, or underneath,

* 'Civil:' grave, decent.—² 'Frounc'd:' curled.—³ 'Sylvan:' the god of the woods.

Sent by some Spirit to mortals good,
Or the unseen Genius of the wood.

But let my due feet never fail
To walk the studious cloysters pale,
And love the high-embowed¹ roof,
With antick pillars massy proof,
And storied² windows richly dight,
Casting a dim religious light :
There let the pealing organ blow,
To the full-voic'd quire below,
In service high, and anthems clear,
As may with sweetness, through mine ear,
Dissolve me into ecstasies,
And bring all heaven before mine eyes.

And may at last my weary age
Find out the peaceful hermitage,
The hairy gown and mossy cell,
Where I may sit and rightly spell
Of every star that heaven doth shew,
And every herb that sips the dew ;
Till old experience do attain
To something like prophetick strain.

These pleasures, Melancholy, give,
And I with thee will choose to live.

SONNETS.

I. TO THE NIGHTINGALE.

O NIGHTINGALE, that on yon bloomy spray
Warblest at eve, when all the woods are still ;
Thou with fresh hope the lover's heart dost fill,
While the jolly Hours lead on propitious May.
Thy liquid notes that close the eye of day,
First heard before the shallow cuckoo's bill,
Portend success in love ; O, if Jove's will
Have link'd that amorous power to thy soft lay,
Now timely sing, ere the rude bird of hate
Fortell my hopeless doom in some grove nigh ;
As thou from year to year has sung too late
For my relief, yet hadst no reason why :
Whether the Muse, or Love, call thee his mate,
Both them I serve, and of their train am I.

II.

DONNA leggiadra, il cui bel nome honora
L' herbosa val di Rheno, e il nobil varco ;
Bene è colui d'ogni valore scarco,
Qual tuo spirto gentil non innamora ;
Che dolcemente mostra sì di fuora
De sui atti soavi giamai parco,
E i don', che son d'amor saette ed arco,
La onde l' alta tua virtù s'infiora.

Quando tu vaga parli, o lieta canti
Che mover possa duro alpestre legno,
Guardi ciascun a gli occhi, ed a gli orecchi
L'entrata, chi di te si trouva indegno ;
Gratia sola di su gli vaglia, inanti
Che'l disio amoroso al cuor s'invecchi.

III.

QUAL in colle aspro, al imbrunir di sera
L'avezza giovinetta pastorella
Va bagnando l'herbetta strana e bella
Che mal si spande a disusata spera
Fuor di sua natia alma primavera,
Cosi Amor meco insù la lingua snella
Desta il fior novo di strania favella,
Mentre io di te, vezzosamente altera,
Canto, dal mio buon popol non inteso
E'l bel Tamigi cangio col bel Arno.
Amor lo volse, ed io a l'altrui peso
Seppi ch' Amor cosa mai volse indarno.
Deh ! foss'il mio cuor lento e'l duro seno
A chi pianta dal ciel si buon terreno.

CANZONE.

RIDONSI donne e giovani amorosi
M' accostandosi attorno, e perche scrivi,
Perche tu scrivi in lingua ignota e strana
Verseggiando d' amor, e come t'osi ?
Dinne, se la tua speme sia mai vana,
E de pensieri lo miglior t'arrivi ;
Cosi mi van burlando, altri rivi

Altri lidi t'aspettan, ed altre onde
Nelle cui verdi sponde
Spuntati ad hor, ad hor a la tua chioma
L'immortal guiderdon d'etern frondi
Perche alle spalle tue soverchia soma?
Canzon dirotti, e tu per me rispondi
Dice mia Donna, e 'l suo dir, é il mio cuore
Questa e lingua di cui si vanta Amore.

IV.

DIODATI, e te 'l dirò con maraviglia,
Quel ritroso io ch' amor spreggiar soléa
E de suoi lacci spesso mi ridéa
Gia caddi, ov' huom dabben talhor s'impiglia.
Ne treccie d'oro, ne guancia vermiglia
M'abbaglian sì, ma sotto nova idea
Pellegrina bellezza che 'l cuor bea,
Portamenti alti honesti, e nelle ciglia
Quel sereno fulgor d'amabil nero,
Parole adorne di lingua piu d'una,
E 'l cantar che di mezzo l'hemispero
Traviar ben puo la faticosa Luna,
E degli occhi suoi auventa sì gran fuoco
Che l'incerar gli orecchi mi fia poco.

V.

PER certo i bei vostr'occhi, Donna mia
Esser non puo che non sian lo mio sole
Si mi percuoton forte, come ei suole
Per l'arene di Libia chi s'invia,
Mentre un caldo vapor (ne sentì pria)

Da quel lato si spinge ove mi duole,
 Che forse amanti nelle lor parole
 Chiaman sospir ; io non so che si sia :
 Parte rinchiusa, e turbida si cela
 Scosso mi il petto, e poi n' uscendo poco
 Quivi d' attorno o s' agghiaccia, o s' ingiela ;
 Ma quanto a gli occhi giunge a trovar loco
 Tutte le notti a me suol far pioverse
 Finche mia Alba rivien colma di rose.

VI.

GIOVANE piano, e semplicetto amante
 Poi che fuggir me stesso in dubbio sono,
 Madonna a voi del mio cuor l' humil dono
 Farò divoto ; io certo a prove tante
 L' hebbi fedele, intrepido, costante,
 De pensieri leggiadro, accorto, e buono ;
 Quando rugge il gran mondo, e scocca il tuono,
 S' arma di se, e d' intero diamante :
 Tanto del forse, e d' invidia sicuro,
 Di timori, e speranze, al popol use,
 Quanto d' ingegno, e d' alto valor vago,
 E di cetra sonora, e delle muse :
 Sol troverete in tal parte men duro
 Ove Amor mise l' insanabil ago.¹

VII. ON HIS BEING ARRIVED AT THE AGE OF TWENTY-THREE.

How soon hath Time, the subtle thief of youth,
 Stolen on his wing my three and twentieth year !
 My hasting days fly on with full career,
 But my late spring no bud or blossom shew'th.

¹ Cowper has very elegantly translated these sonnets.

Perhaps my semblance might deceive the truth,
 That I to manhood am arriv'd so near ;
 And inward ripeness doth much less appear,
 That some more timely-happy spirits endu'th.
 Yet be it less or more, or soon or slow,
 It shall be still in strictest measure even
 To that same lot, however mean or high,
 Toward which Time leads me, and the Will of Heaven ;
 All is, if I have grace to use it so,
 As ever in my great Task-Master's eye.

VIII. WHEN THE ASSAULT¹ WAS INTENDED TO THE CITY.

CAPTAIN, or Colonel, or Knight in arms,
 Whose chance on these defenceless doors may seize,
 If deed of honour did thee ever please,
 Guard them, and him within protect from harms.
 He can requite thee ; for he knows the charms
 That call fame on such gentle acts as these,
 And he can spread thy name o'er lands and seas,
 Whatever clime the sun's bright circle warms.
 Lift not thy spear against the Muses' bower :
 The great Emathian conquerour² bid spare
 The house of Pindarus, when temple and tower
 Went to the ground : And the repeated³ air
 Of sad Electra's poet had the power
 To save the Athenian walls from ruin bare.

³ 'Repeated:' When Lysander took Athens, it was proposed to raze the city entirely; but a Phocian repeated some lines of Euripides which induced him to modify his sentence.

IX. TO A VIRTUOUS YOUNG LADY.

LADY, that in the prime of earliest youth
 Wisely hast shunn'd the broad way and the green,
 And with those few art eminently seen,
 That labour up the hill of heavenly truth,
 The better part with Mary and with Ruth
 Chosen thou hast ; and they that overween,
 And at thy growing virtues fret their spleen,
 No anger find in thee, but pity and ruth.
 Thy care is fix'd, and zealously attends
 To fill thy odorous lamp with deeds of light,
 And hope that reaps not shame. Therefore be sure
 Thou, when the bridegroom with his feastful friends
 Passes to bliss at the mid hour of night,
 Hast gain'd thy entrance, Virgin wise and pure.

X. TO THE LADY MARGARET LEY.¹

DAUGHTER to that good Earl, once President
 Of England's Council and her Treasury,
 Who liv'd in both, unstain'd with gold or fee,
 And left them both, more in himself content,
 Till the sad breaking of that Parliament
 Broke him, as that dishonest victory
 At Charonea, fatal to liberty,
 Kill'd with report that old man eloquent.²

¹ 'Lady Margaret Ley:' the daughter of Sir James Ley, whose singular learning and abilities raised him through all the great posts of the law, till he came to be made Earl of Marlborough, and Lord High Treasurer, and Lord President of the Council to King James I. He died in an advanced age. Milton attributes his death to the breaking of the Parliament; and it is true that the Parliament was dissolved the 10th of March 1628-9, and he died on the 14th of the same month. Lady Margaret was married to Captain Hobson, Isle of Wight.—² 'Old man eloquent:' Isocrates, the orator. The victory was gained by Philip of Macedon over the Athenians.

Though later born than to have known the days
 Wherein your father flourish'd, yet by you,
 Madam, methinks I see him living yet ;
 So well your words his noble virtues praise,
 That all both judge you to relate them true,
 And to possess them, honour'd Margaret.

XI. ON THE DETRACTION WHICH FOLLOWED UPON MY WRITING CERTAIN TREATISES.

A BOOK was writ of late call'd Tetrachordon,¹
 And woven close, both matter, form, and stile ;
 The subject new: it walk'd the Town a while,
 Numbering good intellects ; now seldom por'd on.
 Cries the stall-reader, Bless us ! what a word on
 A title page is this ! and some in file
 Stand spelling false, while one might walk to Mile-
 End Green. Why is it harder, Sirs, than Gordon,
 Colkitto, or Macdonnel, or Galasp ?²
 Those rugged names to our like mouths grow sleek,
 That would have made Quintilian stare and gasp.
 Thy age, like ours, O Soul of Sir John Cheek,
 Hated not learning worse than toad or asp,
 When thou taught'st Cambridge and king Edward, Greek.

—² Milton is here collecting, from his hatred to the Scots, what he thinks Scottish names of an ill sound. Colkitto and Macdonnel are one and the same person ; a brave officer on the royal side, an Irishman of the Antrim family, who served under Montrose. The Macdonalds of that family are styled, by way of distinction, Mac Colclittok, i. e., descendants of lame Colin. Galasp, or George Gillespie, was a Scottish writer against the Independents, and one of the members of the Assembly of Divines, and a right noble spirit.

—³ 'Sir John Cheek:' the first professor of the Greek tongue in the University of Cambridge, and afterwards made one of the tutors to Edward VI.

XII. ON THE SAME.

I DID but prompt the age to quit their clogs
 By the known rules of ancient liberty,
 When straight a barbarous noise environs me
 Of owls and cuckoos, asses, apes, and dogs :
 As when those hinds¹ that were transform'd to frogs
 Rail'd at Latona's² twin-born progeny,
 Which after held the sun and moon in fee.
 But this is got by casting pearl to hogs ;
 That bawl for freedom in their senseless mood,
 And still revolt when truth would set them free.
 Licence they mean when they cry Liberty ;
 For who loves that, must first be wise and good ;
 But from that mark how far they rove we see,
 For all this waste of wealth, and loss of blood.

XIII. TO MR H. LAWES,³ ON THE PUBLISHING HIS AIRS.

HARRY, whose tuneful and well-measured song
 First taught our English musick how to span
 Words with just note and accent, not to scan
 With Midas ears, committing⁴ short and long ;
 Thy worth and skill exempts thee from the throng,
 With praise enough for Envy to look wan ;
 To after age thou shalt be writ the man,
 That with smooth air could'st humour best our tongue.
 Thou honour'st verse, and verse must lend her wing
 To honour thee the priest of Phœbus' quire,
 That tunest their happiest lines in hymn, or story.

³ 'Lawes:' see 'Comus.'—⁴ 'Committing:' offending against rule and quantity.

Dante shall give Fame leave to set thee higher
 Than his Casella,¹ whom he woo'd to sing
 Met in the milder shades of Purgatory.

XIV. ON THE RELIGIOUS MEMORY OF MRS CATHERINE
 THOMSON,² MY CHRISTIAN FRIEND, DECEASED
 DECEMBER 16, 1646.

WHEN Faith and Love, which parted from thee never,
 Had ripen'd thy just soul to dwell with God,
 Meekly thou didst resign this earthly load
 Of death, call'd life ; which us from life doth sever.
 Thy works, and alms, and all thy good endeavour,
 Staid not behind, nor in the grave were trod ;
 But, as Faith pointed with her golden rod,
 Follow'd thee up to joy and bliss for ever.
 Love led them on, and Faith, who knew them best
 Thy hand-maids, clad them o'er with purple beams
 And azure wings, that up they flew so drest,
 And spake the truth of thee on glorious themes
 Before the Judge ; who thenceforth bid thee rest,
 And drink thy fill of pure immortal streams.

XV. TO THE LORD GENERAL FAIRFAX.

FAIRFAX, whose name in arms through Europe rings,
 Filling each mouth with envy or with praise,
 And all her jealous monarchs with amaze
 And rumours loud, that daunt remotest kings ;
 Thy firm unshaken virtue ever brings
 Victory home, though new rebellions raise
 Their Hydra heads, and the false North displays

¹ 'Casella:' an eminent musician and friend of Dante; see an exquisite passage in Purg. c. ii. v. 111.—'Mrs Thomson:' Milton, when made Latin Secretary, lodged in her house. She was a Quakeress.

Her broken league¹ to imp² their serpent wings.
 O yet a nobler task awaits thy hand,
 (For what can war but endless war still breed ?)
 Till truth and right from violence be freed,
 And publick faith clear'd from the shameful brand
 Of publick fraud. In vain doth Valour bleed,
 While Avarice and Rapine share the land.

XVI. TO THE LORD GENERAL CROMWELL.

CROMWELL, our chief of men, who through a cloud
 Not of war only, but detractions rude,
 Guided by faith and matchless fortitude
 To peace and truth thy glorious way hast plough'd,
 And on the neck of crowned Fortune proud
 Hast rear'd God's trophies, and his work pursued,
 While Darwen³ stream, with blood of Scots imbrued,
 And Dunbar field resounds thy praises loud,
 And Worcester's laureat wreath. Yet much remains
 To conquer still ; Peace hath her victories
 No less renown'd than War : New foes arise
 Threatening to bind our souls with secular chains :
 Help us to save free conscience from the paw
 Of hireling wolves,⁴ whose gospel is their maw.

XVII. TO SIR HENRY VANE THE YOUNGER.

VANE, young in years, but in sage counsel old,
 Than whom a better senator ne'er held
 The helm of Rome, when gowns, not arms, repell'd

¹ 'Broken league:' the English Parliament held that the Scotch had broken their Covenant by Hamilton's march to England.—² 'Imp:' add a new piece to the old.—³ 'Darwen:' a river near Preston, where Cromwell routed the Scotch in August 1648.—⁴ 'Hireling wolves:' he means the Presbyterian clergy, and the claims they made on the parochial revenues.

The fierce Epirot and the African bold ;
 Whether to settle peace, or to unfold
 The drift of hollow States¹ hard to be spell'd ;
 Then to advise how War may, best upheld,
 Move by her two main nerves, iron and gold,
 In all her equipage : besides to know
 Both spiritual power and civil, what each means,
 What severs each, thou hast learn'd, which few have done :
 The bounds of either sword to thee we owe :
 Therefore on thy firm hand Religion leans
 In peace, and reckons thee her eldest son.

XVIII. ON THE LATE MASSACRE¹ IN PIEMONTE.

AVENGE, O Lord, thy slaughter'd saints, whose bones
 Lie scatter'd on the Alpine mountains cold ;
 Even them who kept thy truth so pure of old,
 When all our fathers worshipt stocks and stones,
 Forget not : in thy book record their groans
 Who were thy sheep, and in their ancient fold
 Slain by the bloody Piemontese that roll'd
 Mother with infant down the rocks. Their moans
 The vales redoubled to the hills, and they
 To heaven. Their martyr'd blood and ashes sow
 O'er all the Italian fields, where still doth sway
 The triple Tyrant ; that from these may grow
 A hundredfold, who, having learn'd thy way,
 Early may fly the Babylonian woe.

¹ 'States:' those of Holland.—² 'The late massacre:' this was organised by the Duke of Savoy in 1655. It was very barbarous. Those who escaped fled to the mountains of Piedmont, whence they applied to Cromwell for relief. He ordered a general fast, and made a national contribution, amounting to £40,000.

XIX. ON HIS BLINDNESS.

WHEN I consider how my light is spent
 Ere half my days, in this dark world and wide,
 And that one talent which is death to hide,
 Lodged with me useless, though my soul more bent
 To serve therewith my Maker, and present
 My true account, lest He, returning, chide ;
 "Doth God exact day-labour, light denied ?"
 I fondly ask : But Patience, to prevent
 That murmur, soon replies, "God doth not need
 Either man's work, or his own gifts ; who best
 Bear his mild yoke, they serve Him best ; his state
 Is kingly ; thousands at his bidding speed,
 And post o'er land and ocean without rest ;
 They also serve who only stand and wait."

XX. TO MR LAWRENCE.

LAWRENCE, of virtuous father¹ virtuous son,
 Now that the fields are dank, and ways are mire,
 Where shall we sometimes meet, and by the fire
 Help waste a sullen day, what may be won
 From the hard season gaining ? Time will run
 On smother, till Favonius² re-inspire
 The frozen earth, and clothe in fresh attire
 The lilly and rose, that neither sow'd nor spun.
 What neat repast shall feast us, light and choice,
 Of Attick taste, with wine, whence we may rise
 To hear the lute well touch'd, or artful voice
 Warble immortal notes and Tuscan air ?
 He who of those delights can judge, and spare
 To interpose them oft, is not unwise.

¹ 'The virtuous father' was Henry Lawrence, President of Cromwell's Council.—² 'Favonius : ' father of Spring.

XXI. TO CYRIACK SKINNER.¹

CYRIACK, whose grandsire, on the royal bench
 Of British Themis, with no mean applause
 Pronounc'd, and in his volumes taught, our laws,
 Which others at their bar so often wrench ;
 To-day deep thoughts resolve with me to drench
 In mirth that, after, no repenting draws ;
 Let Euclid rest, and Archimedes pause,
 And what the Swede² intends, and what the French.
 To measure life learn thou betimes, and know
 Toward solid good what leads the nearest way ;
 For other things mild Heaven a time ordains,
 And disapproves that care, though wise in show,
 That with superfluous burden loads the day,
 And, when God sends a cheerful hour, refrains.

XXII. TO THE SAME.

CYRIACK, this three years day these eyes, though clear,
 To outward view, of blemish or of spot,
 Bereft of light, their seeing have forgot ;
 Nor to their idle orbs doth sight appear
 Of sun, or moon, or star, throughout the year,
 Or man, or woman. Yet I argue not Against Heaven's hand or will, nor bate a jot
 Of heart or hope ; but still bear up and steer
 Right onward. What supports me, dost thou ask ?
 The conscience, Friend, to have lost them overplied
 In liberty's defence, my noble task,
 Of which all Europe rings from side to side.

¹ 'Skinner:' a scholar of Milton's, and member of Harrington's political club.—² 'Swede:' Charles Gustavus against Poland, and the French against the Spaniards.

This thought might lead me through the world's vain mask
Content though blind, had I no better guide.

XXIII. ON HIS DECEASED WIFE.¹

METHOUGHT I saw my late espoused saint
Brought to me, like Alcestis,² from the grave,
Whom Jove's great son³ to her glad husband⁴ gave,
Rescued from death by force, though pale and faint.
Mine, as whom wash'd from spot of child-bed taint
Purification in the old Law did save,
And such, as yet once more I trust to have Full sight of her in Heaven without restraint,
Came vested all in white, pure as her mind :
Her face was veil'd ;⁵ yet to my fancied sight
Love, sweetness, goodness, in her person shin'd
So clear, as in no face with more delight.
But O, as to embrace me she inclin'd,
I wak'd ; she fled ; and day brought back my night.

¹ This sonnet was written about the year 1656, on the death of his second wife, Catharine, the daughter of Captain Woodcock of Hackney. She died in child-bed of a daughter, within a year after their marriage. Milton had now been some time totally blind.—² 'Alcestis:' see Euripides.—³ 'Great son:' Hercules.—⁴ 'Glad husband:' Admetus.—⁵ 'Veil'd:' so was Alcestis.

ODES.

ON THE MORNING OF CHRIST'S NATIVITY.

I.

THIS is the month, and this the happy morn,
Wherein the Son of Heaven's Eternal King,
Of wedded Maid and Virgin Mother born,
Our great redemption from above did bring ;
For so the holy sages once did sing,

That he our deadly forfeit should release,
And with his Father work us a perpetual peace.

II.

That glorious form, that light unsufferable,
And that far-beaming blaze of majesty,
Wherewith he wont at Heaven's high council-table
To sit the midst of Trinal Unity,
He laid aside ; and, here with us to be,

Forsook the courts of everlasting day,
And chose with us a darksome house of mortal clay.

III.

Say, heavenly Muse, shall not thy sacred vein
Afford a present to the Infant-God ?
Hast thou no verse, no hymn, or solemn strain,
To welcome him to this his new abode,
Now while the heaven, by the sun's team untrod,

Hath took no print of the approaching light,
And all the spangled host keep watch in squadrons bright ?

IV.

See, how from far, upon the eastern road,
 The star-led wisards haste with odours sweet ;
 O run, prevent them with thy humble ode,
 And lay it lowly at his blessed feet ;
 Have thou the honour first thy Lord to greet,
 And join thy voice unto the Angel quire,
 From out his secret altar touch'd with hallow'd fire.

THE HYMN.

I.

It was the winter wild,
 While the heaven-born child
 All meanly wrapt in the rude manger lies :
 Nature, in awe to him,
 Had doff'd her gaudy trim,
 With her great Master so to sympathize :
 It was no season then for her
 To wanton with the sun, her lusty paramour.

II.

Only with speeches fair
 She woos the gentle air
 To hide her guilty front with innocent snow :
 And on her naked shame,
 Pollute with sinful blame,
 The saintly veil of maiden white to throw ;
 Confounded, that her Maker's eyes
 Should look so near upon her foul deformities.

III.

But he, her fears to cease,
 Sent down the meek-ey'd Peace ;
 She, crown'd with olive green, came softly sliding
 Down through the turning sphere,
 His ready harbinger,

With turtle wing the amorous clouds dividing ;
 And, waving wide her myrtle wand,
 She strikes an universal peace through sea and land.

IV.

No war, or battle's sound,
 Was heard the world around :
 The idle spear and shield were high up hung ;
 The hooked chariot stood
 Unstain'd with hostile blood ;
 The trumpet spake not to the armed throng ;
 And kings sat still with awful eye,
 As if they surely knew their sovran Lord was by.

V.

But peaceful was the night,
 Wherein the Prince of light
 His reign of peace upon the earth began :
 The winds with wonder whist,¹
 Smoothly the waters kist,
 Whispering new joys to the mild ocean,
 Who now hath quite forgot to rave,
 While birds of calm sit brooding on the charmed wave.

VI.

The stars, with deep amaze,
 Stand fix'd in stedfast gaze,
 Bending one way their precious influence ;
 And will not take their flight,
 For all the morning light,
 Or Lucifer that often warn'd them thence ;
 But in their glimmering orbs did glow,
 Until their Lord himself bespake, and bid them go.

VII.

And, though the shady gloom
 Had given day her room,

The sun himself withheld his wonted speed,
And hid his head for shame,
As his inferiour flame

The new enlighten'd world no more should need ;
He saw a greater sun appear
Than his bright throne, or burning axletree, could bear.

VIII.

The shepherds on the lawn,
Or e'er the point of dawn,
Sat simply chatting in a rustick row ;
Full little thought they then,
That the mighty Pan

Was kindly come to live with them below ;
Perhaps their loves, or else their sheep,
Was all that did their silly thoughts so busy keep.

IX.

When such musick sweet
Their hearts and ears did greet
As never was by mortal finger strook ;¹
Divinely-warbled voice
Answering the stringed noise,
As all their souls in blissful rapture took :
The air, such pleasure loth to lose,
With thousand echoes still prolongs each heavenly close.

X.

Nature that heard such sound,
Beneath the hollow round
Of Cynthia's seat, the aery region thrilling,
Now was almost won
To think her part was done,
And that her reign had here its last fulfilling ;
She knew such harmony alone
Could hold all Heaven and Earth in happier union.

XI.

At last surrounds their sight
A globe of circular light,
That with long beams the shamefac'd night array'd ;
The helmed Cherubim,
And sworded Seraphim,
Are seen in glittering ranks with wings display'd,
Harping in loud and solemn quire,
With unexpressive notes, to Heaven's new-born Heir.

XII.

Such musick (as 'tis said)
Before was never made,
But when of old the sons of morning sung,
While the Creator great
His constellations set,
And the well-balanced world on hinges hung ;
And cast the dark foundations deep,
And bid the weltering waves their oozy channel keep.

XIII.

Ring out, ye crystal spheres,
Once bless our human ears,
If ye have power to touch our senses so ;
And let your silver chime
Move in melodious time ;
And let the base of Heaven's deep organ blow ;
And, with your ninefold harmony,
Make up full consort to the angelick symphony.

XIV.

For, if such holy song
Enwrap our fancy long,
Time will run back, and fetch the age of gold ;
And speckled Vanity
Will sicken soon and die,
And leprous Sin will melt from earthly mould ;

And Hell itself will pass away,
And leave her dolorous mansions to the peering day.

XV.

Yea, Truth and Justice then
Will down return to men,
 Orb'd in a rainbow ; and, like glories wearing,
Mercy will sit between,
Thron'd in celestial sheen,
 With radiant feet the tissued clouds down steering ;
And Heaven, as at some festival,
Will open wide the gates of her high palace hall.

XVI.

But wisest Fate says no,
This must not yet be so,
 The Babe yet lies in smiling infancy,
That on the bitter cross
Must redeem our loss ;
 So both himself and us to glorify :
Yet first, to those ychain'd in sleep,
The wakeful trump of doom must thunder through the deep ;

XVII.

With such a horrid clang
As on mount Sinai rang,
 While the red fire and smouldering clouds out brake :
The aged earth aghast,
With terrour of that blast,
 Shall from the surface to the center shake ;
When, at the world's last session,
The dreadful Judge in middle air shall spread his throne.

XVIII.

And then at last our bliss
Full and perfect is,
 But now begins ; for, from this happy day,

The old Dragon, under ground
 In straiter limits bound,
 Not half so far casts his usurped sway;
 And, wroth to see his kingdom fail,
 Swindges the scaly horror of his folded tail.

XIX.

The oracles are dumb,
 No voice or hideous hum
 Runs through the arched roof in words deceiving.
 Apollo from his shrine
 Can no more divine,
 With hollow shriek the steep of Delphos leaving.
 No nightly trance, or breathed spell,
 Inspires the pale-ey'd priest from the prophetick cell.

XX.

The lonely mountains o'er,
 And the resounding shore,
 A voice of weeping heard and loud lament;
 From haunted spring and dale,
 Edg'd with poplar pale,
 The parting Genius is with sighing sent;
 With flower-inwoven tresses torn
 The Nymphs in twilight shade of tangled thickets mourn.

XXI.

In consecrated earth,
 And on the holy hearth,
 The Lars, and Lemures,¹ moan with midnight plaint;
 In urns, and altars round,
 A drear and dying sound
 Affrights the Flamens at their service quaint;
 And the chill marble seems to sweat,
 While each peculiar Power foregoes his wonted seat.

XXII.

Peor and Baälím

Forsake their temples dim,

With that twice-batter'd God of Palestine ;¹

And mooned Ashtaroth,

Heaven's queen and mother both,

Now sits not girt with tapers' holy shine ;

The Libyck Hammon² shrinks his horn,

In vain the Tyrian maids their wounded Thammuz³

XXIII.

And sullen Moloch, fled,

Hath left in shadows dread

His burning idol all of blackest hue ;

In vain with cymbals' ring

They call the grisly king,

In dismal dance about the furnace blue :

The brutish Gods of Nile as fast,

Isis, and Orus, and the dog Anubis, haste.

XXIV.

Nor is Osiris seen

In Memphian grove or green,

Trampling the unshower'd⁴ grass with lowings loud :

Nor can he be at rest

Within his sacred chest ;

Nought but profoundest hell can be his shroud ;

In vain with timbrell'd anthems dark

The sable-stoled sorcerers bear his worshipt ark.

XXV.

He feels from Juda's land

The dreaded Infant's hand,

The rays of Bethlehem blind his dusky eyn ;

¹ 'God of Palestine:' Dagon.—² 'Hammon:' Jupiter-Ammon.—³ 'Thammuz:' see 1st book of 'Paradise Lost.'—⁴ 'Unshower'd:' there being no rain in Egypt.

Nor all the gods beside Longer dare abide,

Not Typhon huge ending in snaky twine :
Our Babe, to show his Godhead true,
Can in his swaddling bands controul the damned crew.

XXVI.

So, when the sun in bed,
Curtain'd with cloudy red,

Pillows his chin upon an orient wave,
The flocking shadows pale
Troop to the infernal jail,
Each fetter'd ghost slips to his several grave ;
And the yellow-skirted Fays
Fly after the night-steeds, leaving their moon-loved maze.

XXVII.

But see, the Virgin blest
Hath laid her Babe to rest ;

Time is, our tedious song should here have ending ;
Heaven's youngest-teemed star
Hath fix'd her polish'd car,

Her sleeping Lord with handmaid lamp attending :
And all about the courtly stable
Bright-harness'd Angels sit in order serviceable.

THE PASSION.¹

I.

EREWHILE of musick, and ethereal mirth,
Wherewith the stage of air and earth did ring,
And joyous news of heavenly Infant's birth,

¹ 'The Passion:' probably a college exercise, written immediately after the former—the one, perhaps, at Christmas, and the other at Easter.

My Muse with Angels did divide to sing ;
But headlong joy is ever on the wing,

In wintery solstice like the shorten'd light,
Soon swallow'd up in dark and long out-living night.

II.

For now to sorrow must I tune my song,
And set my harp to notes of saddest woe,
Which on our dearest Lord did seise ere long,
Dangers, and snares, and wrongs, and worse than so,
Which he for us did freely undergo :

Most perfect Hero, tried in heaviest plight
Of labours huge and hard, too hard for human wight !

III.

He, sovran priest, stooping his regal head,
That dropt with odorous oil down his fair eyes,
Poor fleshy tabernacle entered,
His starry front low-rooft beneath the skies :
O, what a mask was there, what a disguise !

Yet more ; the stroke of death he must abide,
Then lies him meekly down fast by his brethren's side.

IV.

These latest scenes confine my roving verse ;
To this horizon is my Phœbus bound :
His god-like acts, and his temptations fierce,
And former sufferings, other where are found ;
Loud o'er the rest Cremona's¹ trump doth sound ;

Me softer airs befit, and softer strings
Of lute, or viol still, more apt for mournful things.

V.

Befriend me, Night, best patroness of grief ;
Over the pole thy thickest mantle throw,
And work my flatter'd fancy to belief,

That Heaven and Earth are colour'd with my woe ;
 My sorrows are too dark for day to know :
 The leaves should all be black whereon I write,
 And letters, where my tears have wash'd, a wannish white.

VI.

See, see the chariot, and those rushing wheels,
 That whirl'd the Prophet up at Chebar flood,
 My spirit some transporting Cherub feels,
 To bear me where the towers of Salem stood,
 Once glorious towers, now sunk in guiltless blood ;

 There doth my soul in holy vision sit,
 In pensive trance, and anguish, and ecstasick fit.

VII.

Mine eye hath found that sad sepulchral rock
 That was the casket of Heaven's richest store,
 And here though grief my feeble hands up lock,
 Yet on the soften'd quarry would I score
 My plaining verse as lively as before ;

 For sure so well instructed are my tears,
 That they would fitly fall in order'd characters.

VIII.

Or should I thence hurried on viewless wing
 Take up a weeping on the mountains wild,
 The gentle neighbourhood of grove and spring
 Would soon unbosom all their echoes mild ;
 And I (for grief is easily beguil'd)

 Might think the infection of my sorrows loud
 Had got a race of mourners on some pregnant cloud.

This subject the Author finding to be above the years he had, when he wrote it, and nothing satisfied with what was begun, left it unfinished.

UPON THE CIRCUMCISION.

Ye flaming Powers, and winged Warriours bright,
That erst with musick, and triumphant song,
First heard by happy watchful shepherds' ear,
So sweetly sung your joy the clouds along
Through the soft silence of the listening night ;
Now mourn ; and, if sad share with us to bear
Your fiery essence can distil no tear,
Burn in your sighs, and borrow
Seas wept from our deep sorrow ;
He, who with all Heaven's heraldry whilere
Enter'd the world, now bleeds to give us ease ;
Alas, how soon our sin
Sore doth begin
His infancy to seise !
O more exceeding love, or law more just ?
Just law indeed, but more exceeding love !
For we, by rightful doom remediless,
Were lost in death, till he that dwelt above,
High thron'd in secret bliss, for us frail dust
Emptied his glory, even to nakedness ;
And that great covenant which we still transgress
Entirely satisfied ;
And the full wrath beside,
Of vengeful justice bore for our excess ;
And seals obedience first, with wounding smart,
This day ; but O ! ere long,
Huge pangs and strong
Will pierce more near his heart.

ON THE DEATH OF A FAIR INFANT,¹

DYING OF A COUGH.

I.

O FAIREST flower, no sooner blown but blasted,
 Soft silken primrose fading timelessly,
 Summer's chief honour, if thou hadst out-lasting
 Bleak Winter's force that made thy blossom dry ;
 For he, being amorous on that lovely dye
 That did thy cheek envermeil, thought to kiss,
 But kill'd, alas ! and then bewail'd his fatal bliss.

II.

For since grim Aquilo,² his charioteer,
 By boisterous rape the Athenian damsel got,
 He thought it touch'd his deity full near,
 If likewise he some fair one wedded not,
 Thereby to wipe away the infamous blot
 Of long-uncoupled bed and childless eld,
 Which, 'mongst the wanton gods, a foul reproach was held.

III.

So, mounting up in icy-pearled car,
 Through middle empire of the freezing air
 He wander'd long, till thee he spied from far ;
 There ended was his quest, there ceas'd his care :
 Down he descended from his snow-soft chair,
 But, all unawares, with his cold-kind embrace
 Unhous'd thy virgin soul from her fair biding place.

IV.

Yet art thou not inglorious in thy fate ;
 For so Apollo, with unweeting hand,
 Whilom did slay his dearly-loved mate,

¹ 'On the Death of a Fair Infant : ' this was written when the author was seventeen. The child was a daughter of his sister Philipps.—² 'Aquilo,' or Boreas, the north wind, ravished Orithyia; see Ovid, Met. vi.

Young Hyacinth, born on Eurotas' strand,
 Young Hyacinth, the pride of Spartan land ;
 But then transform'd him to a purple flower :
 Alack, that so to change thee Winter had no power !

V.

Yet can I not persuade me thou art dead,
 Or that thy corse corrupts in earth's dark womb,
 Or that thy beauties lie in wormy bed,
 Hid from the world in a low-delved tomb ;
 Could Heaven for pity thee so strictly doom ?

Oh no ! for something in thy face did shine
 Above mortality, that show'd thou wast divine.

VI.

Resolve me then, O Soul most surely blest,
 (If so it be that thou these complaints dost hear ;)
 Tell me, bright Spirit, where'er thou hoverest,
 Whether above that high first-moving sphere,
 Or in the Elysian fields, (if such there were ;)

Oh say me true, if thou art mortal wight,
 And why from us so quickly thou didst take thy flight !

VII.

Wert thou some star which from the ruin'd roof
 Of shak'd Olympus by mischance didst fall ;
 Which careful Jove in Nature's true behoof
 Took up, and in fit place did reinstall ?
 Or did of late Earth's sons¹ besiege the wall
 Of sheeny Heaven, and thou, some goddess, fled,
 Amongst us here below to hide thy nectar'd head ?

VIII.

Or wert thou that just Maid,² who once before
 Forsook the hated earth, O tell me sooth,
 And cam'st again to visit us once more ?

Or wert thou that sweet-smiling youth?¹
 Or that crown'd matron sage white-robed Truth?
 Or any other of that heavenly brood
 Let down in cloudy throne to do the world some good?

IX.

Or wert thou of the golden-winged host,
 Who, having clad thyself in human weed,
 To earth from thy prefixed seat didst post
 And after short abode fly back with speed,
 As if to show what creatures heaven doth breed;
 Thereby to set the hearts of men on fire
 To scorn the sordid world, and unto heaven aspire?

X.

But oh! why didst thou not stay here below
 To bless us with thy heaven-lov'd innocence,
 To slake his wrath whom sin hath made our foe,
 To turn swift-rushing black Perdition hence,
 Or drive away the slaughtering Pestilence,
 To stand 'twixt us and our deserved smart?
 But thou canst best perform that office where thou art.

XI.

Then thou, the Mother of so sweet a Child,
 Her false-imagin'd loss cease to lament,
 And wisely learn to curb thy sorrows wild;
 Think what a present thou to God hast sent,
 And render Him with patience what He lent;
 This if thou do, He will an offspring give,
 That, till the world's last end, shall make thy name to live.

ON TIME.¹

FLY, envious 'Time, till thou run out thy race ;
 Call on the lazy leaden-stepping hours,
 Whose speed is but the heavy plummet's pace ;
 And glut thyself with what thy womb devours,
 Which is no more than what is false and vain,
 And merely mortal dross ;
 So little is our loss,
 So little is thy gain !
 For when as each thing bad thou hast entomb'd,
 And last of all thy greedy self consum'd,
 Then long Eternity shall greet our bliss
 With an individual² kiss ;
 And Joy shall overtake us as a flood,
 When every thing that is sincerely good
 And perfectly divine,
 With 'Truth, and Peace, and Love, shall ever shine
 About the supreme throne
 Of Him, to whose happy-making sight alone
 When once our heavenly-guided soul shall clime ;
 Then, all this earthly grossness quit,
 Attir'd with stars, we shall for ever sit,
 Triumphant over Death, and Chance, and thee, O Time !

¹ 'On Time:' this was meant to be set on a clock-case.—² 'Individual:' inseparable.

AT A SOLEMN MUSICK.

BLEST pair of Syrens, pledges of Heaven's joy,
Sphere-born harmonious sisters, Voice and Verse,
Wed your divine sounds, and mix'd power employ,
Dead things with inbreath'd sense able to pierce ;
And to our high-rai'd phantasy present
That undisturbed song of pure concent,
Aye sung before the sapphire-colour'd throne
To Him that sits thereon,
With saintly shout, and solemn jubilee ;
Where the bright Seraphim, in burning row,
Their loud up-lifted angel-trumpets blow ;
And the Cherubick host, in thousand quires,
Touch their immortal harps of golden wires,
With those just Spirits that wear victorious palms,
Hymns devout and holy psalms
Singing everlastingly :
That we on earth, with undiscording voice,
May rightly answer that melodious noise ;
As once we did, till disproportion'd sin
Jarr'd against Nature's chime, and with harsh din
Broke the fair musick that all creatures made
To their great Lord, whose love their motion sway'd
In perfect diapason, whilst they stood
In first obedience, and their state of good.
O, may we soon again renew that song,
And keep in tune with Heaven, till God ere long
To his celestial consort us unite,
To live with him, and sing in endless morn of light !

AN EPITAPH

ON THE MARCHIONESS OF WINCHESTER.¹

THIS rich marble doth inter
 The honour'd wife of Winchester,
 A Viscount's daughter, an Earl's heir,
 Besides what her virtues fair
 Added to her noble birth,
 More than she could own from earth.
 Summers three times eight save one
 She had told ; alas ! too soon,
 After so short time of breath,
 To house with darkness, and with death.
 Yet had the number of her days
 Been as complete as was her praise,
 Nature and Fate had had no strife
 In giving limit to her life.

Her high birth, and her graces sweet,
 Quickly found a lover meet ;
 The virgin quire for her request
 The god that sits at marriage feast ;
 He at their invoking came,
 But with a scarce well-lighted flame ;
 And in his garland, as he stood,
 Ye might discern a cypress bud.
 Once had the early matrons run
 To greet her of a lovely son,
 And now with second hope she goes,
 And calls Lucina² to her throes :

¹ 'Marchioness of Winchester : ' she was Lady Jane Savage, daughter of Lord Savage, and married to the Marquis of Winchester, on whom Dryden wrote an epitaph. She died in child-birth of a second son. Milton knew her through his acquaintance with the Egerton family. He wrote this at Cambridge.

² 'Lucina : ' goddess of midwives.

But, whether by mischance or blame,
 Atropos¹ for Lucina came ;
 And with remorseless cruelty
 Spoil'd at once both fruit and tree :
 The hapless babe, before his birth,
 Had burial, yet not laid in earth ;
 And the languish'd mother's womb
 Was not long a living tomb.

So have I seen some tender slip,
 Sav'd with care from winter's nip,
 The pride of her carnation train,
 Pluck'd up by some unheedy swain,
 Who only thought to crop the flower
 New shot up from vernal shower ;
 But the fair blossom hangs the head
 Side-ways, as on a dying bed,
 And those pearls of dew, she wears,
 Prove to be presaging tears,
 Which the sad morn had let fall
 On her hastening funeral.

Gentle Lady, may thy grave
 Peace and quiet ever have ;
 After this thy travel sore
 Sweet rest seize thee evermore,
 That, to give the world encrease,
 Shorten'd hast thy own life's lease.
 Here, besides the sorrowing
 That thy noble house doth bring,
 Here be tears of perfect moan
 Wept for thee in Helicon ;
 And some flowers, and some bays,
 For thy herse, to strew the ways,

¹ ' Atropos : ' the Fate who presides over death.

Sent thee from the banks of Came,
 Devoted to thy virtuous name ;
 Whilst thou, bright Saint, high sitt'st in glory.
 Next her, much like to thee in story,
 That fair Syrian shepherdess,¹
 Who, after years of barrenness,
 The highly favour'd Joseph bore
 To him that serv'd for her before,
 And at her next birth, much like thee,
 Through pangs fled to felicity,
 Far within the bosom bright
 Of blazing Majesty and Light :
 There with thee, new welcome Saint,
 Like fortunes may her soul acquaint,
 With thee there clad in radiant sheen,
 No Marchioness, but now a Queen.

SONG ON MAY MORNING.

Now the bright Morning-star, day's harbinger,
 Comes dancing from the east, and leads with her
 The flowery May, who from her green lap throws
 The yellow cowslip and the pale primrose.
 Hail, bounteous May, that dost inspire
 Mirth, and youth, and warm desire ;
 Woods and groves are of thy dressing,
 Hill, and dale, doth boast thy blessing !
 Thus we salute thee with our early song,
 And welcome thee, and wish thee long.

MISCELLANIES.

Anno Ætatis 19, at a VACATION EXERCISE in the COLLEGE, part Latin, part English. The Latin speeches ended, the English thus began.

HAIL, native Language, that by sinews weak
Didst move my first endeavouring tongue to speak,
And mad'st imperfect words with childish trips,
Half unpronounc'd, slide through my infant-lips,
Driving dumb Silence from the portal door,
Where he had mutely sat two years before !
Here I salute thee, and thy pardon ask,
That now I use thee in my latter task :
Small loss it is that thence can come unto thee,
I know my tongue but little grace can do thee :
Thou need'st not be ambitious to be first,
Believe me I have thither pack'd the worst :
And, if it happen as I did forecast,
The daintiest dishes shall be served up last.
I pray thee then deny me not thy aid
For this same small neglect that I have made :
But haste thee straight to do me once a pleasure,
And from thy wardrobe bring thy chiefest treasure,
Not those new-fangled toys,¹ and trimming slight
Which takes our late fantasticks with delight ;

¹ 'New-fangled toys:' he alludes to Lilly's Euphuës and the then fashionable affectation of Euphuism; see Scott's 'Monastery.'

But cull those richest robes, and gay'st attire,
Which deepest spirits and choicest wits desire :
I have some naked thoughts that rove about,
And loudly knock to have their passage out ;
And, weary of their place, do only stay,
Till thou hast deck'd them in thy best array ;
That so they may, without suspect or fears,
Fly swiftly to this fair assembly's ears ;
Yet I had rather, if I were to chuse,
Thy service in some graver subject use,
Such as may make thee search thy coffers round,
Before thou clothe my fancy in fit sound :
Such where the deep transported mind may soar
Above the wheeling poles, and at Heaven's door
Look in, and see each blissful Deity
How he before the thunderous throne doth lie,
Listening to what unshorn Apollo sings
To the touch of golden wires, while Hebe brings
Immortal nectar to her kingly sire :
Then passing through the spheres of watchful fire,
And misty regions of wide air next under,
And hills of snow, and lofts of piled thunder,
May tell at length how green-eyed Neptune raves,
In heaven's defiance mustering all his waves ;
Then sing of secret things that came to pass
When beldam Nature in her cradle was ;
And last of kings, and queens, and heroes old,
Such as the wise Demodocus¹ once told
In solemn songs at king Alcinous' feast,
While sad Ulysses' soul, and all the rest,
Are held, with his melodious harmony,
In willing chains and sweet captivity.

But fie, my wandering Muse, how thou dost stray!
 Expectance calls thee now another way ;
 Thou know'st it must be now thy only bent
 To keep in compass of thy predicament :
 Then quick about thy purpos'd business come,
 That to the next I may resign my room.

Then ENS is represented as Father of the PREDICAMENTS his two Sons, whereof the eldest stood for SUBSTANCE with his Canons ; which ENS, thus speaking, explains.

Good luck befriend thee, Son ; for at thy birth,
 The faery ladies danc'd upon the hearth ;
 Thy drowsy nurse hath sworn she did them spie
 Come tripping to the room where thou didst lie,
 And, sweetly singing round about thy bed,
 Strew all their blessings on thy sleeping head.
 She heard them give thee this, that thou shouldst still
 From eyes of mortals walk invisible :
 Yet there is something that doth force my fear ;
 For once it was my dismal hap to hear
 A Sibyl old, bow-bent with crooked age,
 That far events full wisely could presage,
 And, in Time's long and dark prospective glass,
 Foresaw what future days should bring to pass ;
 " Your son," said she, " (nor can you it prevent)
 Shall subject be to many an Accident.
 O'er all his brethren he shall reign as king,
 Yet every one shall make him underling ;
 And those, that cannot live from him asunder,
 Ungratefully shall strive to keep him under ;
 In worth and excellence he shall out-go them,
 Yet, being above them, he shall be below them ;

From others he shall stand in need of nothing,
 Yet on his brothers shall depend for clothing.
 To find a foe it shall not be his hap,
 And Peace shall lull him in her flowery lap ;
 Yet shall he live in strife, and at his door
 Devouring War shall never cease to roar ;
 Yea, it shall be his natural property
 To harbour those that are at enmity.
 What power, what force, what mighty spell, if not
 Your learned hands, can loose this Gordian knot ?”

The next QUANTITY and QUALITY spake in Prose ; then RELATION was called by his name.

RIVERS, arise ; whether thou be the son
 Of utmost Tweed, or Oose, or gulphy Dun,
 Or Trent, who, like some Earth-born giant, spreads
 His thirty arms along the indented meads ;
 Or sullen Mole,¹ that runneth underneath ;
 Or Severn swift, guilty² of maiden's death ;
 Or rocky Avon, or of sedgy Lee,
 Or coaly Tine, or ancient hallow'd Dee ;³
 Or Humber⁴ loud, that keeps the Scythian's name ;
 Or Medway smooth, or royal-tower'd Thame.

[The rest was Prose.]

¹ 'Mole:' a river in Surrey, which sinks in summer into a subterranean channel. — ² 'Guilty:' the maiden is Sabrina; see 'Comus.' — ³ 'Dee:' the river of the Druids, held sacred. — ⁴ 'Humber' was a Scythian king drowned in the river.

AN EPITAPH¹

ON THE ADMIRABLE DRAMATICK POET W. SHAKSPEARE.

WHAT needs my Shakspeare, for his honour'd bones,
 The labour of an age in piled stones ?
 Or that his hallow'd reliques should be hid
 Under a star-ypointing pyramid ?
 Dear son of memory, great heir of fame,
 What need'st thou such weak witness of thy name ?
 Thou, in our wonder and astonishment,
 Hast built thyself a live-long monument.
 For whilst, to the shame of slow-endeavouring art
 Thy easy numbers flow ; and that each heart
 Hath, from the leaves of thy unvalued² book,
 Those Delphick lines with deep impression took ;
 Then thou, our fancy of itself bereaving,
 Dost make us marble with too much conceiving ;
 And, so sepulcher'd, in such pomp dost lie,
 That kings, for such a tomb, would wish to die.

ON THE UNIVERSITY CARRIER,

WHO SICKENED IN THE TIME OF HIS VACANCY ; BEING FORBID TO GO TO LONDON, BY REASON OF THE PLAGUE.

HERE lies old Hobson ;³ Death hath broke his girt,
 And here, alas ! hath laid him in the dirt ;
 Or else, the ways being foul, twenty to one,
 He's here stuck in a slough, and overthrown.

¹ 'An Epitaph : ' the first of Milton's pieces published.—² 'Unvalued : ' invaluable.—³ 'Hobson : ' he put up at the Bull in Bishopsgate Street. He died in 1630.

'Twas such a shifter, that, if truth were known,
 Death was half glad when he had got him down ;
 For he had, any time this ten years full,
 Dodg'd with him betwixt Cambridge and The Bull.
 And surely Death could never have prevail'd,
 Had not his weekly course of carriage fail'd ;
 But lately finding him so long at home,
 And thinking now his journey's end was come,
 And that he had ta'en up his latest inn,
 In the kind office of a chamberlin¹
 Show'd him his room where he must lodge that night,
 Pull'd off his boots, and took away the light :
 If any ask for him, it shall be said,
 "Hobson has supt, and's newly gone to bed."

ANOTHER ON THE SAME.

HERE lieth one, who did most truly prove
 That he could never die while he could move ;
 So hung his destiny, never to rot
 While he might still jog on and keep his trot,
 Made of sphere-metal, never to decay
 Until his revolution was at stay.
 Time numbers motion, yet (without a crime
 'Gainst old truth) motion number'd out his time :
 And, like an engine, moved with wheel and weight,
 His principles being ceas'd, he ended straight.
 Rest, that gives all men life, gave him his death,
 And too much breathing put him out of breath ;
 Nor were it contradiction to affirm,
 Too long vacation hasten'd on his term.

Merely to drive the time away he sicken'd,
Fainted, and died, nor would with ale be quicken'd ;
"Nay," quoth he, on his swooning bed out-stretch'd,
"If I mayn't carry, sure I'll ne'er be fetch'd,
But vow, though the cross doctors all stood hearers,
For one carrier put down to make six bearers."
Ease was his chief disease ; and, to judge right,
He died for heaviness that his cart went light :
His leisure told him that his time was come,
And lack of load made his life burdensome,
That even to his last breath (there be that say't),
As he were press'd to death, he cried, More weight :
But, had his doings lasted as they were,
He had been an immortal carrier.
Obedient to the moon he spent his date
In course reciprocal, and had his fate
Link'd to the mutual flowing of the seas,
Yet (strange to think) his wain was his encrease :
His letters are deliver'd all and gone,
Only remains this superscription.

ON THE NEW FORCERS OF CONSCIENCE

UNDER THE LONG PARLIAMENT.

BECAUSE you have thrown off your Prelate Lord,
 And with stiff vows renounc'd his Liturgy,
 To seize the widow'd whore Plurality
 From them whose sin ye envied, not abhorr'd ;
 Dare ye for this adjure the civil sword
 To force our consciences that Christ set free,
 And ride us with a classick¹ hierarchy
 Taught ye by mere A. S.² and Rotherford ?³
 Men, whose life, learning, faith, and pure intent,
 Would have been held in high esteem with Paul,
 Must now be named and printed Hereticks
 By shallow Edwards⁴ and Scotch what d'ye call :⁵
 But we do hope to find out all your tricks,
 Your plots and packing worse than those of Trent,
 That so the Parliament
 May, with their wholesome and preventive shears,
 Clip your phylacteries, though bauk⁶ your ears,
 And succour our just fears,
 When they shall read this clearly in your charge,
 New Presbyter is but old Priest writ large.

¹ 'Classick:' referring to the classes, including the parochial presbyteries into which England was divided.—² 'A. S.:' Adam Stenart, a divine of the Church of Scotland, and the author of several polemical tracts, some portions of which commence with A. S. only prefixed.—³ 'Samuel Rotherford,' or Rutherford, one of the chief commissioners of the Church of Scotland, and professor of divinity in the University of St Andrews. He was a great genius, but disliked by Milton for his aversion to Independency. Who has not heard of his 'Letters'? ⁴ 'Thomas Edwards,' minister: a pamphleteering opponent of Milton, whose plan of Independency he assailed.—⁵ 'What d'ye call:' perhaps Henderson, or Gillespie, Scotch divines.—⁶ 'Bauk:' spare.

TRANSLATIONS.

THE FIFTH ODE OF HORACE, LIB. I.

WHAT slender youth, bedew'd with liquid odours,
Courts thee on roses in some pleasant cave,
 Pyrrha? For whom bind'st thou
 In wreaths thy golden hair,
Plain in thy neatness? O, how oft shall he
On faith and changed gods complain, and seas
 Rough with black winds, and storms
 Unwonted shall admire!
Who now enjoys thee credulous, all gold,
Who always vacant, always amiable
 Hopes thee, of flattering gales
 Unmindful. Hapless they,
To whom thou untried seem'st fair! Me, in my vow'd
Picture, the sacred wall declares to have hung
 My dank and dropping weeds
 To the stern God of sea.

FROM GEOFFREY OF MONMOUTH.

BRUTUS thus addresses DIANA in the country of LEOGECIA.

GODDESS of shades, and huntress, who at will
Walk'st on the rowling spheres, and through the deep;

On thy third reign, the earth, look now, and tell
 What land, what seat of rest, thou bidst me seek,
 What certain seat, where I may worship thee
 For aye, with temples vow'd and virgin quires.

To whom, sleeping before the Altar, DIANA answers in a Vision the same Night.

BRUTUS, far to the west, in the ocean wide,
 Beyond the realm of Gaul, a land there lies,
 Sea-girt it lies, where giants dwelt of old ;
 Now void, it fits thy people : Thither bend
 Thy course ; there shalt thou find a lasting seat ;
 There to thy sons another Troy shall rise,
 And kings be born of thee, whose dreadful might
 Shall awe the world, and conquer nations bold.

FROM DANTE.

AH, Constantine, of how much ill was cause,
 Not thy conversion, but those rich domains
 That the first wealthy pope receiv'd of thee !

FROM DANTE.

FOUNDED in chaste and humble poverty,
 'Gainst them that rais'd thee dost thou lift thy horn,
 Impudent whore ? where hast thou plac'd thy hope ?
 In thy adulterers, or thy ill-got wealth ?
 Another Constantine comes not in haste.

FROM ARIOSTO.

THEN pass'd he to a flowery mountain green,
 Which once smelt sweet, now stinks as odiously :
 This was the gift, if you the truth will have,
 That Constantine to good Sylvester gave.

FROM HORACE.

WHOM do we count a good man ? Whom but he
Who keeps the laws and statutes of the senate,
Who judges in great suits and controversies,
Whose witness and opinion wins the cause ?
But his own house, and the whole neighbourhood,
Sees his foul inside through his whited skin.

FROM EURIPIDES.

THIS is true liberty, when freeborn men,
Having to advise the publick, may speak free ;
Which he who can, and will, deserves high praise ;
Who neither can, nor will, may hold his peace ;
What can be juster in a state than this ?

FROM HORACE.

——— LAUGHING, to teach the truth,
What hinders ? As some teachers give to boys
Junkets and knacks, that they may learn apace.

FROM HORACE.

——— JOKING decides great things,
Stronger and better oft than earnest can.

FROM SOPHOCLES.

'Tis you that say it, not I. You do the deeds,
And your ungodly deeds find me the words.

FROM SENECA.

——— THERE can be slain
No sacrifice to God more acceptable,
Than an unjust and wicked king.

PSALMS.

PSALM I. Done into Verse, 1653.

BLESS'D is the man who hath not walk'd astray
In counsel of the wicked, and i' the way
Of sinners hath not stood, and in the seat
Of scorers hath not sat. But in the great
Jehovah's law is ever his delight,
And in his law he studies day and night.
He shall be as a tree which planted grows
By watery streams, and in his season knows
To yield his fruit, and his leaf shall not fall,
And what he takes in hand shall prosper all.
Not so the wicked, but as chaff which fann'd
The wind drives, so the wicked shall not stand
In judgement, or abide their trial then,
Nor sinners in the assembly of just men.
For the Lord knows the upright way of the just,
And the way of bad men to ruin must.

PSALM II. Done Aug. 8, 1653. TERZETTI.

WHY do the Gentiles tumult, and the Nations
Muse a vain thing, the kings of the earth upstand
With power, and princes in their congregations
Lay deep their plots together through each land
Against the Lord and his Messiah dear?
Let us break off, say they, by strength of hand

Their bonds, and cast from us, no more to wear,
 Their twisted cords: He, who in heaven doth dwell,
 Shall laugh; the Lord shall scoff them; then, severe,
 Speak to them in his wrath, and in his fell
 And fierce ire trouble them; but I, saith he,
 Anointed have my King (though ye rebel)
 On Sion my holy hill. A firm decree
 I will declare: The Lord to me hath said,
 Thou art my Son, I have begotten thee
 This day; ask of me, and the grant is made;
 As thy possession I on thee bestow
 The Heathen; and, as thy conquest to be sway'd,
 Earth's utmost bounds: them shalt thou bring full low
 With iron scepter bruis'd, and them disperse
 Like to a potter's vessel shiver'd so.
 And now be wise at length, ye kings averse;
 Be taught, ye Judges of the earth; with fear
 Jehovah serve, and let your joy converse
 With trembling; kiss the Son, lest he appear
 In anger, and ye perish in the way,
 If once his wrath take fire, like fuel sere.
 Happy all those who have in him their stay!

PSALM III. Aug. 9, 1653.

WHEN HE FLED FROM ABSALOM.

LORD, how many are my foes!
 How many those,
 That in arms against me rise!
 Many are they,
 That of my life distrustfully thus say;
 No help for him in God there lies.

But thou, Lord, art my shield, my glory,
 Thee, through my story,
 The exalter of my head I count :
 Aloud I cried
 Unto Jehovah, he full soon replied,
 And heard me from his holy mount.

I lay and slept ; I wak'd again ;
 For my sustain
 Was the Lord. Of many millions
 The populous rout
 I fear not, though, encamping round about,
 They pitch against me their pavilions.

Rise, Lord ; save me, my God ; for thou
 Hast smote ere now
 On the cheek-bone all my foes,
 Of men abhorr'd
 Hast broke the teeth. This help was from the Lord ;
 Thy blessing on thy people flows.

PSALM IV. Aug. 10, 1653.

ANSWER me when I call,
 God of my righteousness ;
 In straits, and in distress,
 Thou didst me disenthral
 And set at large ; now spare,
 Now pity me, and hear my earnest prayer.
 Great ones, how long will ye
 My glory have in scorn ?

How long be thus forborn

Still to love vanity ?

To love, to seek, to prize,

Things false and vain, and nothing else but lies ?

Yet know the Lord hath chose,

Chose to himself apart,

The good and meek of heart ;

(For whom to choose He knows)

Jehovah from on high

Will hear my voice, what time to him I cry.

Be aw'd, and do not sin ;

Speak to your hearts alone,

Upon your beds, each one,

And be at peace within.

Offer the offerings just

Of righteousness, and in Jehovah trust.

Many there be that say,

Who yet will show us good ?

Talking like this world's brood ;

But, Lord, thus let me pray ;

On us lift up the light,

Lift up the favour of thy countenance bright.

Into my heart more joy

And gladness thou hast put,

Than when a year of glut

Their stores doth over-cloy,

And from their plenteous grounds

With vast encrease their corn and wine abounds.

In peace at once will I

Both lay me down and sleep ;

For thou alone dost keep

Me safe where'er I lie.

As in a rocky cell

Thou, Lord, alone, in safety mak'st me dwell.

PSALM V. Aug. 12, 1653.

JEHOVAH, to my words give ear,
My meditation weigh ;
The voice of my complaining hear,
My King and God ; for unto thee I pray.
Jehovah, thou my early voice
Shalt in the morning hear ;
I' the morning I to thee with choice,
Will rank my prayers, and watch till thou appear
For thou art not a God that takes
In wickedness delight ;
Evil with thee no biding makes ;
Fools or mad men stand not within thy sight.
All workers of iniquity
Thou hat'st ; and them unblest
Thou wilt destroy that speak a lie ;
The bloody and guileful man God doth detest.
But I will, in thy mercies dear,
Thy numerous mercies, go
Into thy house ; I, in thy fear,
Will towards thy holy temple worship low.
Lord, lead me in thy righteousness,
Lead me, because of those
That do observe if I transgress ;
Set thy ways right before, where my step goes.
For, in his faltering mouth unstable,
No word is firm or sooth ;
Their inside, troubles miserable ;
An open grave their throat, their tongue they smooth.
God, find them guilty, let them fall
By their own counsels quell'd ;
Push them in their rebellions all
Still on ; for against thee they have rebell'd.

Then all, who trust in thee, shall bring
Their joy ; while thou from blame
Defend'st them, they shall ever sing
And shall triumph in thee, who love thy Name.
For thou, Jehovah, wilt be found
To bless the just man still ;
As with a shield, thou wilt surround
Him with thy lasting favour and good will.

PSALM VI. Aug. 13, 1653.

LORD, in thine anger do not reprehend me,
Nor in thy hot displeasure me correct ;
Pity me, Lord, for I am much deject,
And very weak and faint ; heal and amend me :
For all my bones, that even with anguish ake,
Are troubled, yea my soul is troubled sore ;
And thou, O Lord, how long ? Turn, Lord ; restore
My soul ; O save me for thy goodness' sake :
For in death no remembrance is of thee ;
Who in the grave can celebrate thy praise ?
Wearied I am with sighing out my days ;
Nightly my couch I make a kind of sea ;
My bed I water with my tears ; mine eye
Through grief consumes, is waxen old and dark
I' the midst of all mine enemies that mark.
Depart, all ye that work iniquity,
Depart from me ; for the voice of my weeping
The Lord hath heard ; the Lord hath heard my pray'r ;
My supplication with acceptance fair
The Lord will own, and have me in his keeping.

Mine enemies shall all be blank, and dash'd
With much confusion ; then, grown red with shame,
They shall return in haste the way they came,
And in a moment shall be quite abash'd.

PSALM VII. Aug. 14, 1653.

UPON THE WORDS OF CHUSH¹ THE BENJAMITE
AGAINST HIM.

LORD, my God, to thee I fly ;
Save me and secure me under
Thy protection, while I cry ;
Lest as a lion (and no wonder),
He haste to tear my soul asunder,
Tearing, and no rescue nigh.

Lord, my God, if I have thought
Or done this ; if wickedness
Be in my hands ; if I have wrought
Ill to him that meant me peace ;
Or to him have render'd less,
And not freed my foe for nought ;

Let the enemy pursue my soul,
And overtake it ; let him tread
My life down to the earth, and roll
In the dust my glory dead,
In the dust ; and there, out-spread,
Lodge it with dishonour foul.

Rise, Jehovah, in thine ire,
Rouse thyself amidst the rage
Of my foes that urge like fire ;
And wake for me, their fury assuage ;
Judgement here thou didst engage
And command, which I desire.

So the assemblies of each nation
Will surround thee, seeking right ;
Thence to thy glorious habitation
Return on high, and in their sight.
Jehovah judgeth most upright
All people from the world's foundation.

Judge me, Lord ; be judge in this
According to my righteousness,
And the innocence which is
Upon me ; cause at length to cease
Of evil men the wickedness,
And their power that do amiss.

But the just establish fast,
Since thou art the just God that tries
Hearts and reins. On God is cast
My defence, and in him lies,
In him who, both just and wise,
Saves the upright of heart at last.

God is a just judge and severe,
And God is every day offended ;
If the unjust will not forbear,
His sword he whets, his bow hath bended
Already, and for him intended
The tools of death, that waits him near.

(His arrows purposely made he
 For them that persecute.) Behold,
 He travels big with vanity ;
 Trouble he hath conceiv'd of old,
 As in a womb ; and from that mould
 Hath at length brought forth a lie.

He digg'd a pit, and delv'd it deep,
 And fell into the pit he made ;
 His mischief, that due course doth keep,
 Turns on his head ; and his ill trade
 Of violence will, undelay'd,
 Fall on his crown with ruin steep.

Then will I Jehovah's praise
 According to his justice raise,
 And sing the Name and Deity
 Of Jehovah the Most High.

PSALM VIII. Aug. 14, 1653.

O JEHOVAH our Lord, how wonderful great
 And glorious is thy Name through all the earth !
 So as above the heavens thy praise to set
 Out of the tender mouths of latest birth.

Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings thou
 Hast founded strength, because of all thy foes,
 To stint the enemy, and slack the avenger's brow,
 That bends his rage thy Providence to oppose.

When I behold thy heavens, thy fingers' art,
 The moon, and stars, which thou so bright hast set
 In the pure firmament ; then saith my heart,
 O, what is man that thou remember'st yet,

And think'st upon him ? or of man begot,
 That him thou visit'st, and of him art found ?
 Scarce to be less than gods, thou mad'st his lot,
 With honour and with state thou hast him crown'd.

O'er the works of thy hand thou mad'st him Lord,
 Thou hast put all under his lordly feet ;
 All flocks, and herds, by thy commanding word,
 All beasts that in the field or forest meet,

Fowl of the heavens, and fish that through the wet
 Sea-paths in shoals do slide, and know no dearth.
 O Jehovah our Lord, how wonderful great
 And glorious is thy Name through all the earth !

PSALM LXXX.

1 THOU Shepherd, that dost Israel keep,
 Give ear in time of need ;
 Who ledest like a flock of sheep
Thy loved Joseph's seed ;

That sitt'st between the Cherubs bright,
Between their wings out-spread;
Shine forth, and from thy cloud give light,
And on our foes thy dread.

2 In Ephraim's view and Benjamin's,
And in Mannasse's sight,
Awake thy strength, come, and be seen
To save us by thy might.

3 Turn us again, thy grace divine
To us, O God, vouchsafe ;
Cause thou thy face on us to shine,
And then we shall be safe.

4 Lord God of Hosts, how long wilt thou,
How long wilt thou declare
Thy smoking wrath, and angry brow
Against thy people's prayer !

5 Thou feed'st them with the bread of tears :
Their bread with tears they eat ;
And mak'st them largely drink the tears
Wherewith their cheeks are wet.

6 A strife thou mak'st us and a prey
To every neighbour foe ;
Among themselves they laugh, they play,
And flouts at us they throw.

7 Return us, and thy grace divine,
O God of Hosts, vouchsafe ;
Cause thou thy face on us to shine,
And then we shall be safe.

- 8 A vine from Egypt thou hast brought,
 Thy free love made it thine,
And drov'st out nations, proud and haut,
 To plant this lovely vine.
- 9 Thou didst prepare for it a place,
 And root it deep and fast,
That it began to grow apace,
 And fill'd the land at last.
- 10 With her green shade that cover'd all,
 The hills were over-spread ;
Her boughs as high as cedars tall
 Advanc'd their lofty head.
- 11 Her branches on the western side
 Down to the sea she sent,
And upward to that river wide
 Her other branches went.
- 12 Why hast thou laid her hedges low,
 And broken down her fence,
That all may pluck her, as they go,
 With rudest violence ?
- 13 The tusked boar out of the wood
 Up turns it by the roots ;
Wild beasts there brouze, and make their food
 Her grapes and tender shoots.
- 14 Return now, God of Hosts, look down
 From Heaven, thy seat divine ;
Behold us, but without a frown,
 And visit this thy vine.

- 15 Visit this vine, which thy right hand
Hath set, and planted long,
And the young branch that for thyself
Thou hast made firm and strong.
- 16 But now it is consum'd with fire,
And cut with axes down ;
They perish at that dreadful ire,
At thy rebuke and frown.
- 17 Upon the man of thy right hand
Let thy good hand be laid ;
Upon the son of man, whom thou
Strong for thyself hast made.
- 18 So shall we not go back from thee
To ways of sin and shame ;
Quicken us thou ; then gladly we Shall call upon thy Name.
- 19 Return us, and thy grace divine,
Lord God of Hosts, vouchsafe ;
Cause thou thy face on us to shine,
And then we shall be safe.

PSALM LXXXI.

- 1 To God our strength sing loud, and clear,
Sing loud to God our King ;
To Jacob's God, that all may hear,
Loud acclamations ring.

- 2 Prepare a hymn, prepare a song,
The timbrel hither bring ;
The cheerful psaltery bring along,
And harp with pleasant string.
- 3 Blow, as is wont, in the new moon
With trumpets' lofty sound,
The appointed time, the day whereon
Our solemn feast comes round.
- 4 This was a statute given of old
For Israel to observe ;
A law of Jacob's God, to hold,
From whence they might not swerve.
- 5 This he a testimony ordain'd
In Joseph, not to change,
When as he pass'd through Egypt land ;
The tongue I heard was strange.
- 6 From burden, and from slavish toil,
I set his shoulder free :
His hands from pots, and miry soil,
Deliver'd were by me.
- 7 When trouble did thee sore assail,
On me then didst thou call ;
And I to free thee did not fail,
And led thee out of thrall.
- I answer'd thee in thunder deep,
With clouds encompass'd round ;
I tried thee at the water steep
Of Meriba renoun'd.

- 8 Hear, O my people, hearken well ;
I testify to thee,
Thou ancient stock of Israel,
If thou wilt list to me :
- 9 Throughout the land of thy abode
No alien God shall be,
Nor shalt thou to a foreign God
In honour bend thy knee.
- 10 I am the Lord thy God, which brought
Thee out of Egypt land ;
Ask large enough, and I, besought,
Will grant thy full demand.
- 11 And yet my people would not hear,
Nor hearken to my voice ;
And Israel, whom I lov'd so dear,
Mislik'd me for his choice.
- 12 Then did I leave them to their will,
And to their wandering mind ;
Their own conceits they follow'd still,
Their own devices blind.
- 13 O, that my people would be wise,
To serve me all their days !
And O, that Israel would advise
To walk my righteous ways !
- 14 Then would I soon bring down their foes,
That now so proudly rise ;
And turn my hand against all those,
That are their enemies.

- 15 Who hate the Lord should then be fain
 To bow to him and bend ;
But they, his people, should remain,
 Their time should have no end.
- 16 And he would feed them from the shock
 With flower of finest wheat,
And satisfy them from the rock
 With honey for their meat.

PSALM LXXXII.

- 1 God in the great assembly stands
 Of kings and lordly states ;
Among the gods, on both his hands,
 He judges and debates.
- 2 How long will ye pervert the right
 With judgement false and wrong,
Favouring the wicked by your might,
 Who thence grow bold and strong ?
- 3 Regard the weak and fatherless,
 Despatch the poor man's cause ;
And raise the man in deep distress
 By just and equal laws.
- 4 Defend the poor and desolate,
 And rescue from the hands
Of wicked men the low estate
 Of him that help demands.

- 5 They know not, nor will understand,
In darkness they walk on ;
The earth's foundations all are mov'd,
And out of order gone.
- 6 I said that ye were gods, yea all
The sons of God Most High ;
7 But ye shall die like men, and fall
As other princes die.
- 8 Rise, God ; judge thou the earth in might,
This wicked earth redress ;
For Thou art He who shall by right
The nations all possess.

PSALM LXXXIII.

- 1 BE not thou silent now at length,
O God, hold not thy peace ;
Sit thou not still, O God of strength,
We cry, and do not cease.
- 2 For lo, thy furious foes now swell,
And storm outrageously ;
And they that hate thee, proud and fell,
Exalt their heads full high.
- 3 Against thy people they contrive
Their plots and counsels deep ;
Them to ensnare they chiefly strive,
Whom thou dost hide and keep.

- 4 Come, let us cut them off, say they,
Till they no nation be ;
That Israel's name for ever may
Be lost in memory.
- 5 For they consult with all their might,
And all, as one in mind,
Themselves against thee they unite,
And in firm union bind.
- 6 The tents of Edom, and the brood
Of scornful Ishmael,
Moab, with them of Hagar's blood,
That in the desert dwell ;
- 7 Gebal and Ammon there conspire,
And hateful Amalec,
The Philistines, and they of Tyre,
Whose bounds the sea doth check.
- 8 With them great Ashur also bands,
And doth confirm the knot :
All these have lent their armed hands
To aid the sons of Lot.
- 9 Do to them as to Midian bold,
That wasted all the coast ;
To Sisera ; and, as is told,
Thou didst to Jabin's host,
- When at the brook of Kishon old,*
They were repuls'd and slain,
- 10 At Endor quite cut off, and roll'd
As dung upon the plain.

- 11 As Zeb and Oreb evil sped,
So let their princes speed ;
As Zeba and Zalmunna bled,
So let their princes bleed.
- 12 For they amidst their pride have said,
By right now shall we seise
God's houses, and will now invade
Their stately palaces.
- 13 My God, oh make them as a wheel,
No quiet let them find ;
Giddy and restless let them reel
Like stubble from the wind.
- 14 As when an aged wood takes fire
Which on a sudden strays,
The greedy flame runs higher and higher
Till all the mountains blaze ;
- 15 So with thy whirlwind them pursue,
And with thy tempest chase ;
- 16 And till they yield thee honour due,
Lord, fill with shame their face.
- 17 Asham'd, and troubled, let them be,
Troubled, and sham'd for ever ;
Ever confounded, and so die
With shame, and 'scape it never.
- 18 Then shall they know, that Thou, whose Name
'Jehovah is alone,
Art the Most High, and Thou the same
O'er all the earth art One.

PSALM LXXXIV.

- 1 How lovely are thy dwellings fair !
O Lord of Hosts, how dear
The pleasant tabernacles are,
Where thou dost dwell so near !
- 2 My soul doth long and almost die
Thy courts, O Lord, to see ;
My heart and flesh aloud do cry,
O living God, for thee.
- 3 There even the sparrow, freed from wrong,
Hath found a house of rest ;
The swallow there, to lay her young,
Hath built her brooding nest ;

Even by thy altars, Lord of Hosts,
They find their safe abode ;
And home they fly from round the coasts
Toward thee, my King, my God.
- 4 Happy, who in thy house reside,
Where thee they ever praise !
- 5 Happy, whose strength in thee doth bide,
And in their hearts thy ways !
- 6 They pass through Baca's thirsty vale,
That dry and barren ground ;
As through a fruitful watery dale,
Where springs and showers abound.

- 7 They journey on from strength to strength
 With joy and gladsome cheer,
 Till all before our God at length
 In Sion do appear.
- 8 Lord God of Hosts, hear now my prayer,
 O Jacob's God give ear ;
- 9 Thou God, our shield, look on the face
 Of thy anointed dear.
- 10 For one day in thy courts to be
 Is better, and more blest,
 Than in the joys of vanity
 A thousand days at best.
- I, in the temple of my God,
 Had rather keep a door,
 Than dwell in tents, and rich abode,
 With sin for evermore.
- 11 For God the Lord, both sun and shield,
 Gives grace and glory bright ;
 No good from them shall be withheld
 Whose ways are just and right.
- 12 Lord God of Hosts, that reign'st on high ;
 That man is truly blest,
 Who only on thee doth rely,
 And in thee only rest.

PSALM LXXXV.

- 1 THY land to favour graciously
Thou hast not, Lord, been slack ;
Thou hast from hard captivity
Returned Jacob back.
- 2 The iniquity thou didst forgive
That wrought thy people woe ;
And all their sin, that did thee grieve,
Hast hid where none shall know.
- 3 Thine anger all thou hadst remov'd,
And calmly didst return
From thy fierce wrath which we had prov'd
Far worse than fire to burn.
- 4 God of our saving health and peace,
Turn us, and us restore ;
Thine indignation cause to cease
Towards us, and chide no more.
- 5 Wilt thou be angry without end,
For ever angry thus ?
Wilt thou thy frowning ire extend
From age to age on us ?
- 6 Wilt thou not turn and hear our voice,
And us again revive,
That so thy people may rejoice
By thee preserv'd alive ?

- 7 Cause us to see thy goodness, Lord,
To us thy mercy shew ;
Thy saving health to us afford,
And life in us renew.
- 8 And now, what God the Lord will speak
I will go straight and hear,
For to his people he speaks peace,
And to his saints full dear,
- To his dear saints he will speak peace ;
But let them never more
Return to folly, but surcease
To trespass as before.
- 9 Surely, to such as do him fear
Salvation is at hand ;
And glory shall ere long appear
To dwell within our land.
- 10 Mercy and Truth, that long were miss'd,
Now joyfully are met ;
Sweet Peace and Righteousness have kiss'd,
And hand in hand are set.
- 11 Truth from the earth, like to a flower,
Shall bud and blossom then ;
And Justice, from her heavenly bower,
Look down on mortal men.
- 12 The Lord will also then bestow
Whatever thing is good ;
Our land shall forth in plenty throw
Her fruits to be our food.

- 13 Before him Righteousness shall go,
 His royal harbinger :
Then will he come, and not be slow,
 His footsteps cannot err.

PSALM LXXXVI.

- 1 THY gracious ear, O Lord, incline,
 O hear me, I thee pray ;
For I am poor, and almost pine
 With need, and sad decay.
- 2 Preserve my soul ; for I have trod
 Thy ways, and love the just ;
Save thou thy servant, O my God,
 Who still in thee doth trust.
- 3 Pity me, Lord, for daily thee
4 I call ; O make rejoice
 Thy servant's soul ; for, Lord, to thee
 I lift my soul and voice.
- 5 For thou art good, thou, Lord, art prone
 To pardon, thou to all
Art full of mercy, thou alone
 To them that on thee call.
- 6 Unto my supplication, Lord,
 Give ear, and to the cry
Of my incessant prayers afford
 Thy hearing graciously.

- 7 I, in the day of my distress,
Will call on thee for aid ;
For thou wilt grant me free access,
And answer what I pray'd.
- 8 Like thee among the Gods is none,
O Lord ; nor any works
Of all that other Gods have done
Like to thy glorious works.
- 9 The Nations all whom thou hast made
Shall come, and all shall frame
To bow them low before thee, Lord,
And glorify thy Name.
- 10 For great thou art, and wonders great
By thy strong hand are done :
Thou, in thy everlasting seat,
Remainest God alone.
- 11 Teach me, O Lord, thy way most right ;
I in thy truth will bide ;
To fear thy Name my heart unite,
So shall it never slide.
- 12 Thee will I praise, O Lord my God,
Thee honour and adore
With my whole heart, and blaze abroad
Thy Name for evermore.
- 13 For great thy mercy is toward me,
And thou hast freed my soul,
Even from the lowest hell set free,
From deepest darkness foul.

- 14 O God, the proud against me rise,
And violent men are met
To seek my life, and in their eyes
No fear of thee have set.
- 15 But thou, Lord, art the God most mild,
Readiest thy grace to shew,
Slow to be angry, and art styl'd
Most merciful, most true.
- 16 O, turn to me thy face at length,
And me have mercy on ;
Unto thy servant give thy strength,
And save thy handmaid's son.
- 17 Some sign of good to me afford,
And let my foes then see,
And be asham'd ; because thou, Lord,
Dost help and comfort me.

PSALM LXXXVII.

- 1 AMONG the holy mountains high
Is his foundation fast ;
There seated in his sanctuary,
His temple there is plac'd.
- 2 Sion's fair gates the Lord loves more
Than all the dwellings fair
Of Jacob's land, though there be store,
And all within his care.

- 3 City of God, most glorious things
Of thee abroad are spoke ;
4 I mention Egypt, where proud kings
Did our forefathers yoke.

I mention Babel to my friends,
Philistia full of scorn ;
And Tyre with Ethiop's utmost ends,
Lo this man there was born :

- 5 But twice that praise shall in our ear
Be said of Sion last ;
This and this man was born in her ;
High God shall fix her fast.

- 6 The Lord shall write it in a scroll
That ne'er shall be out-worn,
When he the nations doth inroll,
That this man there was born.

- 7 Both they who sing, and they who dance,
With sacred songs are there ;
In thee fresh brooks and soft streams glance,
And all my fountains clear.

PSALM LXXXVIII.

- 1 LORD God, that dost me save and keep,
All day to thee I cry ;
And all night long before thee weep,
Before thee prostrate lie.

- 2 Into thy presence let my prayer
 With sighs devout ascend ;
And to my cries, that ceaseless are,
 Thine ear with favour bend.
- 3 For, cloy'd with woes and trouble store,
 Surcharg'd my soul doth lie ;
My life, at Death's uncheerful door,
 Unto the grave draws nigh.
- 4 Reckon'd I am with them that pass
 Down to the dismal pit ;
I am a man, but weak, alas !
 And for that name unfit.
- 5 From life discharg'd and parted quite
 Among the dead to sleep ;
And like the slain in bloody fight,
 That in the grave lie deep,
- Whom thou rememberest no more,
 Dost never more regard,
Them, from thy hand deliver'd o'er,
 Death's hideous house hath barr'd.
- 6 Thou in the lowest pit profound
 Hast set me all forlorn,
Where thickest darkness hovers round,
 In horrid deeps to mourn.
- 7 Thy wrath, from which no shelter saves,
 Full sore doth press on me ;
Thou break'st upon me all thy waves,
 And all thy waves break me.

8 Thou dost my friends from me estrange,
And mak'st me odious,
Me to them odious, for they change,
And I here pent up thus.

9 Through sorrow, and affliction great,
Mine eye grows dim and dead ;
Lord, all the day I thee entreat,
My hands to thee I spread.

10 Wilt thou do wonders on the dead ?
Shall the deceas'd arise,
And praise thee from their loathsome bed
With pale and hollow eyes ?

11 Shall they thy loving-kindness tell,
On whom the grave hath hold ?
Or they, who in perdition dwell,
Thy faithfulness unfold ?

12 In darkness can thy mighty hand
Or wonderous acts be known ?
Thy justice in the gloomy land
Of dark oblivion ?

13 But I to thee, O Lord, do cry,
Ere yet my life be spent ;
And up to thee my prayer doth hie,
Each morn, and thee prevent.

14 Why wilt thou, Lord, my soul forsake,
And hide thy face from me,
15 That am already bruis'd, and shake
With terrour sent from thee ?

Bruis'd, and afflicted, and so low
 As ready to expire ;
 While I thy terrours undergo,
 Astonish'd with thine ire.

16 Thy fierce wrath over me doth flow ;
 Thy threatenings cut me through :
 17 All day they round about me go,
 Like waves they me pursue.

18 Lover and friend thou hast remov'd,
 And sever'd from me far :
 They fly me now whom I have lov'd,
 And as in darkness are.

A PARAPHRASE ON PSALM CXIV.

This and the following Psalm were done by the Author at fifteen years old.

WHEN the blest seed of Terah's faithful son,
 After long toil, their liberty had won ;
 And past from Pharian¹ fields to Canaan land,
 Led by the strength of the Almighty's hand ;
 Jehovah's wonders were in Israel shown,
 His praise and glory was in Israel known.
 That saw the troubled Sea, and shivering fled,
 And sought to hide his froth-becurled head
 Low in the earth ; Jordan's clear streams recoil,
 As a faint host that hath receiv'd the foil.
 The high huge-bellied mountains skip, like rams
 Amongst their ewes ; the little hills like lambs.

Why fled the ocean ? And why skipt the mountains ?
 Why turned Jordan toward his crystal fountains ?
 Shake, Earth ; and at the presence be aghast
 Of Him that ever was, and aye shall last ;
 That glassy floods from rugged rocks can crush,
 And make soft rills from fiery flint-stones gush !

PSALM CXXXVI.

LET us, with a gladsome mind,
 Praise the Lord, for he is kind ;
 For his mercies aye endure,
 Ever faithful, ever sure.
 Let us blaze his name abroad,
 For of Gods he is the God ;
 For his, &c.
 O, let us his praises tell,
 Who doth the wrathful tyrants quell,
 For his, &c.
 Who, with his miracles, doth make
 Amazed Heaven and Earth to shake ;
 For his, &c.
 Who, by his wisdom, did create
 The painted heavens so full of state ;
 For his, &c.
 Who did the solid earth ordain
 To rise above the watery plain ;
 For his, &c.
 Who, by his all-commanding might,
 Did fill the new-made world with light ;
 For his, &c.

And caus'd the golden-tressed sun
All the day long his course to run ;
For his, &c.
The horned moon to shine by night,
Amongst her spangled sisters bright ;
For his, &c.
He, with his thunder-clasping hand,
Smote the first-born of Egypt land ;
For his, &c.
And, in despite of Pharoah fell,
He brought from thence his Israel ;
For his, &c.
The ruddy waves he cleft in twain
Of the Erythræan main ;
For his, &c.
The floods stood still, like walls of glass,
While the Hebrew bands did pass ;
For his, &c.
But full soon they did devour
The tawny king with all his power ;
For his, &c.
His chosen people he did bless
In the wasteful wilderness ;
For his, &c.
In bloody battle he brought down
Kings of prowess and renown ;
For his, &c.
He foil'd bold Seon¹ and his host,
That ruled the Amorrean coast ;
For his, &c.
And large-limb'd Og he did subdue,
With all his over-hardy crew ;
For his, &c.

And, to his servant Israël,
He gave their land therein to dwell ;

For his, &c.

He hath, with a piteous eye,
Beheld us in our misery ;

For his, &c.

And freed us from the slavery
Of the invading enemy ;

For his, &c.

All living creatures he doth feed,
And with full hand supplies their need ;

For his, &c.

Let us therefore warble forth
His mighty majesty and worth ;

For his, &c.

That his mansion hath on high,
Above the reach of mortal eye ;

For his mercies aye endure,

Ever faithful, ever sure.

ODE.

ERGIMI all' Etra ò Clio
 Perche di stelle intreccierò corona
 Non più del Biondo Dio
 La fronde eterna in Pindo, e in Elicon ;
 Diensi a merto maggior, maggiori i fregi,
 A celeste virtù celesti pregi.

Non può del tempo edace
 Rimaner preda, eterno alto valore ;
 Non può l' oblio rapace,
 Furar dalle memorie eccelso onore,
 Su l' arco di mia cetra un dardo forte
 Virtù m' adatti, e ferirò la morte.

Dell' ocean profondo
 Cinta dagli ampi gorgi Anglia risiede
 Separata dal mondo,
 Però che il suo valor l' umano eccede :
 Questa feconda sà produrre Eroi
 Ch' hanno a ragion del sovrumano tra noi.

Alla virtù sbandita
 Danno nei petti lor fido ricetta,
 Quella gli è sol gradita,
 Perché in lei san trovar gioia e diletto ;
 Ridillo tu, Giovanni, e mostra in tanto
 Con tua vera virtù, vero il mio Canto.

Lungi dal patrio lido
 Spinse Zensi l' industrie ardente brama ;
 Ch' udio d' Elena il grido
 Con aurea tromba rimbombar la fama,
 E per poterla effigiar al paro
 Dalle più belle Idee trasse il più raro.

Coel l' ape ingegnosa
 Trae con industria il suo liquor pregiato
 Dal giglio e dalla rosa,
 E quanti vaghi fiori ornano il prato ;
 Formano un dolce suon diverse corde,
 Fan varie voci melodia concorde.

Di bella gloria amante
 Milton dal ciel natio per varie parti
 Le peregrine piante
 Volgesti a ricercar scienze, ed arti ;
 Del Gallo regnator vedesti i regni,
 E dell' Italia ancor gli Eroi più degni.

Fabro quasi divino
 Sol virtù rintracciando il tuo pensiero
 Vide in ogni confino
 Chi di nobil valor calca il sentiero ;
 L'ottimo dal miglior dopo scegliea
 Per fabbricar d'ogni virtù l' idea.

Quanti nacquero in Flora
 O in lei del parlar Tosco appreser l' arte,
 La cui memoria onora
 Il mondo fatta eterna in dotte carte,
 Volesti ricercar per tuo tesoro,
 E parlasti con lor nell' opre loro.

Nell' altera Babelle
 Per te il parlar confuse Giove in vano,
 Chè per varie favelle
 Di se stessa trofeo cadde su'l piano :
 Ch' ode oltr' all' Anglia il suo più degno idioma
 Spagna, Francia, Toscana, e Grecia, e Roma.

I più profondi arcani
 Ch' occulta la natura e in cielo e in terra,
 Ch' a ingegni sovrumani
 Troppo avara, talor gli chiude e serra,
 Chiaramente conosci, e giungi al fine
 Della moral virtude al gran confine.

Non batta il Tempo l' ale,
 Fermisi immoto, e in un fermisigli anni,
 Che di virtù immortale
 Scorrion di troppo ingiuriosi ai danni ;
 Chè s' opre degne di poema e storia
 Furon già, l'hai presenti alla memoria.

Dammi tua dolce cetra
 Se vuoi ch' io dica del tuo dolce canto,
 Ch' inalzandoti all' Etra
 Di farti uomo celeste ottiene il vanto,
 Il Tamigi il dirà che gli è concesso
 Per te suo cigno pareggiar permesso.

Io che in riva del Arno
 Tento spiegar tuo merto alto e preclaro,
 So che fatico indarno,
 E ad ammirar, non a lodarlo imparo ;
 Freno dunque la lingua, e ascolto il core
 Che ti prende a lodar con lo stupore.

AD CAROLUM DEODATUM.¹

TANDEM, chare, tuæ mihi pervenere tabellæ,
Pertulit et voces nuncia charta tuas ;
Pertulit, occidua Devæ Cestrensis ab ora
Vergivium prono quæ petit amne salum.
Multùm, crede, juvat terras aluisse remotas
Pectus amans nostrî, tamque fidele caput,
Quódque mihi lepidum tellus longinqua sodalem
Debet, at unde brevi reddere jussa velit.
Me tenet urbs refluâ quam Thamesis alluit undâ,
Méque nec invitum patria dulcis habet.
Jam nec arundiferum mihi cura revisere Camum,
Nec dudum vetiti me laris angit amor.
Nuda nec arva placent, umbrâsque negantia molles :
Quàm malè Phœbicolis convenit ille locus !
Nec duri libet usque minas perferre Magistri,
Cæterâque ingenio non subeunda meo.

¹ 'Carolus Deodatus:' Charles Deodati, one of Milton's most intimate friends, was an excellent scholar, and practised physic in Cheshire. He was educated with our author at St Paul's School in London ; and from thence went to Trinity College, Oxford, where he was entered in the year 1621, at thirteen years of age. He was a fellow-collegian there with Alexander Gill, another of Milton's intimate friends, who became successively usher and master of St Paul's School. He died in 1638.

 Dum procerum ingressa est splendentes marmore turres,
 Dira sepulchrali Mors metuenda face ;

 Nec metuit satrapum sternere falce greges.

 Et quòd in herbosos jus tibi detur agros ?
 Quòdque afflata tuo marcescant lilia tabo,

 Et quæ mille nigris errant animalia sylvis ;

 Infula divinum cinxerat alba caput.

 Hósque aliquis placido misit ab ore sonos;
 "Nate, veni, et patrii felix cape gaudia regni,
 Semper abhinc duro, nate, labore vaca."
 Dixit, et aligeræ tetigerunt nablia turmæ,
 At mihi cum tenebris aurea pulsa quies.
 Flebam turbatos Cephaleiâ pellice somnos;
 Talia contingant somnia sæpe mihi!

¹ Thomas Young, pastor of the church of English merchants at Hamburg, was Milton's private preceptor, before he was sent to St Paul's school.

Cæruleâque suis comitatam Dorida Nymphis ;
 Ut tibi dent placidam per sua regna viam.
 At tu, si poteris, celeres tibi sume jugales,
 Vecta quibus Colchis fugit ab ore viri;
 Aut queis Triptolemus Scythicas devenit in oras
 Gratus Eleusinâ missus ab urbe puer.
 Atque ubi Germanas flavere videbis arenas,
 Ditis ad Hamburgæ mœnia flecte gradum,
 Dicitur occiso quæ ducere nomen ab Hamâ,
 Cimbrica quem fertur clava dedisse neci.
 Vivit ibi antiquæ clarus pietatis honore
 Præsul, Christicolas pascere doctus oves :
 Ille quidem est animæ plusquam pars altera nostræ ;
 Dimidio vitæ vivere cogor ego.
 Hei mihi ! quot pelagi, quot montes interjecti,
 Me faciunt aliâ parte carere mei !
 Charior ille mihi, quàm tu, doctissime Graiûm,
 Cliniadi, pronepos qui Telamonis erat ;
 Quàmque Stagyrtes generoso magnus alumno,
 Quem peperit Libyco Chaonis alma Jovi.
 Qualis Amyntorides, qualis Philyræius heros
 Myrmidonum regi, talis et ille mihi.
 Primus ego Aonios, illo præunte, recessus
 Lustrabam, et bifidi sacra vireta jugi ;
 Pieriôsque hausî latices, Clióque favente,
 Castalio sparsi læta ter ora mero.
 Flammeus at signum ter viderat arietis Æthon,

 Bisque novo terram sparsisti, Chlorig, senilem

 Necdum ejus licuit mihi lumina pascere vultu,
 Aut linguæ dulces aure bibisse sonos.
 Vade igitur, cursúque Eurum præverte sonorum ;
 Quàm sit opus monitis res docet, ipsa vides.

Invenies dulci cum conjuge fortè sedentem,
Mulcentem gremio pignora chara suo :
Forsitan aut veterum prælarga volumina patrum
Versantem, aut veri Biblia sacra Dei ;
Cœlestive animas saturantem rore tenellas,
Grande salutiferæ religionis opus.
Utque solet, multam sit dicere cura salutem,
Dicere quam decuit, si modò adesset, herum.
Hæc quoque, paulùm oculos in humum defixa modestos,
Verba verecundo sis memor ore loqui :
Hæc tibi, si teneris vacat inter prælia Musis,
Mittit ab Angliaco littore fida manus.
Accipe sinceram, quamvis sit sera, salutem ;
Fiat et hoc ipso gratior illa tibi.
Sera quidem, sed vera fuit, quam casta recepit
Icaris à lento Penelopeia viro.
Ast ego quid volui manifestum tollere crimen,
Ipse quod ex omni parte levare nequit ?
Arguitur tardus meritò, noxámque fatetur,
Et pudet officium deseruisse suum.

Supplicis ad mœstas deliquere preces :
Extensæque manus avertunt fulminis ictus,
Placat et iratos hostia parva Deos.
Jámque diu scripsisse tibi fuit impetus illi,
Neve moras ultra ducere passus Amor ;
Nam vaga Fama refert, heu nuntia vera malorum !
In tibi finitimis bella tumere locis ;
Teque tuámque urbem truculento milite cingi,
Et jam Saxonicos arma parasse duces.

Te circum latè campos populatur Enyo,
Et sata carne virùm jam cruor arva rigat;
Germanisque suum concessit Thracia Martem,
Illuc Odrysios Mars pater egit equos;
Perpetuòque comans jam deflorescit oliva,
Fugit et ærisonam Diva perosa tubam,
Fugit Io! terris, et jam non ultima virgo
Creditor ad superas justa volâsse domos.
Te tamen interea belli circumsonat horror,
Vivis et ignoto solus inópsque solo;
Et, tibi quam patrii non exhibuere penates,
Sede peregrinâ quæris egenus opem.
Patria, dura parens, et saxis sævior albis
Spumea quæ pulsat littoris unda tui,
Siccine te decet innocuos exponere fœtus,
Siccine in externam ferrea cogis humum?
Et sinis, ut terris quærant alimenta remotis
Quos tibi prospiciens miserat ipse Deus,
Et qui læta ferunt de cœlo nuntia, quique,
Quæ via post cineres ducat ad astra, docent?
Digna quidem Stygiis quæ vivas clausa tenebris,
Æternâque animæ digna perire fame!
Haud aliter vates terræ Thesbitidis olim
Pressit inassueto devia tesqua pede,
Desertâsque Arabum salebras, dum regis Achabi
Effugit, atque tuas, Sidoni dira, manus:
Talis et horrissono laceratus membra flagello,
Paulus ab Æmathiâ pellitur urbe Cilix,
Piscosæque ipsum Gergessæ civis Iësum
Finibus ingratus jussit abire suis.
At tu sume animos; nec spes cadat anxia curis,
Nec tua concutiat decolor ossa metus.
Sis etenim quamvis fulgentibus obsitus armis,
Intenténtque tibi millia tela necem,

At nullis vel inerme latus violabitur armis,
 Déque tuo cuspis nulla cruore bibet.
 Namque eris ipse Dei radiante sub ægide tutus ;
 Ille tibi custos, et pugil ille tibi :
 Ille, Sionææ qui tot sub mœnibus arcis
 Assyrios fudit nocte silente viros,
 Inque fugam vertit quos in Samaritadas oras
 Misit ab antiquis prisca Damascus agris ;
 Terruit et densas pavido cum rege cohortes,
 Aere dum vacuo buccina clara sonat,
 Cornea pulvereum dum verberat ungula campum,
 Currus arenosam dum quatit actus humum,
 Auditúrque hinnitus equorum ad bella ruentûm,
 Et strepitus ferri, murmuráque alta virûm.
 Et tu (quod superest miseris) sperare memento,
 Et tua magnanimo pectore vince mala ;
 Nec dubites quandoque frui melioribus annis,
 Atque iterum patrios posse videre lares.

ELEG. V. ANNO ÆTATIS XX.

IN ADVENTUM VERIS.

IN se perpetuo Tempus revolubile gyro
 Jam revocat Zephyros vere tepente novos ;
 Induitúrque brevem Tellus reparata juventam,
 Jámque soluta gelu dulce virescit humus.
 Fallor ? an et nobis redeunt in carmina vires,
 Ingeniúmque mihi munere veris adest ?
 Munere veris adest, iterúmque vigescit ab illo,
 (Quis putet ?) atque aliquod jam sibi poscit opus.

Castalis ante oculos, bifidumque cacumen oberrat,
Et mihi Pyrenen somnia nocte ferunt ;
Concitâque arcano fervent mihi pectora motu,
Et furor, et sonitus me sacer intus agit.
Delius ipse venit, video Penëide lauro
Implicitos crines ; Delius ipse venit.
Jam mihi mens liquidi raptatur in ardua coeli,
Pérque vagas nubes corpore liber eo ;
Pérque umbras, pérque antra feror, penetralia vatum,
Et mihi fana patent interiora deûm ;
Intuiturque animus toto quid agatur Olympo,
Nec fugiunt oculos Tartara cæca meos.
Quid tam grande sonat distento spiritus ore ?
Quid parit hæc rabies, quid sacer iste furor ?
Ver mihi, quod dedit ingenium, cantabitur illo ;
Profuerint isto reddita dona modo.
Jam, Philomela, tuos, foliis adoperta novellis,
Instituis modulos, dum silet omne nemus :
Urbe ego, tu sylvâ, simul incipiamus utrique,
Et simul adventum veris uterque canat.
Veris Io ! rediere vices ; celebremus honores
Veris, et hoc subeat Musa perennis opus.
Jam sol, Æthiopas fugiens Tithoniâque arva,
Flectit ad Arctöas aurea lora plagas.
Est breve noctis iter, brevis est mora noctis opacæ,
Horrida cum tenebris exulat illa suis.
Jamque Lycaonius, plaustrum cœleste, Boötes
Non longâ sequitur fessus ut ante viâ ;
Nunc etiam solitas circum Jovis atria toto
Excubias agitant sidera rara polo :
Nam dolus, et cædes, et vis cum nocte recessit,
Neve Giganteum Dii timuere scelus.
Fortè aliquis scopuli recubans in vertice pastor,
Roscida cùm primo sole rubescit humus,

Hac, ait, hac certè caruisti nocte puellâ,
Phœbe, tuâ, celeres quæ retineret equos.
Læta suas repetit silvas, pharetrâmq; resumit
Cynthia, luciferas ut videt alta rotas ;
Et, tenues ponens radios, gaudere videtur
Officium fieri tam breve fratris ope.
“Desere,” Phœbus ait, “thalamos, Aurora, seniles ;
Quid juvat effæto procubuisse toro ?
Te manet Æolides viridi venator in herbâ ;
Surge, tuos ignes altus Hymettus habet.”
Flava verecundo dea crimen in ore fatetur,
Et matutinos ociùs urget equos.
Exiit invisam Tellus rediviva senectam,
Et cupit amplexus, Phœbe, subire tuos ;
Et cupit, et digna est : Quid enim formosius illâ,
Pandit ut omniferos luxuriosa sinus,
Atque Arabum spirat messes, et ab ore venusto
Mitia cum Paphiis fundit amoma rosis !
Ecce ! coronatur sacro frons ardua luco,
Cingit ut Idæam pinea turris Opim ;
Et vario madidos intexit flore capillos,
Floribus et visa est posse placere suis.
Floribus effusos ut erat redimita capillos,
Tænario placuit diva Sicana deo.
Aspice, Phœbe, tibi faciles hortantur amores,
Mellitâsque movent flamina verna preces :
Cinnamæâ Zephyrus leve plaudit odorifer alâ,
Blanditiâsque tibi ferre videntur aves.
Nec sine dote tuos temeraria quærit amores
Terra, nec optatos poscit egena toros ;
Alma salutiferum medicos tibi gramen in usus
Præbet, et hinc titulos adjuvat ipsa tuos :
Quodd, si te pretium, si te fulventia tangunt
Munera, (muneribus sæpe coemptus amor)

Illa tibi ostentat quascunque sub æquore vasto,
Et superinjectis montibus, abdit opes.
Ah quoties, cùm tu clivoso fessus Olympo
In vespertinas præcipitaris aquas,
“Cur te,” inquit, “cursu languentem, Phoebe, diurno
Hesperiiis recipit cærule Mater aquis?
Quid tibi cum Tethy? Quid cum Tartesside lymphâ?
Dia quid immundo perluis ora salo?
Frigora, Phoebe, meâ meliùs captabis in umbrâ;
Huc ades, ardentes imbue rore comas.
Mollior egelidâ veniet tibi somnus in herbâ;
Huc ades, et gremio lumina pone meo.
Quâque jaces, circum mulcebit lenè susurrans
Aura per humentes corpora fusa rosas.
Nec me (crede mihi) terrent Semelëia fata,
Nec Phaetonteo fumidus axis equo:
Cùm tu, Phoebe, tuo sapientiùs uteris igni;
Huc ades, et gremio lumina pone meo.”
Sic Tellus lasciva suos suspirat amores;
Matris in exemplum cætera turba ruunt:
Nunc etenim toto currit vagus orbe Cupido,
Languentésque foveat solis ab igne faces:
Insonuere novis lethalia cornua nervis,
Triste micant ferro tela corusca novo:
Jâmque vel invictam tentat superâsse Dianam,
Quæque sedet sacro Vesta pudica foco.
Ipsa senescentem reparat Venus annua formam,
Atque iterum tepido creditur orta mari.
Marmoreas juvenes clamant Hymenæe! per urbes,
Littus, Io Hymen! et cava saxa sonant.
Cultior ille venit, tunicâque decentior aptâ,
Puniceum redolet vestis odora crocum.
Egreditúrque frequens, ad amœni gaudia veris,
Virgineos auro cincta puella sinus:

Votum est cuique suum, votum est tamen omnibus unum,
Ut sibi, quem cupiat, det Cytherea virum.
Nunc quoque septenâ modulatur arundine pastor,
Et sua, quæ jungat, carmina Phyllis habet.
Navita nocturno placat sua sidera cantu,
Delphinâsque leves ad vada summa vocat.
Jupiter ipse alto cum conjuge ludit Olympo,
Convocat et famulos ad sua festa deos.
Nunc etiam Satyri, cùm sera crepuscula surgunt,
Pervolitant celeri florea rura choro ;
Sylvanûsque suâ cyparissi fronde revinctus,
Semicapérque deus, semideûsque caper.
Quæque sub arboribus Dryades latuere vetustis,
Per juga, per solos expatiantur agros.
Per sata luxuriat fruticetâque Mænalius Pan,
Vix Cybele mater, vix sibi tuta Ceres ;
Atque aliquam cupidus prædatur Oreada Faunus,
Consulit in trepidos dum sibi Nympha pedes ;
Jâmque latet, latitânsque cupit malè tecta videri,
Et fugit, et fugiens pervelit ipsa capi.
Dii quoque non dubitant cœlo præponere sylvas,
Et sua quisque sibi numina lucus habet :
Et sua quisque diu sibi numina lucus habeto,
Nec vos arboreâ, dii, precor, ite domo.
Te referant miseris te, Jupiter, aurea terris
Sæcla ; quid ad nimbos aspera tela redis ?
Tu saltem lentè rapidos age, Phœbe, jugales
Quà potes, et sensim tempora veris eant,
Brumâque productas tardè ferat hispida noctes,
Ingruat et nostro senior umbra polo.

ELEG. VI.

AD CAROLUM DEODATUM,

RURI COMMORANTEM,

Qui cum Idibus Decemb. scripisset, et sua carmina excusari postulasset si solito minus essent bona, quòd inter lautitias, quibus erat ab amicis exceptus, haud satis felicem operam Musis dare se posse affirmabat, hoc habuit responsum.

Mitto tibi sanam non pleno ventre salutem,
Quâ tu, distento, fortè carere potes.
At tua quid nostram prolectat Musa camcenam,
Nec sinit optatas posse sequi tenebras?
Carmine scire velis quàm te redamémque colámque;
Crede mihi, vix hoc carmine scire queas.
Nam neque noster amor modulis includitur arctis,
Nec venit ad claudos integer ipse pedes.
Quàm benè solennes epulas, hilarémque Decembrem,
Festâque cœlifugam quæ coluere deum,
Deliciâsque refers, hiberni gaudia ruris,
Haustâque per lepidos Gallica musta focos!
Quid quereris refugam vino dapibúsque poesin?
Carmen amat Bacchum, carmina Bacchus amat.
Nec puduit Phœbum virides gestâsse corymbos,
Atque hederam lauro præposuisse suæ.
Sæpiùs Aoniis clamavit collibus, Euce!
Mista Thyonœo turba novena choro.
Naso Corallæis mala carmina misit ab agris:
Non illic epulæ, non sata vitis erat.
Quid nisi vina, rosâsque, racemiferúmque Lyæum,
Cantavit brevibus Tēia Musa modis?
Pindaricósque inflat numeros Teumesius Euan,
Et redolet sumptum pagina quæque merum;

Dum gravis everso currus crepat axe supinus,
Et volat Elëo pulvere fuscus eques
Quadrimóque madens Lyricen Romanus Iaccho,
Dulcè canit Glyceran, flavicomámque Chloen.
Jam quoque lauta tibi generoso mensa paratu
Mentis alit vires, ingeniúmque foveat.
Massica fœcundam despumant pocula venam,
Fundis et ex ipso condita metra cado.
Addimus his artes, fusúmque per intima Phœbum
Corda ; favent uni Bacchus, Apollo, Ceres.
Scilicet haud mirum, tam dulcia carmina per te,
Numine composito, tres peperisse deos.
Nunc quoque Thressa tibi cælato barbitos auro
Insonat, arguta mollitè icta manu ;
Auditúrque chelys suspensa tapetia circum,
Virgineos tremulâ quæ regat arte pedes.
Illa tuas saltem teneant spectacula Musas,
Et revocent, quantum crapula pellit iners.
Crede mihi, dum psallit ebur, comitatáque plectrum
Implet odoratos festa chorea tholos,
Percipies tacitum per pectora serpere Phœbum,
Quale repentinus permeat ossa calor ;
Pérque puellares oculos, digitúmque sonantem,
Irruet in totos lapsa Thalia sinus.
Namque Elegia levis multorum cura deorum est,
Et vocat ad numeros quemlibet illa suos ;
Liber adest elegis, Eratoque, Cerésque, Venúsque,
Et cum purpureâ Matre tenellus Amor.
Talibus indè licent convivia larga poetis,
Sæpiùs et veteri commaduisse mero.
At qui bella refert, et adulto sub Jove cœlum,
Heroásque pios, semideósque duces,
Et nunc sancta canit superûm consulta deorum,
Nunc latrata fero regna profunda cane,

Ille quidem parçè, Samii pro more magistri,
Vivat, et innocuos præbeat herba cibos ;
Stet prope fagineo pellucida lympa catillo,
Sobriâque è puro pocula fonte bibat.
Additur huic scelerisque vacans, et casta juvenus,
Et rigidi mores, et sine labe manus ;
Qualis, veste nitens sacrâ, et lustralibus undis,
Surgis ad infensos, augur, iture deos.
Hoc ritu vixisse ferunt post rapta sagacem
Lumina Tiresian, Ogygiûmque Linon,
Et lare devoto profugum Calchanta, senémque
Orpheon, edomitis sola per antra feris ;
Sic dapis exiguus, sic rivi potor Homerus
Dulichium vexit per freta longa virum,
Et per monstificam Perseïæ Phœbados aulam,
Et vada fœmineis insidiosa sonis ;
Pérque tuas, rex ime, domos, ubi sanguine nigro
Dicitur umbrarum detinuisse greges.
Diis etenim sacer est vates, divûmque sacerdos ;
Spirat et occultum pectus, et ora, Jovem.
At tu, siquid agam, scitabere (si modò saltem
Esse putas tanti noscere siquid agam,)
Paciferum canimus cœlesti semine Regem,
Faustâque sacratis sæcula pacta libris ;
Vagitûmque Dei, et stabulantem paupere tecto,
Qui suprema suo cum Patre regna colit ;
Stelliparûmque polum, modulantésque æthere turmas,
Et subitò elisos ad sua fana deos.
Dona quidem dedimus Christi natalibus illa,
Illa sub auroram lux mihi prima tulit.
Te quoque pressa manent patriis meditata cicutis,
Tu mihi, cui recitem, iudicis instar eris.

ELEG. VII. ANNO ÆTATIS XIX.

NONDUM, blanda, tuas leges, Amathusia, nôram,
Et Paphio vacuum pectus ab igne fuit.
Sæpe cupidineas, puerilia tela, sagittas,
Atque tuum sprevi, maxime, numen, Amor.
Tu, puer, imbelles, dixi, transfige columbas ;
Conveniunt tenero mollia bella duci :
Aut de passeribus timidos age, parve, triumphos ;
Hæc sunt militiæ digna trophæa tuæ.
In genus humanum quid inania dirigis arma ?
Non valet in fortes ista pharetra viros.
Non tulit hoc Cyprius, neque enim deus ullus ad iras
Promptior, et duplici jam ferus igne calet.
Ver erat, et summæ radians per culmina villæ
Attulerat primam lux tibi, Maie, diem :
At mihi adhuc refugam quærebant lumina noctem,
Nec matutinum sustinuere jubar.
Astat Amor lecto, pictis Amor impiger alis ;
Prodidit astantem mota pharetra deum :
Prodidit et facies, et dulcè minantis ocelli,
Et quicquid puero dignum et Amore fuit.
Talis in æterno juvenis Sigeius Olympo
Miscet amatori pocula plena Jovi ;
Aut, qui formosas pellexit ad oscula nymphas,
Thiodamantæus Naiade raptus Hylas.
Addiderátque iras, sed et has decuisse putares,
Addiderátque truces, nec sine felle, minas.
“ Et miser, exemplo sapiisses tutiùs,” inquit,
“ Nunc, mea quid possit dextera, testis eris.
Inter et expertos vires numerabere nostras,
Et faciam vero per tua damna fidem.

Ipse ego, si nescis, strato Pythone superbum
Edomui Phœbum, cessit et ille mihi ;
Et quoties meminit Peneidos, ipse fatetur
Certiùs et graviùs tela nocere mea.
Me nequit adductum curvare peritiùs arcum,
Qui post terga solet vincere, Parthus eques :
Cydoniùsque mihi cedit venator, et ille
Inscius uxori qui necis author erat.
Est etiam nobis ingens quoque victus Orion,
Herculeæque manus, Herculeùsque comes.
Jupiter ipse licèt sua fulmina torqueat in me,
Hærebunt lateri spicula nostra Jovis.
Cætera, quæ dubitas, meliùs mea tela docebunt,
Et tua non levitèr corda petenda mihi.
Nec te, stulte, tuæ poterunt defendere Musæ,
Nec tibi Phœbæus porriget anguis opem.”
Dixit ; et, aurato quatiens mucrone sagittam,
Evolat in tepidos Cypridos ille sinus.
At mihi risuro tonuit ferus ore minaci,
Et mihi de puero non metus ullus erat.
Et modò quàm nostri spatiantur in urbe Quirites,
Et modò villarum proxima rura placent.
Turba frequens, facièque simillima turba dearum,
Splendida per medias itque reditque vias :
Auctaque luce dies gemino fulgore coruscat ;
Fallor ? An et radios hinc quoque Phœbus habet ?
Hæc ego non fugi spectacula grata severus ;
Impetus et quò me fert juvenilis, agor ;
Lumina luminibus malè providus obvia misi,
Neve oculos potui continuisse meos.
Unam fortè aliis supereminuisse notabam ;
Principium nostri lux erat illa mali.
Sic Venus optaret mortalibus ipsa videri,
Sic regina deùm conspicienda fuit.

Hanc memor objecit nobis malus ille Cupido,
Solut et hos nobis texuit ante dolos.
Nec procul ipse vafer latuit, multæque sagittæ,
Et facis à tergo grande pependit onus :
Nec mora ; nunc ciliis hæsit, nunc virginis ori ;
Insilit hinc labiis, insidet inde genis :
Et quascunque agilis partes jaculator oberrat,
Hei mihi : mille locis pectus inerme ferit.
Protinùs insoliti subierunt corda furores ;
Uror amans intus, flammæque totus eram.
Interea, misero quæ jam mihi sola placebat,
Ablata est oculis, non reditura, meis.
Ast ego progredior tacitè querebundus, et excors,
Et dubius volui sæpe referre pedem.
Findor, et hæc remanet : sequitur pars altera votum,
Raptæque tam subitò gaudia flere iuvat.
Sic dolet amissum proles Junonia cœlum,
Inter Lemniacos præcipitata focos :
Talis et abreptum solem respexit, ad Orcum
Vectus ab attonitis Amphiaræus equis.
Quid faciam infelix, et luctu victus ? Amores
Nec licet inceptos ponere, neve sequi.
O utinam, spectare semel mihi detur amatos
Vultus, et coram tristia verba loqui !
Forsitan et duro non est adamante creata,
Fortè nec ad nostras surdeat illa preces !
Crede mihi, nullus sic infelicitè arsit ;
Ponar in exemplo primus et unus ego.
Parce, precor, teneri cùm sis deus ales amoris,
Pugnent officio nec tua facta tuo.
Jam tuus O ! certè est mihi formidabilis arcus,
Nate deâ, jaculis, nec minùs igne, potens :
Et tua fumabunt nostris altaria donis,
Solut et in superis tu mihi summus eris.

Deme meos tandem, verùm nec deme, furores ;
Nescio cur, miser est suavitèr omnis amans :
Tu modò da facilis, posthæc mea siqua futura est,
Cuspis amatorios figat ut una duos.

Hæc ego mente olim lævâ, studiòque supino,
Nequitia posui vana trophæa meæ.
Scilicèt abreptum sic me malus impulit error,
Indocilisque ætas prava magistra fuit :
Donèc Socraticos umbrosa Academia rivos
Præbuit, admissum dedocuitque jugum.
Protinùs, extinctis ex illo tempore flammis,
Cincta rigent multo pectora nostra gelu.
Unde suis frigus metuit puer ipse sagittis,
Et Diomedeam vim timet ipsa Venus.

EPIGRAMMATUM LIBER.

I. IN PRODITIONEM BOMBARDICAM.

CUM simul in regem nuper satrapásque Britannos
Ausus es infandum, perfide Fauxe, nefas,
Fallor? An et mitis voluisti ex parte videri,
Et pensare malâ cum pietate scelus?
Scilicet hos alti missurus ad atria cœli,
Sulphureo curru, flammivolisque rotis:
Qualiter ille, feris caput inviolabile Parcís,
Liquit Iördanios turbine raptus agros.

II. IN EANDEM.

SICCINE tentâsti cœlo donâsse Iäcobum,
Quæ septemgemino, Bellua, monte lates?
Ni meliora tuum poterit dare munera numen,
Parce, precor, donis insidiosa tuis.
Ille quidem sine te consortia serus adivit
Astra, nec inferni pulveris usus ope.
Sic potiùs fœdos in cœlum pelle cucullos,
Et quot habet brutos Roma profana deos;
Namque hac aut aliâ nisi quemque adjuveris arte,
Crede mihi, cœli vix bene scandet iter.

III. IN EANDEM.

PURGATOREM animæ derisit Iacobus ignem,
 Et sine quo superûm non adeunda domus,
 Frenduit hoc trinâ monstrum Latiale coronâ,
 Movit et horrificum cornua dena minax.
 “ Et nec inultus,” ait, “ temnes mea sacra, Britanne ;
 Supplicium, spretâ religione, dabis.
 Et, si stelligeras unquam penetraveris arces,
 Non nisi per flammâs triste patebit iter.”
 O quàm funesto cecinisti proxima vero,
 Verbâque ponderibus vix caritura suis !
 Nam prope Tartareo sublimè rotatus ab igni,
 Ibat ad æthereas, umbra perusta, plagas.

IV. IN EANDEM.

QUEM modò Roma suis devoverat impia diris,
 Et Styge damnârat, Tænarióque sinu ;
 Hunc, vice mutatâ, jam tollere gestit ad astra,
 Et cupit ad superos evehere usque deos.

V. IN INVENTOREM BOMBARDÆ.

IAPETIONIDEM laudavit cæca vetustas,
 Qui tulit ætheream solis ab axe facem ;
 At mihi major erit, qui lurida creditur arma,
 Et trifidum fulmen, surripuisse Jovi.

VI. AD LEONORAM, ROMÆ CANENTEM.¹

ANGELUS unicuique suus, sic credite gentes,
 Obtigit æthereis ales ab ordinibus.
 Quid mirum, Leonora, tibi si gloria major?
 Nam tua præsentem vox sonat ipsa Deum.
 Aut Deus, aut vacui certè mens tertia cœli,
 Per tua secretò guttura serpit agens;
 Serpit agens, facilisque docet mortalia corda
 Sensim immortalī assuescere posse sono.
 Quòd si cuncta quidè̃m Deus est, per cunctaque fusus,
 In te unâ loquitur, cætera mutus habet.

VII. AD EANDEM.

ALTERA Torquatū cepit Leonora poetam,
 Cujus ab insano cessit amore furens.
 Ah! miser ille tuo quantò feliciùs ævo
 Perditus, et propter te, Leonora, foret!
 Et te Pieriâ sensisset voce canentem
 Aurea maternæ fila movere lyræ!
 Quamvis Dirceō torsisset lumina Pentheo
 Sævior, aut totus desipuisset iners,
 Tu tamen errantes cæcâ vertigine sensus
 Voce eadem poteras composuisse tuâ;
 Et poteras, ægro spirans sub corde, quietem
 Flexanimo cantu restituisset sibi.

VIII. AD EANDEM.

CREDULA quid liquidam Sirena, Neapoli, jactas,
 Clarâque Parthenopes fana Achelöiados ;
 Littoreâmq; tuâ defunctam Naiada ripâ,
 Corpora Chalcidico sacra dedisse rogo ?
 Illa quidè'm vivitque, et amœnâ Tibridis undâ
 Mutavit rauci murmura Pausilipi.
 Illic, Romulidum studiis ornata secundis,
 Atque homines cantu detinet atque deos.

IX. IN SALMASII HUNDREDAM.

QUIS expedit Salmasio suam Hundredam,
 Picâmq; docuit verba nostra conari ?
 Magister artis venter, et Jacobæi
 Centum, exulantis viscera marsupii regis.
 Quòd si dolosi spes refulserit nummi,
 Ipse, Antichristi qui modò primatum Papæ
 Minatus uno est dissipare sufflatu,
 Cantabit ultrò Cardinalitium melos.

X. IN SALMASIUM.

GAUDETE scombri, et quicquid est piscium salo,
 Qui frigidâ hyeme incolitis argentes freta !
 Vestrûm misertus ille Salmasius, Eques
 Bonus, amicire nuditatem cogitat ;
 Chartæque largus apparat papyrinos
 Vobis cucullos, præferentes Claudii
 Insignia, noménque et decus, Salmasii :
 Gestetis ut per omne cetarium forum
 Equitis clientes, scriniis mungentium
 Cubito virorum, et capsulis, gratissimos.

XI. IN MORUM.

GALLI ex concubitu gravidam te, Pontia, Mori,
Quis benè moratam, morigerámque, neget ?

XII. APOLOGUS DE RUSTICO ET HERO.

RUSTICUS ex malo sapidissima poma quotannis
Legit, et urbano lecta dedit domino :
Hinc, incredibili fructûs dulcedine captus,
Malum ipsam in proprias transtulit areolas.
Hactenûs illa ferax, sed longo debilis ævo,
Mota solo assueto, protinûs aret iners.
Quod tandem ut patuit domino, spe lusus inani,
Damnavit celeres in sua damna manus ;
Atque ait, " Heu quanto satius fuit illa coloni,
Parva licèt, grato dona tulisse animo !
Possem ego avaritiam frænare, gulámque voracem :
Nunc periire mihi et fœtus, et ipse parens."

XIII. AD CHRISTINAM SUECORUM REGINAM, NOMINE CROMWELLI.

BELLIPOTENS virgo, septem regina trionum,
Christina, Arctoï lucida stella poli !
Cernis, quas merui durâ sub casside, rugas,
Ut'que senex, armis impiger, ora tero :
Invia fatorum dum per vestigia nitor,
Exequor et populi fortia jussa manu.
Ast tibi submittit frontem reverentior umbra :
Nec sunt hi vultus regibus usque truces.

SILVARUM LIBER.

PSALM CXIV.

ΙΣΡΑΗΛ ὅτε παιδές, ὅτ' ἀγλαὰ φύλ' Ἰακώβου
Αἰγύπτιον λίπε δῆμον, ἀπεχθέα, βαρβαρόφωνον,
Δὴ τότε μόνον ἔην ὅσιον γένος ὕιες Ἰούδα·
Ἐν δε Θεὸς λαοῖσι μέγα κρείων βασιλεύειν
Εἶδε, καὶ ἐντροπάδην φύγαδ' ἐρρώησε θάλασσα
Κύματι εἰλυμένη ροθίῳ, ὃδ' ἄρ' ἐστυφελίχθη

IN OBITUM PROCANCELLARII MEDICI.¹

ANNO ÆTATIS XVII.

PARERE Fati discite legibus,
Manúsque Parcæ jam date supplices,
Qui pendulum telluris orbem
Iäpeti colitis nepotes.

¹ This Ode is on the death of Doctor John Goolyn, master of Caius College, and king's professor of medicine at Cambridge; who died while a second time vice-chancellor of that university, in October 1626.

Vos si relicto mors vaga Tænaro
Semel vocarit flebilis, heu ! moræ
Tentantur incassum, dolique ;
Per tenebras Stygis ire certum est.
Si destinatam pellere dextera
Mortem valeret, non ferus Hercules,
Nessi venenatus cruore,
Æmathiâ jacuisset Oetâ.
Nec fraude turpi Palladis invidæ
Vidisset occisum Ilion Hectora, aut
Quem larva Pelidis peremit
Ense Locro, Jove lacrymante.
Si triste fatum verba Hecatæia
Fugare possint, Telegoni parens
Vixisset infamis, potentique
Ægiali soror usa virgâ.
Numénque trinum fallere si queant
Artes medentûm, ignotâque gramina,
Non gnarus herbarum Machaon
Eurypyli cecidisset hastâ :
Læsisset et nec te, Philyreie,
Sagitta Echidnæ perlita sanguine ;
Nec tela te fulménque avitum,
Cæse puer genitricis alvo.
Tuque, O alumno major Apolline,
Gentis togatæ cui regimen datum,
Froncosa quem nunc Cirrha luget,
Et mediis Helicon in undis,
Jam præfuisses Palladio gregi
Lætus, superstes ; nec sine gloria ;
Nec puppe lustrâsses Charontis
Horribiles barathri recessus.
At fila rupit Persephone tua,
Irata, cùm te viderit artibus,

Succóque pollenti, tot atris
 Faucibus eripuisse mortis.
 Colende Præses, membra, precor, tua
 Molli quiescant cespite, et ex tuo
 Crescant rosæ calthæque busto,
 Purpureóque hyacinthus ore.
 Sit mite de te iudicium Æaci,
 Subrideátque Ætnæa Proserpina ;
 Intérque felices perennis
 Elysio spatiere campo.

IN QUINTUM NOVEMBRIS.

ANNO ÆTATIS XVII.

JAM pius extremâ veniens Iäcobus ab arcto
 Teucrigenas populos, latéque patentia regna
 Albionum, tenuit ; jámque inviolabile fœdus
 Sceptra Caledoniis conjunxerat Anglica Scotis :
 Pacificúsque novo, felix divésque, sedebat
 In solio, occultique doli securus et hostis :
 Cùm ferus ignifluo regnans Acheronte tyrannus,
 Eumenidum pater, æthereo vagus exul Olympe,
 Fortè per immensum terrarum erraverat orbem,
 Dinumerans sceleris socios, vernásque fideles,
 Participes regni post funera mœsta futuros :
 Híc tempestates medio ciet aëre diras,
 Illic unanimes odium struit inter amicos,
 Armata et invictas in mutua viscera gentes ;
 Regnàque oliviferâ vertit florentia pace :
 Et quoscunque videt puræ virtutis amantes,
 Hos cupit adicere imperio, fraudúmque magister

Tentat inaccessum sceleri corrumpere pectus ;
Insidiásque locat tacitas, cassésque latentes
Tendit, ut incautos rapiat ; ceu Caspia tigris
Insequitur trepidam deserta per avia prædam
Nocte sub illuni, et somno nictantibus astris.
Talibus infestat populos Summanus et urbes,
Cinctus cæruleæ fumanti turbine flammæ.
Jámque fluentisonis albertia rupibus arva
Apparent, et terra Deo dilecta marino,
Cui nomen dederat quondam Neptunia proles ;
Amphitryoniaden qui non dubitavit atrocem,
Æquore tranato, furiali poscere bello,
Ante expugnataæ crudelia sæcula Trojæ.

At simul hanc, opibúsque et festâ pace beatam,
Aspicit, et pingues donis Cerealibus agros,
Quódque magis doluit, venerantem numina veri
Sancta Dei populum, tandem suspiria rupit
Tartareos ignes et luridum olentia sulphur ;
Qualia Trinacriâ trux ab Jove clausus in Ætnâ
Efflat tabifico monstrosus ob ore Tiphœus.
Ignescunt oculi, stridétque adamantinus ordo
Dentis, ut armorum fragor, ictáque cuspidè cuspis.
“ Atque pererrato solum hoc lacrymabile mundo
Inveni,” dixit ; “ gens hæc mihi sola rebellis,
Contemtrixque jugi, nostrâque potentior arte.
Illa tamen, mea si quicquam tentamina possunt,
Non feret hoc impunè diu, non ibit inulta.”
Hactenus ; et piceis liquido natat aëre pennis :
Quâ volat, adversi præcursant agmine venti,
Densantur nubes, et crebra tonitrua fulgent.

Jámque pruinosas velox superaverat Alpes,
Et tenet Ausoniæ fines ; à parte sinistrâ
Nimbifer Appenninus erat, priscique Sabini,
Dextra veneficiis infamis Hetruria, nec non

Te furtiva, Tibris, Thetidi videt oscula dantem ;
Hinc Mavortigenæ consistit in arce Quirini.
Reddiderant dubiam jam sera crepuscula lucem,
Cùm circumgreditur totam Tricoronifer urbem,
Panificósque deos portat, scapulisque virorum
Evehitur ; præeunt submisso poplite reges,
Et mendicantùm series longissima fratrum ;
Cereáque in manibus gestant funalia cæci,
Cimmeriis nati in tenebris, vitámque trahentes :
Templa dein multis subeunt lucentia tædis,
(Vesper erat sacer iste Petro) fremitúsque canentùm
Sæpe tholos implet vacuos et inane locorum.
Qualitèr exululat Bromius, Bromiique caterva,
Orgia cantantes in Echionio Aracyntho,
Dum tremat attonitus vitreis Asopus in undis,
Et procul ipse cavâ responsat rupe Cithæron.

His igitur tandem solenni more peractis,
Nox senis amplexus Erebi taciturna reliquit,
Præcipitésque impellit equos stimulante flagello,
Captum oculis Typhlonta, Melanchætémque ferocem,
Atque Acherontæo progeneratam patre Siopen
Torpida, et hirsutis horrentem Phrica capillis.
Interea regum domitor, Phlegetontius hæres,
Ingreditur thalamos, neque enim secretus adulter
Producit steriles molli sine pellice noctes ;
At vix compositos somnus clauderat ocellos,
Cùm niger umbrarum dominus, rectórque silentùm,
Prædatórque hominum, falsâ sub imagine tectus
Astitit ; assumptis micuerunt tempora canis,
Barba sinus promissa tegit, cineracea longo
Syrmate verrit humum vestis, pendétque cucullus
Vertice de raso ; et, ne quicquam desit ad artes,
Cannabeo lumbos constrinxit fune salaces,
Tarda fenestratis figens vestigia calceis.

Talia, uti fama est, vastâ Franciscus eremo
Tetra vagabatur solus per lustra ferarum,
Silvestrique tulit genti pia verba salutis
Impius, atque lupos domuit, Libycósque leones.

Subdolus at tali Serpens velatus amictu
Solvit in has fallax ora execrantia voces ;
“ Dormis, nate ? Etiamne tuos sopor opprimit artus ?
Immemor, O, fidei, pecorúmque oblite tuorum !
Dum cathedram, venerande, tuam, diademáque triplex,
Ridet Hyperboreo gens barbara nata sub axe ;
Dúmque pharetrati spernunt tua jura Britanni :
Surge, age ; surge, piger, Latius quem Cæsar adorat,
Cui reserata patet convexi janua cœli,
Turgentes animos, et fastus frange procaces,
Sacrilegique sciant, tua quid maledictio possit,
Et quid Apostolicæ possit custodia clavis ;
Et memor Hesperis disiectam ulciscere classem,
Mersáque Iberorum lato vexilla profundo,
Sanctorúmque cruci tot corpora fixa probrosæ,
Thermodoontëâ nuper regnante puellâ.
At tu si tenero mavis torpescere lecto,
Crescentésque negas hosti contundere vires ;
Tyrrhenum implebit numeroso milite pontum,
Signáque Aventino ponet fulgentia colle :
Reliquias veterum franget, flammisque cremabit ;
Sacrâque calcabit pedibus tua colla profania,
Cujus gaudebant soleis dare basia reges.
Nec tamen hunc bellis et aperto Marte lacesces ;
Irritus ille labor : tu callidus utere fraude :
Quælibet hæreticis disponere retia fas est.
Jámque ad consilium extremis rex magnus ab oris
Patricios vocat, et procerum de stirpe creatos,
Grandævósque patres, trabeâ canisque verendos ;
Hos tu membratim poteris conspergere in auras,

Atque dare in cineres, nitrati pulveris igne
Ædibus injecto, quâ convenere, sub imis.
Protinûs ipse igitur, quoscunque habet Anglia fidos,
Propositi, factique, mone : quisquâ mne tuorum
Audebit summi non jussa facessere Papæ ?
Perculsósque metu subito, casúque stupentes,
Invadat vel Gallus atrox, vel sævus Iberus.
Sæcula sic illic tandem Mariana redibunt,
Túque in belligeros iterum dominaberis Anglos.
Et, nequid timeas, divos divásque secundas
Accipe, quotque tuis celebrantur numina fastis.”
Dixit ; et, adscitos ponens malefidus amictus,
Fugit ad infandam, regnum illætabile, Lethen.

Jam rosea Eoas pandens Tithonia portas
Vestit inauratas redeunti lumine terras ;
Mœstáque, adhuc nigri deplorans funera nati,
Irrigat ambrosiis montana cacumina guttis :
Cùm somnos pepulit stellatæ janitor aulæ,
Nocturnos visus et somnia grata revolvens.

Est locus æternâ septus caligine noctis,
Vasta ruinosi quondam fundamina tecti,
Nunc torvi spelunca Phoni, Prodotæque bilinguis,
Effera quos uno peperit Discordia partu.
Híc inter cæmenta jacent, præruptáque saxa,
Ossa inhumata virûm, et trajecta cadavera ferro ;
Híc Dolus intortis semper sedet ater ocellis,
Jurgiáque, et stimulis armata Calumnia fauces,
Et Furor, atque viæ moriendi mille videntur,
Et Timor, exanguisque locum circumvolat Horror ;
Perpetuðque leves per muta silentia Manes
Exululant, tellus et sanguine conscia stagnat.
Ipsi etiam pavidi latitant penetralibus antri
Et Phonos, et Prodotes ; nullóque sequente per antrum,
Antrum horrens, scopulosum, atrum feralibus umbris,

Diffugiunt sontes, et retrò lumina vortunt :
 Hos pugiles Romæ per sæcula longa fideles
 Evocat antistes Babylonius, atque ita fatur.

“ Finibus occiduis circumfusum incolit æquor
 Gens exosa mihi ; prudens Natura negavit
 Indignam penitùs nostro conjungere mundo ;
 Illuc, sic jubeo, celeri contendite gressu,
 Tartareóque leves diffientur pulvere in auras
 Et rex et pariter satrapæ, scelerata propago :
 Et, quotquot fidei caluere cupidine veræ,
 Consilii socios adhibete, operisque ministros.”
 Finierat ; rigidi cupidé paruere gemelli.

Interea longo flectens curvamine cœlos
 Despicit æthereâ Dominus qui fulgurat arce,
 Vanâque perversæ ridet conamina turbæ ;
 Atqui sui causam populi volet ipse tueri.

Esse ferunt spatium, quâ distat ab Aside terrâ
 Fertilis Europe, et spectat Mareotidas undas ;
 Hic turris posita est Titanidos ardua Famæ,
 Ærea, lata, sonans, rutilus vicinior astris
 Quàm superimpositum vel Athos vel Pelion Ossæ.
 Mille fores aditúsque patent, totidémque fenestræ.
 Amplâque per tenues translucent atria muros :
 Excitat hîc varios plebs agglomerata susurros ;
 Qualitèr instrepitant circum mulctralia bombis
 Agmina muscarum, aut texto per ovilia junco,
 Dum Canis æstivum cœli petit ardua culmen.
 Ipsa quidem summâ sedet ultrix matris in arce ;
 Auribus innumeris cinctum caput eminet olli,
 Queis sonitum exiguum trahit, atque levissima captat
 Murmura, ab extremis patuli confinibus orbis.
 Nec tot, Aristoride, servator inique juvencæ
 Isidos, immiti volvebas lumina vultu,
 Lumina non unquam tacito nutantia somno,

Lumina subjectas latè spectantia terras.
Istis illa solet loca luce carentia sæpe
Perlustrare, etiam radianti impervia soli :
Millenisque loquax auditæque visæque linguis
Cuilibet effundit temeraria ; veræque mendax
Nunc minuit, modò confictis sermonibus auget.

Sed tamen à nostro meruisti carmine laudes,
Fama, bonum quo non aliud veracius ullum,
Nobis digna cani, nec te memorâsse pigebit
Carmine tam longo ; servati scilicèt Angli
Officiis, vaga diva, tuis, tibi reddimus æqua.
Te Deus, æternos motu qui temperat ignes,
Fulmine præmisso alloquitur, terræque tremante ;
“ Fama siles ? An te latet impia Papistarum
Conjurata cohors in méque meósque Britannos,
Et nova sceptrigero cædes meditata Iácobo ? ”

Nec plura ; illa statim sensit mandata Tonantis,
Et, satis ante fugax, stridentes induit alas,
Induit et variis exilia corpora plumis ;
Dextra tubam gestat Temesæo ex ære sonoram.
Nec mora, jam pennis cedentes remigat auras,
Atque parum est cursu celeres prævertere nubes :
Jam ventos, jam solis equos, post terga reliquit :
Et primò Angliacas, solito de more, per urbes
Ambiguas voces, incertæque murmura, spargit :
Mox arguta dolos, et detestabile vulgat
Proditionis opus, nec non facta horrida dictu,
Authorésque addit sceleris, nec garrula cæcis
Insidiis loca structa silet ; stupuere relatis
Et paritèr juvenes, paritèr tremuere puellæ,
Effoetique senes paritèr : tantæque ruinæ
Sensus ad ætatem subitò penetraverat omnem.

Attamen interea populi miserescit ab alto
Æthereus Pater, et crudelibus obstitit ausis

Papicolûm ; capti pœnas raptantur ad acres :
 At pia thura Deo, et grati solvuntur honores ;
 Compita læta focis genialibus omnia fumant ;
 Turba choros juvenilis agit : Quintoque Novembris
 Nulla dies toto occurrit celebratior anno.

IN OBITUM PRÆSULIS ELIENSIS.¹

ANNO ÆTATIS XVII.

ADHUC madentes rore squalabant genæ,
 Et sicca nondum lumina
 Adhuc liquentis imbre turgebant salis,
 Quem nuper effudi pius,
 Dum mœsta charo justa persolvi rogo
 Wintoniensis Præsulis.
 Cùm centilinguis Fama, proh ! semper mali
 Cladisque vera nuntia,
 Spargit per urbes divitis Britanniæ,
 Populósque Neptuno satos,
 Cessisse morti, et ferreis sororibus,
 Te, generis humani decus,
 Qui rex sacrorum illâ fuisti in insulâ
 Quæ nomen Anguillæ tenet.
 Tunc inquietum pectus irâ protinûs
 Ebulliebat fervidâ,
 Tumulis potentem sæpe devovens deam :
 Nec vota Naso in Ibida
 Conceptit alto diriora pectore ;
 Graiûsque vates parciûs

¹ Nicholas Fulton, Bishop of Ely, died October 5, 1656, not many days after Bishop Andrews, before celebrated. He had been master of Pembroke Hall, as well as Bishop Andrews.

Turpem Lycambis execratus est dolum,
 Sponsamque Neobulen suam.
 At ecce! diras ipse dum fundo graves,
 Et imprecor neci necem,
 Audisse tales videor attonitus sonos
 Leni, sub aurâ, flamine :
 "Cæcos furores pone ; pone vitream
 Bilémque, et irritas minas :
 Quid temerè violas non nocenda numina,
 Subitòque ad iras percita ?
 Non est, ut arbitraris elusus miser,
 Mors atra Noctis filia,
 Erebove patre creta, sive Erinnye,
 Vastove nata sub Chao ;
 Ast illa, cœlo missa stellato, Dei
 Messes ubique colligit ; .
 Animasque mole carneâ reconditas
 In lucem et auras evocat :
 Ut cùm fugaces excitant Horæ diem,
 Themidos Jovisque filiaë ;
 Et sempiterni ducit ad vultus Patris :
 At justa raptat impios
 Sub regna furvi luctuosa Tartari,
 Sedésque subterraneas."
 Hanc ut vocantem lætus audivi, citò
 Fœdum reliqui carcerem,
 Volatilésque faustus inter milites
 Ad astra sublimis feror :
 Vates ut olim raptus ad cœlum senex,
 Auriga currûs ignei.
 Non me Boëtis terruere lucidi
 Sarraca tarda frigore, aut
 Formidolosi Scorpionis brachia ;
 Non ensis, Orion, tuus.

Prætervolavi fulgidi solis globum,
 Longèque sub pedibus deam
 Vidi triformem, dum coërcebat suos
 Frænis dracones aureis.
 Erraticorum siderum per ordines,
 Per lacteas vehor plagas,
 Velocitatem sæpe miratus novam ;
 Donec nitentes ad fores
 Ventum est Olympi, et regiam crystallinam, et
 Stratum smaragdis atrium.
 Sed hîc tacebo ; nam quis effari queat,
 Oriundus humano patre,
 Amœnitates illius loci ? Mihi
 Sat est in æternum frui.

NATURAM NON PATI SENIUM.¹

HEU, quàm perpetuis erroribus acta fatiscit
 Avia mens hominum, tenebrisque immersa profundis
 Oedipodioniam volvit sub pectore noctem !
 Quæ vesana suis metiri facta deorum
 Audet, et incisas leges adamante perenni
 Assimilare suis, nullòque solubile sæclo
 Consilium fati perituris alligat horis !
 Ergóne marcescet sulcantibus obsita rugis
 Naturæ facies, et rerum publica mater
 Omniparum contracta uterum sterilescet ab ævo ?
 Et, se fassa senem, malè certis passibus ibit
 Sidereum tremebunda caput ? Num tetra vetustas,
 Annorúmque æterna fames, squalórque, sitúsque,

Sidera vexabunt ? An et insatiabile Tempus
 Esuriet Cœlum, rapiétque in viscera patrem ?
 Heu, potuitne suas imprudens Jupiter arces
 Hoc contra munisse nefas, et Temporis isto
 Exemisse malo, gyrósque dedisse perennes ?
 Ergo erit ut quandoque sono dilapsa tremendo
 Convexi tabulata ruant, atque obvius ictu
 Stridat uterque polus, superâque ut Olympius aula
 Decidat, horribilisque relectâ Gorgone Pallas ;
 Qualis in Ægæam proles Junonia Lemnon
 Deturbata sacro cecidit de limine cœli ?
 Tu quoque, Phœbe, tui casus imitabere nati ;
 Præcipiti curru, subitâque ferere ruinâ
 Pronus, et extinctâ fumabit lampade Nereus,
 Et dabit attonito feralia sibila ponto.
 Tunc etiam aërei divulsis sedibus Hæmi
 Dissultabit apex, imóque allisa barathro
 Terre bunt Stygium dejecta Ceraunia Ditem,
 In superos quibus usus erat, fraternâque bella.

At Pater Omnipotens, fundatis fortiùs astris,
 Consuluit rerum summæ, certóque peregit
 Pondere fatorum lances, atque ordine summo
 Singula perpetuum jussit servare tenorem.
 Volvitur hinc lapsu mundi rota prima diurno ;
 Raptat et ambitos sociâ vertigine cœlos.
 Tardior haud solito Saturnus, et acer ut olim
 Fulmineum rutilat cristatâ casside Mavors.
 Floridus æternum Phœbus juvenile coruscat,
 Nec fovet effoetas loca per declivia terras
 Deveho temone deus ; sed, semper amicâ
 Luce potens, eadem currit per signa rotarum.
 Surgit odoratis paritèr formosus ab Indis,
 Æthereum pecus albenti qui cogit Olympo,
 Manè vocans, et serus agens in pascua cœli ;

Temporis et gemino dispertit regna colore.
 Fulget, obitque vices alterno Delia cornu,
 Cæruleúmque ignem paribus complectitur ulnis.
 Nec variant elementa fidem, solitóque fragore
 Lurida percussas jaculantur fulmina rupes.
 Nec per inane furit leviori murmure Corus,
 Stringit et armiferos æquali horrore Gelonos
 Trux Aquilo, spirátque hyemem, nimbósque volutat.
 Utque solet, Siculi diverberat ima Pelori
 Rex maris, et raucâ circumstrepit æquora conchâ
 Oceani Tubicen, nec vastâ mole minorem
 Ægæona ferunt dorso Balearica cete.
 Sed neque, Terra, tibi sæcli vigor ille vetusti
 Priscus abest, servátque suum Narcissus odorem,
 Et puer ille suum tenet, et puer ille, decorem,
 Phœbe, tuúsque, et, Cypri, tuus ; nec ditior olim
 Terra datum sceleri celavit montibus aurum
 Conscia, vel sub aquis gemmas. Sic denique in ævum
 Ibit cunctarum series justissima rerum ;
 Donec flamma orbem populabitur ultima, latè
 Circumplexa polos, et vasti culmina cœli ;
 Ingentique rogo flagrabit machina mundi.

DE IDEA PLATONICA QUEMADMODUM ARISTOTELES intellexit.

DICITE, sacrorum præsides nemorum deæ,
 Túque, O noveni perbeata numinis
 Memoria mater, quæque in immenso procul
 Antro recumbis, otiosa Æternitas,
 Monumenta servans, et ratas leges Jovis,

Coelique fastos, atque ephemeridas Deûm ;
Quis ille primus, cujus ex imagine
Natura solers finxit humanum genus,
Æternus, incorruptus, æquævus polo,
Unûsque et universus, exemplar Dei ?
Haud ille Palladis gemellus innubæ
Interna proles insidet menti Jovis ;
Sed quamlibet natura sit communior,
Tamen seorsûs extat ad morem unius,
Et, mira, certo stringitur spatio loci :
Seu sempiternus ille siderum comes
Coeli pererrat ordines decemplicis,
Citimûmve terris incolit lunæ globum :
Sive, inter animas corpus adituras sedens,
Obliviosas torpet ad Lethes aquas :
Sive in remotâ fortè terrarum plagâ
Incedit ingens hominis archetypus gigas,
Et diis tremendus erigit celsum caput,
Atlante major portitore siderum.
Non, cui profundum cæcitas lumen dedit,
Dircæus augur vidit hunc alto sinu ;
Non hunc silente nocte Plëiones nepos
Vatum sagaci præpes ostendit choro ;
Non hunc sacerdos novit Assyrius, licêt
Longos vetusti commemoret atavos Nini,
Priscûmque Belon, inclytûmque Osiridem.
Non ille, trino gloriosus nomine,
Ter magnus Hermes, ut sit arcani sciens,
Talem reliquit Isidis cultoribus.
At tu, perenne ruris Academi decus,
(Hæc monstra si tu primus induxti scholis,)
Jam jam poetas, urbis exules tuæ,
Revocabis, ipse fabulator maximus ;
Aut institutor ipse migrabis foras.

AD PATREM.

NUNC mea Pierios cupiam per pectora fontes
Irriguas torquere vias, totùmque per ora
Volvere laxatum gemino de vertice rivum ;
Ut, tenues oblita sonos, audacibus alis
Surgat in officium venerandi Musa parentis.
Hoc utcunque tibi gratum, pater optime, carmen
Exiguum meditatur opus ; nec novimus ipsi
Aptiùs à nobis quæ possunt munera donis
Respondere tuis, quamvis nec maxima possint
Respondere tuis, nedum ut par gratia donis
Esse queat, vacuis quæ redditur arida verbis.
Sed tamen hæc nostros ostendit pagina census,
Et quod habemus opum chartâ numeravimus istâ,
Quæ mihi sunt nullæ, nisi quas dedit aurea Clio,
Quas mihi semoto somni peperere sub antro,
Et nemoris laureta sacri Parnassides umbræ.

Nec tu vatis opus divinum despice carmen,
Quo nihil æthereos ortus, et semina cœli,
Nil magis humanam commendat origine mentem,
Sancta Promethææ retinens vestigia flammæ.
Carmen amant superi, tremebundâque Tartara carmen
Ima ciere valet, divósque ligare profundos,
Et triplici duro Manes adamante coercet.
Carmine sepositi retegunt arcana futuri
Phœbades, et tremulæ pallentes ora Sibyllæ :
Carmina sacrificus sollennes pangit ad aras,
Aurea seu sternit motantem cornua taurum ;
Seu cùm fata sagax fumantibus abdita fibris
Consulit, et tepidis Parcam scrutatur in extis.
Nos etiam, patrium tunc cùm repetemus Olympum,

Æternæque moræ stabunt immobilis ævi,
 Ibimus auratis per cœli templa coronis ;
 Dulcia suaviloquo sociantes carmina plectro,
 Astra quibus, geminique poli convexa, sonabunt.
 Spiritus et rapidos qui circinat igneus orbes,
 Nunc quoque sidereis intercinit ipse choreis
 Immortale melos, et inenarrabile carmen ;
 Torrida dum rutilus compescit sibila serpens,
 Demissóque ferox gladio mansuescit Orion ;
 Stellarum nec sentit onus Maurusius Atlas.
 Carmina regales epulas ornare solebant,
 Cùm nondum luxus, vastæque immensa vorago
 Nota gulæ, et modico spumabat cœna Lyæo.
 Tum, de more sedens festa ad convivia vates,
 Æsculeâ intonsos redimitus ab arbore crines,
 Heroúmque actus, imitandæque gesta canebat,
 Et chaos, et positi latè fundamina mundi,
 Reptantésque deos, et alentes numina glandes,
 Et nondum Ætnæo quæsitum fulmen ab antro.
 Denique quid vocis modulamen inane juvabit,
 Verborum sensúsque vacans, numerique loquacis ?
 Silvestres decet iste chorus, non Orphea, cantus,
 Qui tenuit fluvios, et quercubus addidit aures,
 Carmine, non cithará ; simulachræque functa canendo
 Compulit in lacrymas : Habet has à carmine laudes.

Nec tu perge, precor, sacras contemnere Musas
 Nec vanas inopésque puta, quarum ipse peritus
 Munere mille sonos numeros componis ad aptos ;
 Millibus et vocem modulis variare canoram
 Doctus, Arionii meritò sis nominis hæres.
 Nunc tibi quid mirum, si me genuisse poetam
 Contigerit, charo si tam propè sanguine juncti
 Cognatas artes, studiumque affine, sequamur ?
 Ipse volens Phœbus se dispertire duobus,

Altera dona mihi, dedit altera dona parenti ;
 Dividuumque Deum, genitorque puérque, tenemus.

Tu tamen ut simules teneras odisse Camœnas,
 Non odisse reor ; neque enim, pater, ire jubebas
 Quà via lata patet, quà pronior area lucri,
 Certaque condendi fulget spes aurea nummi :
 Nec rapis ad leges, malè custoditæque gentis
 Jura, nec insulsis damnas clamoribus aures ;
 Sed, magis exultam cupiens ditescere mentem,
 Me procul urbano strepitu, secessibus altis
 Abductum, Aoniæ jucunda per otia ripæ,
 Phœbæo lateri comitem sinis ire beatum.
 Officium chari taceo commune parentis ;
 Me poscunt majora : tuo, pater optime, sumptu
 Cùm mihi Romuleæ patuit facundia linguæ,
 Et Latii veneres, et quæ Jovis ora decebant
 Grandia magniloquis elata vocabula Graiis,
 Addere suasisti quos jactat Gallia flores ;
 Et quam degeneri novus Italus ore loquelam
 Fundit, barbaricos testatus voce tumultus ;
 Quæque Palæstinus loquitur mysteria vates.
 Denique quicquid habet cœlum, subjectaque cœlo
 Terra parens, terræque et cœlo interfluit aer,
 Quicquid et unda tegit, pontique agitabile marmor,
 Per te nôsse licet, per te, si nôsse libebit :
 Dimotæque venit spectanda scientia nube,
 Nudæque conspicuos inclinat ad oscula vultus,
 Ni fugisse velim, ni sit libasse molestum.

I nunc, confer opes, quisquis malesanus avitas
 Austriaci gazas, Perûanaque regna, præoptas.
 Quæ potuit majora pater tribuisse, vel ipse
 Jupiter, excepto, donâsset ut omnia, cœlo ?
 Non potiora dedit, quamvis et tuta fuissent,
 Publica qui juveni commisit lumina nato,

Atque Hyperionios currus, et fræna diei,
 Et circùm undantem radiatâ luce tiaram.
 Ergo ego, jam doctæ pars quamlibet ima catervæ,
 Victrices hederas inter laurósque sedebo ;
 Jámque nec obscurus populo miscebor inerti,
 Vitabúntque oculos vestigia nostra profanos.
 Este procul, vigiles Curæ, procul este, Querelæ,
 Invidiæque acies transverso tortilis hirquo,
 Sæva nec anguiferos extende, Calumnia, rictus ;
 In me triste nihil, fœdissima turba, potestis,
 Nec vestri sum juris ego ; securâque tutus
 Pectora, vipereo gradiar sublimis ab ictu.

At tibi, chare pater, postquam non æquâ merenti
 Posse referre datur, nec dona rependere factis,
 Sit memorâsse satis, repetitâque munera grato
 Percensere animo, fidæ'que reponere menti.

Et vos, O nostri, juvenilia carmina, lusus,
 Si modò perpetuos sperare audebitis annos,
 Et domini superesse rogo, lucémque tueri,
 Nec spisso rapiunt oblivia nigra sub Orco ;
 Forsitan has laudes, decantatúmque parentis
 Nomen, ad exemplum, sero servabitis ævo.

AD SALSILLUM,

POETAM ROMANUM, ÆGROTANTEM.¹

Scazontes.

O MUSA, gressum quæ volens trahis claudum,
 Vulcaniôque tarda gaudes incessu,
 Nec sentis illud in loco minus gratum,
 Quàm cùm decentes flava Dëiope suras

¹ Giovanni Salsilli had complimented Milton at Rome in a Latin tetrastich, for his Greek, Latin, and Italian poetry. Milton, in return, sent these elegant Scazontes to Salsilli when indisposed.

Alternat aureum ante Junonis lectum ;
 Adesdum, et hæc s'is verba pauca Salsillo
 Refer, Camœna nostra cui tantum est cordi,
 Quàmque ille magnis prætulit immeritò divis.
 Hæc ergo alumnus ille Londini Milto,
 Diebus hisce qui suum linquens nidum,
 Polique tractum, pessimus ubi ventorum,
 Insanientis impoténsque pulmonis,
 Pernix anhela sub Jove exercet flabra,
 Venit feraces Itali soli ad glebas,
 Visum superbâ cognitas urbes famâ,
 Virósque, doctæque indolem juventutis.
 Tibi optat idem hic fausta multa, Salsille,
 Habitúmque fesso corpori penitùs sanum ;
 Cui nunc profunda bilis infestat renes,
 Præcordiisque fixa damnosùm spirat.
 Nec id pepercit impia, quòd tu Romano
 Tam cultus ore Lesbium condis melos.

O dulce divòmm munus, O Salus, Hebes
 Germana ! Tuque, Phœbe, morborum terror,
 Pythone cæso, sive tu magis Pæan
 Libentèr audis, hic tuus sacerdos est.
 Querceta Fauni, vósque rore vinoso
 Colles benigni, mitis Evandri sedes,
 Siquid salubre vallibus frondet vestris,
 Levamen ægro ferte certatim vati.
 Sic ille, charis redditus rursùm Musis,
 Vicina dulci prata mulcebit cantu.
 Ipse inter atros emirabitur lucos
 Numa, ubi beatum degit otium æternum,
 Suam reclinis semper Ægeriam spectans.
 Tumidúsque et ipse Tibris, hinc delinitus,
 Spei favebit annuæ colonorum ;
 Nec in sepulchris ibit obsessum reges,

Nimiùm sinistro laxus irruens loro ;
Sed fræna meliùs temperabit undarum,
Adusque curvi salsa regna Portumni.

MANSUS.¹

Joannes Baptista Mansus, Marchio Villensis, vir ingenii laude, tum literarum studio, nec non et bellica virtute, apud Italos clarus in primis est. An quem Torquati Tassi Dialogus extat De Amicitia scriptus; erat enim Tassi amicissimus; ab quo etiam inter Campaniæ principes celebratur, in illo poemate cui titulus GERUSALEMME CONQUISTATA, lib. 20.

" Fra cavalier magnanimi, è cortesi, Risplende il MANSO."

Is authorem Neapoli commorantem summâ benevolentia prosecutus est, multâque ei detulit humanitatis officia. Ad hunc itaque hospes ille, antequam ab eâ urbe discederet, ut ne ingratum se ostenderet, hoc carmen misit.

Hæc quoque, Manse, tuæ meditantur carmina laudi
Pierides, tibi, Manse, choro notissime Phœbi ;
Quandoquidem ille alium haud æquo est dignatus honore,
Post Galli cineres, et Mecænates Hetrusci.
Tu quoque, si nostræ tantùm valet aura Camœnæ,
Victrices hederas inter laurósque sedebis.
Te pridem magno felix concordia Tasso
Junxit, et æternis inscripsit nomina chartis :
Mox tibi dulciloquum non inscia Musa Marinum
Tradidit ; ille tuum dici se gaudet alumnum,
Dum canit Assyrios divûm prolixus amores ;
Mollis et Ausonias stupefecit carmine nymphas.
Ille itidem moriens tibi soli debita vates
Ossa, tibi soli, supremâque vota reliquit :
Nec manes pietas tua chara fefellit amici ;
Vidimus arridentem operoso ex ære poetam.

¹ At Naples, Milton was introduced to Giovanni Battista Manso, Marquis of Villa, who had been the friend of Tasso; and Milton, at leaving Naples, sent this poem to him.

Nec satis hoc visum est in utrumque, et nec pia cessant
Officia in tumulto ; cupis integros rapere Orco,
Quà potes, atque avidas Parcarum eludere leges :
Amborum genus, et variâ sub sorte peractam
Describis vitam, morésque, et dona Minervæ ;
Æmulus illius, Mycalen qui natus ad altam
Rettulit Æolii vitam facundus Homeri.
Ergo ego te, Cliûs et magni nomine Phœbi,
Manse pater, jubeo longum salvere per ævum,
Missus Hyperboreo juvenis peregrinus ab axe.
Nec tu longinquam bonus aspernabere Musam,
Quæ nuper gelidâ vix enutrita sub Arcto,
Imprudens, Italas ausa est volitare per urbes.
Nos etiam in nostro modulantes flumine cygnos
Credimus obscuras noctis sensisse per umbras,
Quà Thamesis late puris argenteus urnis
Oceani glaucos perfundit gurgite crines :
Quin et in has quondam pervenit Tityrus oras.

Sed neque nos genus incultum, nec inutile Phœbo,
Quà plaga septeno mundi sulcata Trione
Brumalem patitur longâ sub nocte Boöten.
Nos etiam colimus Phœbum, nos munera Phœbo
Flaventes spicas, et lutea mala canistris,
Halantémque crocum, perhibet nisi vana vetustas,
Misimus, et lectas Druidum de gente choreas.
Gens Druides antiqua, sacris operata deorum,
Heroum laudes, imitandâque gesta, canebant ;
Hinc quoties festo cingunt altaria cantu,
Delo in herbosâ, Graiæ de more puellæ,
Carminibus lætis memorant Corinœida Loxo,
Fatidicâmque Upin, cum flavicomâ Hecaërge,
Nuda Caledonio variatas pectora fuco.

Fortunate senex, ergo, quacunque per orbem
Torquati decus, et nomen celebrabitur ingens,

Clarâque perpetui succrescet fama Marini ;
Tu quoque in ora frequens venies plausûmque virorum,
Et parili carpes iter immortale volatu.
Dicetur tum sponte tuos habitâsse penates
Cynthus, et famulas venisse ad limina Musas :
At non sponte domum tamen idem, et regis adivit
Rura Pheretiadæ, cœlo fugitivus Apollo ;
Ille licèt magnum Alciden suscepit hospes ;
Tantùm ubi clamosos placuit vitare bubulcos,
Nobile mansueti cessit Chironis in antrum,
Irriguos inter saltus, frondosâque tecta,
Peneium propè rivum : ibi sæpe sub ilice nigrâ,
Ad citharæ strepitum, blandâ prece victus amici,
Exilii duros lenibat voce labores.
Tum neque ripa suo, barathro nec fixa sub imo
Saxa stetero loco ; nutat Trachinia rupes,
Nec sentit solitas, immania pondera, silvas ;
Emotæque suis properant de collibus orni,
Mulcentûrque novo maculosi carmine lynces.
Diis dilecte senex, te Jupiter æquus oportet
Nascentem, et miti lustrârit lumine Phœbus,
Atlantisque nepos ; neque enim, nisi charus ab ortu
Diis superis, poterit magno favisse poetæ.
Hinc longæva tibi lento sub flore senectus
Vernat, et Æsonios lucratur vivida fusos ;
Nondum deciduos servans tibi frontis honores,
Ingeniûmque vigens, et adultum mentis acumen.
O mihi si mea sors talem concedat amicum,
Phœbæos decorâsse viros qui tam benè nôrit,
Siquandò indigenas revocabo in carmina reges,
Arturûmque etiam sub terris bella moventem !
Aut dicam invictæ sociali fœdere mensæ
Magnanimos heroas ; et, O modo spiritus adsit,
Frangam Saxonicas Britonum sub Marte phalanges !

Tandem ubi non tacitæ permensus tempora vitæ,
 Annorūmque satur, cineri sua jura relinquam,
 Ille mihi lecto madidis astartet ocellis,
 Astanti sat erit si dicam, sim tibi curæ ;
 Ille meos artus, liventi morte solutos,
 Curaret parvâ componi mollitèr urnâ :
 Forsitan et nostros ducat de marmore vultus,
 Nectens aut Paphiâ myrti aut Parnasside lauri
 Fronde comas, at ego securâ pace quiescam.
 Tum quoque, si qua fides, si præmia certa bonorum,
 Ipse ego cælicolūm semotus in æthera divūm,
 Quò labor et mens pura vehunt, atque ignea virtus,
 Secreti hæc aliquâ mundi de parte videbo,
 Quantum fata sinunt ; et, totâ mente serenum
 Ridens, purpureo suffundar lumine vultus,
 Et simul æthereo plaudam mihi lætus Olympo.

EPITAPHIUM DAMONIS.

ARGUMENTUM.

Thyrsis et Damon, ejusdem vicinæ pastores, eadem studia sequuti, à pueritia amici erant, ut qui plurimū. Thyrsis animi causâ profectus peregrè de obitu Damonis nuncium accepit. Demū postea reversus, et rem ita esse comperto, se, suamque solitudinem hoc carmine deplorat. Damonis autem sub personâ hic intelligitur Carolus Deodatus ex urbe Hetruriæ Lucæ paterno genere oriundus, cætera Anglus ; ingenio, doctrinâ, clarissimisque cæteris virtutibus, dum viveret, juvenis egregius.¹

HIMERIDES nymphæ (nam vos et Daphnin, et Hylan, Et plorata diu meministis fata Bionis),

¹ Charles Deodate's father, Theodore, was born at Geneva, of an Italian family, in 1574. He came young into England, where he married an English lady of good birth and fortune. He was a doctor in physic ; and, in 1609, appears to have been physician to prince Henry, and the princess Elizabeth, afterwards queen of Bohemia.

Dicite Sicelicum Thamesina per oppida carmen :
 Quas miser effudit voces, quæ murmura Thyrsis,
 Et quibus assiduis exercuit antra querelis,
 Fluminâque, fontésque vagos, nemorúmque recessus ;
 Dum sibi præreptum queritur Damona, neque altam
 Luctibus exemit noctem, loca sola pererrans.
 Et jam bis viridi surgebat culmus aristâ,
 Et totidem flavas numerabant horrea messes,
 Ex quo summa dies tulerat Damona sub umbras,
 Nec dum aderat Thyrsis ; pastorem scilicet illum
 Dulcis amor Musæ Thuscâ retinebat in urbe :
 Ast ubi mens expleta domum, pecorisque relictî
 Cura vocat, simul assetuâ seditque sub ulmo,
 Tum verò amissum tum denique sentit amicum,
 Cœpit et immensum sic exonerare dolorem.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.
 Hei mihi ! quæ terris, quæ dicam numina cœlo,
 Postquam te immiti rapuerunt funere, Damon !
 Siccine nos linquis, tua sic sine nomine virtus
 Ibit, et obscuris numero sociabitur umbris ?
 At non ille, animas virgâ qui dividit aureâ,
 Ista velit, dignúmque tui te ducat in agmen,
 Ignavúmque procul pecus arceat omne silentium.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.
 Quicquid erit, certè nisi me lupo ante videbit,
 Indeplorato non comminuere sepulchro,
 Constabitque tuus tibi honos, longúmque vigebit
 Inter pastores : Illi tibi vota secundo
 Solvere post Daphnin, post Daphnin dicere laudes,
 Gaudebunt, dum rura Pales, dum Faunus, amabit :
 Si quid id est, priscâque fidem coluisse, piúmque,
 Palladiâque artes, sociúmque habuisse canorum.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.
 Hæc tibi certa manent, tibi erunt hæc præmia, Damon ;

At mihi quid tandem fiet modò? quis mihi fidus
Hærebit lateri comes, ut tu sæpe solebas
Frigoribus duris, et per loca foeta pruinis,
Aut rapido sub sole, siti morientibus herbis?
Sive opus in magnos fuit eminùs ire leones,
Aut avidos terrere lupos præsepibus altis;
Quis fando sopire diem, cantúque, solebit?

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.
Pectora cui credam? quis me lenire docebit
Mordaces curas, quis longam fallere noctem
Dulcibus alloquiis, grato cùm sibilat igni
Molle pyrum, et nucibus strepitat focus et malus Auster
Miscet cuncta foris, et desuper intonat ulmo?

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.
Aut æstate, dies medio dum vertitur axe,
Cùm Pan æsculeâ somnum capit abditus umbrâ,
Et repetunt sub aquis sibi nota sedilia nymphæ,
Pastorésque latent, stertit sub sepe colonus;
Quis mihi blanditiásque tuas, quis tum mihi risus,
Cecropiósque sales referet, cultosque lepores?

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.
At jam solus agros, jam pascua solus oberro,
Sicubi ramosæ densantur vallibus umbræ;
Híc serum expecto; supra caput imber et Eurus
Triste sonant, fractæque agitata crepuscula silvæ.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.
Heu, quam culta mihi priùs arva procacibus herbis
Involvuntur, et ipsa situ seges alta fatiscit!
Innuba neglecto marcescit et uva racemo,
Nec myrteta juvant; ovium quoque tædet, at illæ
Mcerent, in'que suum convertunt ora magistrum.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.
Tityrus ad corylos vocat, Alphesibœus ad ornos,
Ad salices Aegon, ad flumina pulcher Amyntas;

“ Hic gelidi fontes, hic illita gramina musco,
Hic Zephyri, hic placidas interstrepit arbutus undas :”
Ista canunt surdo, frutices ego nactus, abibam.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.
Mopsus ad hæc, nam me redeuntem forte notarat,
(Et callebat avium linguas, et sidera Mopsus),
“ Thyrsi, quid hoc ?” dixit, “ quæ te coquit improbabilis ?
Aut te perdit amor, aut te malè fascinat astrum ;
Saturni grave sæpe fuit pastoribus astrum,
Intimæque obliquo figit præcordia plumbo.”

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.
Mirantur nymphæ, et “ quid te, Thyrsi, futurum est ?
Quid tibi vis ?” aiunt ; “ non hæc solet esse juventæ
Nubila frons, oculique truces, vultusque severi ;
Illa choros, lusúsque leves, et semper amorem
Jure petit ; bis ille miser qui serus amavit.”

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.
Venit Hyas, Dryopéque, et filia Baucidis Aegle,
Docta modos, citharæque sciens, sed perdita fastu ;
Venit Idumanii Chloris vicina fluenti ;
Nil me blanditiæ, nil me solantia verba,
Nil me, si quid adest, movet, aut spes ulla futuri.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.
Hei mihi ! quam similes ludunt per prata juvenci,
Omnes unanimi secum sibi lege sodales !
Nec magis hunc alio quisquam secernit amicum
De grege ; sic densi veniunt ad pabula thoes,
In'que vicem hirsuti paribus junguntur onagri :
Lex eadem pelagi ; deserto in littore Proteus
Agmina Phocarum numerat, vilisque volucrum
Passer habet semper quicum sit, et omnia circum
Farra libens volitet, serò sua tecta revisens ;
Quem si sors letho objecit, seu milvus adunco
Fata tulit rostro, seu stravit arundine fossor,
Protinùs ille alium socio petit inde volatu.

Nos durum genus, et diris exercita fatis
 Gens homines, aliena animis, et pectore discors ;
 Vix sibi quisque parem de millibus invenit unum ;
 Aut si sors dederit tandè non aspera votis,
 Illum inopina dies, quâ non speraveris horâ,
 Surripit æternum linquens in sæcula damnum.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.
 Heu quis me ignotas traxit vagus error in oras
 Ire per aëreas rupes, Alpémque nivosam !
 Ecquid erat tanti Romam vidisse sepultam,
 (Quamvis illa foret, qualem dum viseret olim,
 Tityrus ipse suas et oves et rura reliquit ;)
 Ut te tam dulci possem caruisse sodale !
 Possem tot maria alta, tot interponere montes,
 Tot silvas, tot saxa tibi, fluviósque sonantes !
 Ah certè extremùm licuisset tangere dextram,
 Et benè compositos placidè morientis ocellos,
 Et dixisse, "Vale, nostrî memor ibis ad astra."

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.
 Quamquam etiam vestrî nunquam meminisse pigebit,
 Pastores Thusci, Musis operata juvenus,
 Hic Charis, atque Lepos ; et Thuscus tu quoque Damon,
 Antiquâ genus unde petis Lucumonis ab urbe.
 O ego quantus eram, gelidi cùm stratus ad Arni
 Murmura, populeúmque nemus, quâ mollior herba,
 Carpere nunc violas, nunc summas carpere myrtos,
 Et potui Lycidæ certantem audire Menalcam !
 Ipse etiam tentare ausus sum ; nec, puto, multùm
 Displicui ; nam stant et apud me, munera vestra,
 Fiscellæ, calathique, et cerea vincla cicutæ :
 Quin et nostra suas docuerunt nomina fagos
 Et Datis,¹ et Francinus, erant et vocibus ambo
 Et studiis noti, Lydorum sanguinis ambo.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.
 Hæc mihi tum læto dictabat roscida luna,
 Dum solus teneros claudebam cratibus hædos.
 Ah quoties dixi, cùm te cinis ater habebat,
 Nunc canit, aut lepori nunc tendit retia Damon,
 Vimina nunc texit, varios sibi quod sit in usus !
 Et quæ tum facili sperabam mente futura
 Arripui voto levis, et præsentia finxi ;
 “ Heus bone ! numquid agis ? nisi te quid fortè retardat,
 Imus ? et argutâ paulùm recubamus in umbrâ,
 Aut ad aquas Colni, aut ubi jugera Cassibelauni ?
 Tu mihi percurres medicos, tua gramina, succos,
 Helleborúmque, humilésque crocos, foliúmque hyacinthi,
 Quasque habet ista palus herbas, artésque medentùm.”
 Ah pereant herbæ, pereant artésque medentùm,
 Gramina, postquam ipsi nil profecere magistro !
 Ipse etiam, nam nescio quid mihi grande sonabat
 Fistula, ab undecimâ jam lux est altera nocte,
 Et tum fortè novis admôram labra cicutis,
 Dissiluere tamen ruptâ compage, nec ultra
 Ferre graves potuere sonos : dubito quoque ne sim
 Turgidulus, tamen et referam ; vos cedite, silvæ.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.
 Ipse ego Dardanias Rutupina per æquora puppes
 Dicam, et Pandrasidos regnum vetus Inogeniæ,
 Brennúmque Arviragúmque duces, priscúmque Belinum,
 Et tandem Armoricos Britonum sub lege colonos ;
 Tum gravidam Arturo, fatali fraude, Iögernen,
 Mendaces vultus, assumptâque Gorlôis arma,
 Merlini dolus. O mihi tum si vita supersit,
 Tu procul annosâ pendebis, fistula, pinu,
 Multùm oblita mihi ; aut patriis mutata Camœnis
 Brittonicum strides, quid enim ? omnia non licet uni,
 Non sperâsse uni licet omnia, mî satis ampla

Merces, et mihi grande decus (sim ignotus in ævum
 Tum licèt, externo penitùsque inglorius orbi),
 Si me flava comas legat Usa, et potor Alauni,
 Vorticibùsque frequens Abra, et nemus omne Treantæ,
 Et Thamesis meus ante omnes, et fusca metallis
 Tamara, et extremis me discant Orcades undis.

Ite domum impasti, domino jam non vacat, agni.
 Hæc tibi servabam lentâ sub cortice lauri,
 Hæc, et plura simul ; tum quæ mihi pocula Mansus,
 Mansus, Chalcidicæ non ultima gloria ripæ,
 Bina dedit, mirum artis opus, mirandus et ipse,
 Et circum gemino cælaverat argumento :
 In medio rubri maris unda, et odoriferum ver,
 Littora longa Arabum, et sudantes balsama silvæ,
 Has inter Phoenix, divina avis, unica terris,
 Cæruleùm fulgens diversicoloribus alis,
 Auroram vitreis surgentem respicit undis ;
 Parte aliâ polus omnipatens, et magnus Olympus :
 Quis putet ? hîc quoque Amor, pictæque in nube pharetræ,
 Arma corusca faces, et spicula tincta pyropo ;
 Nec tenues animas, pectùsque ignobile vulgi,
 Hinc ferit ; at, circum flammantia lumina torquens,
 Semper in erectum spargit sua tela per orbes
 Impiger, et pronos nunquam collimat ad ictus :
 Hinc mentes ardere sacræ, formæque deorum.

Tu quoque in his, nec me fallit spes lubrica, Damon,
 Tu quoque in his certè es, nam quòd tua dulcis abiret
 Sanctâque simplicitas, nam quòd tua candida virtus ?
 Nec te Lethæo fas quæsivisse sub orco,
 Nec tibi conveniunt lacrymæ, nec flebimus ultra :
 Ite procul, lacrymæ ; purum colit æthera Damon,
 Æthera purus habet, pluvium pede reppulit arcum ;
 Heroùmque animas inter, divósque perennes,
 Æthereos haurit latices, et gaudia potat

Ore sacro. Quin tu, cœli post jura recepta,
 Dexter ades, placidusque fave quicumque vocaris,
 Seu tu noster eris Damon, sive æquior audis
 Diodatus, quo te divino nomine cuncti
 Cœlicolæ nôrint, silvisque vocabere Damon.
 Quodd tibi purpureus pudor, et sine labe juvenus
 Grata fuit, quodd nulla tori libata voluptas,
 En etiam tibi virginei servantur honores ;
 Ipse caput nitidum cinctus rutilante coronâ,
 Lætâque frondentis gestans umbracula palmæ,
 Æternùm perages immortales hymenæos ;
 Cantus ubi, choreisque furit lyra mista beatis,
 Festa Sionæo bacchantur et Orgia thyrsos.

AD JOANNEM ROUSIUM,

OXONIENSIS ACADEMIÆ BIBLIOTHECARIUM.¹

De libro Poematum amisso, quem ille sibi denuò mitti postulabat, ut cum aliis nostris in Bibilothecâ publicâ reponeret, Ode.
 Ode tribus constat Strophis, totidemque Antistrophis, unâ demum Epodo clausis ; quas, tametsi omnes nec versuum numero, nec certis ubique colis exactè respondeant, itâ tamen secuimus, commodè legendi potius, quàm ad antiquos concinendi modos rationem spectantes. Alioquin hoc genus rectiùs fortassè dici monostrophicum debuerat. Metra partim sunt κατὰ σχῆσιν, partim ἀπολελυμένα. Phaleucia quæ sunt, Spondæum tertio loco bis admittunt, quod idem in secundo loco Catullus ad libitum fecit.

STROPHE I.

GEMELLE cultu simplici gaudens liber,

Munditiéque nitens non operosâ !
 Quem manus attulit
 Juvenilis olim,
 Sedula tamèn haud nimii poetæ ;
 Dum vagus Ausonias nunc per umbras,
 Nunc Britannica per vireta lusit,
 Insons populi, barbitóque devius
 Indulsit patri, mox itidem pectine Daunio
 Longinquum intonuit melos
 Vicinis, et humum vix tetigit pede :

ANTISTROPHE.

 Mollique luxu degener otium),
 Tollat nefandos civium tumultus,
 Almáque revocet studia sanctus,
 Et relegatas sine sede Musas
 Jam penè totis finibus Angligenâm ;

Immundásque volucres,
Unguibus imminentes,
Figat Apollineâ pharetrâ,
Phineámque abigat pestem procul amne Pegasëo ?

ANTISTROPHE.

Quin tu, libelle, nuntii licèt malâ
Fide, vel oscitantia,
Semel erraveris agmine fratrum,
Seu quis te teneat specus,
Seu qua te latebra, forsán unde vili
Callo tereris institoris insulsi,
Lætare felix : en iterum tibi
Spes nova fulget, posse profundam
Fugere Lethen, vehique superam
In Jovis aulam, remige pennâ :

STROPHE III.

Nam te Roüsius sui
Optat peculi, numeróque justo
Sibi pollicitum queritur abesse ;
Rogátque venias ille, cujus inclyta
Sunt data virûm monumenta curæ :
Téque adytis etiam sacris
Voluit reponi, quibus et ipse præsidet,
Æternorum operum custos fidelis ;
Quæstórque gazæ nobilioris,
Quàm cui præfuit Iön,
Clarus Erechtheides,
Opulenta dei per templa parentis,
Fulvósque tripodas, donáque Delphica,
Iön, Actæâ genitus Creusâ.

ANTISTROPHE.

Ergo, tu visere lucos
 Musarum ibis amœnos ;
 Diâmq; Phœbi rursus ibis in domum,
 Oxoniâ quam valle colit,
 Delo posthabitâ,
 Bifidôque Parnassi jugo :
 Ibis honestus,
 Postquam egregiam tu quoque sortem
 Nactus abis, dextri prece sollicitatus amici.
 Illic legeris inter alta nomina
 Authorum, Graiæ simul et Latinæ
 Antiqua gentis lumina, et verum decus.

EPODOS.

Vos tandèm, haud vacui mei labores,
 Quicquid hoc sterile fudit ingenium,
 Jam serò placidam sperare jubeo
 Perfunctam invidiâ requiem, sedésque beatas,
 Quas bonus Hermes,
 Et tutela dabit solers Roüsi ;
 Quò neque lingua procax vulgi penetrabit, atque longè
 Turba legentûm prava facesset :
 At ultimi nepotes,
 Et cordatior ætas,
 Judicia rebus æquiora forsitan
 Adhibebit, integro sinu.
 Tum, livore sepulto,
 Si quid meremur sana posteritas sciet,
 Roüsio favente.

THE END.
